IDC DEBATES CONSTITUTION

by Susan Roth

The meeting of the Inter-Dormitory Council on Tuesday night lasted from 9:30 to midnight with the schedule of business divided into separate committee meetings, a constitutional meeting and a general meeting.

Last weeks constitutional amendment was a continuation of last week's session. According to Chairperson Leora Cope, the IDC is now working mostly on the preamble of its constitution, trying to "define its jurisdiction and power." The motions discussed on Tuesday were whether the entire Tufts resident community should vote on the IDC's constitution, and whether IDC representatives should be elected by dorm governments or by dorm residents at large. The former was decided against, as was the latter. Further debate and discussion was postponed until nest week's meeting after the meetings of committees.

During the general IDC meeting, some major issues were brought up. Petitions for renaming Latin Way dorm Bob Winn Hall have been circulated for two weeks now and the IDC has over 1000 signatures, but IDC representative Sorokoff said, "We know we will not get Latin Way because there is too much money involved," and Cope stated that "President Mayer said no officially about Latin Way."

Another issue raised was board and tuition equalization, where the Dining Halls enter into agreement with the administration and some money from meal plans goes into the tuition cost making the percentage of raise in price of both about even at 14 or 15 percent. Bob Perry explained that "in real terms, tuition went up 19 percent last year, and that board costs really only go up 3 or 4 percent each year, as opposed to the 14 percent reported raise. Perry felt emphatically that this means students living on campus paying for board and tuition are "supporting commuting students' tuition."

A question was raised if dorms can make profits from the laundry machines. It was learned that the machines are privately owned,

Brune Re-elected, Expresses "Frustration" Towards Tufts

by Jack Barrette

Eugene C. Brune, Somerville's incumbent mayoral candidate, was re-elected in Tuesday's local elections. In an interview, Mayor Brune asserted that, "Tufts, especially the Board of Trustees, just hasn't been listening to the needs of the Medford/Somerville communities. It's become a sort of tradition for Tufts to be uninvolved with the surrounding towns, and I'm finding it harder and harder to defend the university to my people."

Tufts educational status frees the university from any tax obligations and a trustee policy has stated definitively that no "in-lieu-of-tax" payments will be made to Medford or to Somerville. "I think the trustees are foolish," said Brune, "you can't ask these cities to help and then do nothing in return. Since Tufts takes up a large piece of tax-free land, it should be sensitive to community needs and provide as many services as possible."

Brune felt that "the services at this time are too little in the wrong places. We certainly appreciate the art scholarships that we do get, but most of the people in Medford don't relate to that sort of thing. You've got to take into account that this is a mostly blue-collar area."

"We can't always agree on everything, and we've got alot to iron out yet. President Mayer has been helpful, and I think we get along well. But he's got a boss, too, and it's his bosses (the trustees) that seem to be out of touch with us." President Mayer said that he is "delighted" with Brune's re-election and is "looking forward to working with the mayor in the future."

Brune received 12,859 votes to his opponent Michael E. Capuano's 8,628.

Letters to the Editor

A Reply From Dining Services

To the Editor:

As a Student Manager with Dining Services, I feel it is necessary to refute some misleading information presented by Seth Godin in Monday's Letter to the Editor. It is unfortunate that Mr. Godin did not thoroughly research Dining Services before submitting his letter; if he had, he would have composed a more accurate critique.

Mr. Godin's first mistake was in questioning why quiche with bacon is served virtually every Sunday. This particular quiche is only one of several quiches, including Swiss de Alps and Vegetable, offered when quiche is served three times during a six week menu cycle. As for the fried chicken and stuffed shells always being served together every six weeks (two or three times each semester) is too boring to his palate, then he must possess unusually diverse eating habits. While it ios true that some food items are served together more than once during the menu cycle, given the degree of difficulty in compiling an optimally varied menu, I feel that the manager in charge does a very commendable job. Do perhaps commendable job. Do you want more variety? Mr. Godin makes a valid request for perhaps adding pancakes to the brunch menus. However, omelets and fried eggs are also popular entreés and each require the use of all available grill space. In addition, the menu cycle could conceivably be expanded with the addition of more entreés, but these are not just changes, they cost money --a lot more money and as he said, we're paying for it.

