

PUBLICATIONS BY THE FLETCHER COMMUNITY —

The Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, established in 1933, is the oldest school of international affairs in the United States devoted exclusively to graduate study. The fundamental mission of The Fletcher School is to provide high quality and multidisciplinary teaching and research in the fields of law, diplomacy, economics, history, politics, business and regional studies. As a service to our readership, and in an effort to provide a wider audience for the innovative work being done by our faculty, students and recent graduates, The Fletcher Forum has decided to include a listing of recent publications by the Fletcher community. The following is a partial listing:

Sugata Bose, Professor of Diplomacy is the author, along with Ayesha Jalal, of Modern South Asia: History, Culture, Political Economy, published by Routledge, 1998. He is also the author of "Instruments and Idioms of Colonial and National Development: India's Historical Experience in Comparative Perspective" in International Development and the Social Sciences, published by University of California Press, 1998.

Hurst Hannum, Professor of International Law, is the author of "A Principled Response to Ethnic Self-Determination Claims" in Foreign Affairs, March/April 1998. He also wrote an op-ed piece on the Kosovo situation which appeared in the Boston Globe, March 1998.

William Hayden, a student at The Fletcher School, is the author of "Internally Displaced Persons in the Russian Federation and Transcaucasus," in Global Internally Displaced Survey, 1997, Norwegian Refugee Council, 1998.

E. Rebecca Kreis, a joint Fletcher School/Columbia Law School student, is the author of "A Comparative Analysis of the Aviation Network Within the European Community and the Ad-Hoc Network Between the U.S. and Central America" in Transportation Law Journal, Spring/Summer 1997.

Matthew A. Levitt, a current Ph.D. student at The Fletcher School is author of "The Taliban, Islam, and Women's Rights in the Muslim World" in The Fletcher Forum, Winter/Spring 1998. He also wrote "Kilometer 101: Oasis or Mirage? An Analysis of Third-Party Self-Interest in International Mediation" in Mediation Quarterly, Winter 1998.

Lisa M. Lynch, William L. Clayton Professor of International Economic Affairs, is the author of "Do Investments in Education and Training Matter?" in Perspectives on Work, Volume 1:3, 1998; "Wage Inequality and Long-Term Unemployment: Is Human Capital the Answer?" in Swedish Economic Policy Review, Spring 1998 and "Training and Education Programs in the U.S." in Labor Market Policy and Job Creation: Swedish and U.S. Experiences, published by the USIA Regional Program Office, Stockholm, 1997. She also co-wrote, with Sandra Black, "The New Workplace: What Does It Mean for Employers?" in Industrial Relations Research Association Papers and Proceedings, January 1998. In addition, Professor Lynch gave the keynote address to the European Association of Labor Economists entitled, "Do Investments in Education and Training Matter?" in Aarhus, Denmark, September 1997.

Janot Mendler, a student at The Fletcher School, is the author of Cultivating a Sustainable Agriculture Convention – Sowing Seeds for a 'Deep Green' Revolution forthcoming from The Program on Negotiation, Harvard Law School.

Anthony Pereira, Adjunct Assistant Professor of International Politics, wrote "Persecution and Farce: The Origins and Transformation of Brazil's Political Trials" in Latin American Research Review, Vol. 33:1, 1998. He is also the author of a forthcoming article, "An Ugly Democracy? Citizenship, Coercion and Violence in Brazil" in Evaluating Brazilian Democracy from the University of Pittsburgh Press. Professor Perreira also co-wrote, with Sanjay Reddy, "The Role and Reform of the State," a forthcoming United Nations Development Program working paper.

Ron Rosenberg, a student at The Fletcher School, is the co-author with Deborah Ander and Bahar Khoshnoudi of "Expedited Removal: Applying the Credible Fear Standard" in Bender's Immigration Bulletin.

Joel P. Trachtman, Associate Professor of International Law, is the author of "Accounting Standards and Trade Disciplines: Irreconcilable Differences?" in the Journal of World Trade, Vol. 31, 1997; "The Theory of the Firm and the Theory of the International Economic Organization: Toward Comparative Institutional Analysis in Northwestern Journal of International Law and Business, Vol. 17, 1997; "The International Economic Law Revolution" in University of Pennsylvania Journal of International Economic Law, Vol. 17, 1997 and "Externalities and Extraterritoriality: The Law and Economics of Prescriptive Jurisdiction" a chapter in Economic Dimensions in International Law, Cambridge University Press, 1997. He is also the co-author, with J.H.H. Weiler of "European Constitutionalism and Its Discontents" in Northwestern Journal of International Law and Business, 1997.

Anthony Wanis-St. John, a PhD candidate at The Fletcher School is the author of "The National Security Council: Tool of Presidential Crisis Management" in Journal of Public and International Affairs, Vol. 9:1, 1998; "Advice to Princes in the Global Age: Review Essay of Power Sharing and International Mediation in Ethnic Conflicts, by T. Sisk, and Elusive Peace, by I.W. Zartman" in The Fletcher Forum of World Affairs, Vol. 21:2, 1997; "Third Party Mediation Between India and Pakistan: A Modest Proposal" in International Peacekeeping, Vol. 4:4, 1997 and "Commercial Alternate Dispute Resolution in Bolivia" a case study in Alternative Dispute Resolution Programs: A Guide for USAID, December 1997. He is also the co-author with Michael Maturo, Kate Mahoney, David Fairman, and Francisco Ingouville of "Guatemala: From Truce to Peace," a simulation published by the Program on Negotiation Clearinghouse, Harvard Law School.