Dining Services' biggest problem is not tradition, rather the difficul-

Soccer's Spirits Rise After Game With Powerhouse BU

by John Gaffney

"We're not the Bad News Bears, we're the Bad Luck Bears." That's how coach Jerry Clinton appraised the Tufts men's soccer team's performance against powerful Boston University and Amherst teams last week. Tufts lost to B.U. 2-0 and to Amherst 3-1.

In Thursday's B.U. game the Jumbos faced a Division I soccer superpower with some of the best players in New England. But Tufts "came to challenge" and showed that they're "not far below...the Division I level," according to coach Clinton. B.U. scored first on a two-on-one situation at 10 minutes into the first half. But solid Jumbo defense thwarted B.U. efforts for the rest of the half. The Jumbo back line of Troy Chapman, Joe Palomba, and Tim Brownell turned in solid performances as did goalie Bryan Bachner. In the second half, B.U.'s only score came when a taller B.U. opponent out-headed a corner kick past a freshman halfback.

But unlike previous games the Jumbos were able to maintain a steady level of play after their opponent's second goal. Once again, though, Tufts offensive efforts were limited by their decimated front line. Many players were out or playing at half speed due to injuries.

Clinton sees the B.U. game as "a feather in our cap" because it "picked up our spirit."

Saturday, the Jumbos went up against Amherst, sixth in New England Division III, and 5-1-1. Tufts got off to a shaky start with backs making elementary mistakes, but after Tufts settled down, they were able to control and clear the ball out. Tufts back line dominated the Lord Jeff's "hotshot" front line, and goalie Bryan Bachner punched out throw-ins and corner kicks. At the half, the score was 0-0. The second half was marked by "silly goals," said coach Clinton. Tufts "was growing in our game," he asserted.

But early in the half, the Lord Jeffs obtained an indirect kick on a tripping call, and crossed the ball over to a running player who booted in the ball for the score. Then at seven minutes into the half, Bachner deflected the "best shot of the game into the air, only to have it fly over behind his head and into the goal. Amherst's last goal came on a fluke with ten minutes to go. A Tufts player kicked the ball off a Tufts fullback and the ball bounced into the goal. In the last ten minutes, Tufts gained several breakaways, but they were called back by the referee. Final-

Mouris' Animated Films: Not For Children Only

by Ona Dike

If you think animation is only for children then you had better think again. Taking place at the Off the Wall Cinema, November 10-16 (Volume I) and November 14-19 (Volume II) are a series of realistic animated films dealing with adult material encompassing the complete works of independent filmmakers Frank and Caroline Mouris.

The acclaimed Oscar winning "Frank film" established the reputation of Frank Mouris in 1973 depicting his life story starting from his undergraduate days at college to the period when he decided to become a filmmaker.

"Frank Film" brings forth a great deal of imagination. Creatively put together as a collage made up of magazine cuttings accompanied by Frank Mourise's voice describing the meaning of the images on the screen.

His other films include "Screentest" which explores the lives of nine men with strange sexual tendencies: occassionally dressing up in women clothes in order to stress their individuality. This film shows how the Mouris' have a "fascination with rapid change and individual which meets a perfect subject for animated documentary."

The films Coney Island are wonderful down to earth portrayals of the lifestyle of ordinary people in Coney Island the approach here is simple and honest and there is no attempt to add glamour to the image being shown. There is also another film on Coney Island, "Whisper and Letters" to complete the triology.

The other films range in subject matter with titles like "L.A., L.A., Making it in L.A." and "Your Not Pretty, But Your Mine" and "Chemical Architectures."

ties of working within a restrictive budget, even tighter than in past years, in order to maintain the "profit margin" clearly defined by the Trustees. We are not scared to try new ideas; many suggestions have been implemented in the past and some have worked. Why not put the cups out in the dining area in Carmichael? This has been tried and they certainly were made more accessible; so accessible in fact, that the theft rate dramatically increased, forcing the managers to move the cups back to the serving line.

Have you ever wondered why there's so little silverware in the dining halls? The answer is right in your neighbor's room , and probably in yours as well. Plasticware is always available on request in all the dining halls because we simply cannot afford to provide extra silver for a great number of students both on and off campus. But that is just what is happening. However, if that's what you want , then Mr. Godin is correct; we are paying for it, we can have it, and we'll pay even more money and still end up without the additional variety some of us seem to be seeking.

Want to do something about Dining Services? Think about the silverware currently being stolen at a rate of over $220 per day. That money could be used to reduce Mr. Godin's perceived lack of variety in the menus. Your constructive comments are always welcome in the suggestion boxes in all dining halls.
