If we weren't bias to Color, we would respect all mother's and protect our brothers...

So many opinions and you can't help but to notice all the prejudice. If you have that then you're judged as this. All this "RACE" shit is making me sick, like the slim chance for some small innocent kid.

If we don't kiss ass and stand up. If we demand respect and never give up, will we see success and stay relevant, or will the great depression be the evidence?

It seems like the people of substance never win. Then theres those we see as heaven sent, doing the minimum to help but they really never get us in. Then you got "THE REBEL" whose willing to go against them. But his own people set it up, so they kill him.

Now we're back to square one, asking questions again. "Me" with no bias, I'm just in search to find TRUTH and spread it for a better end. So here I sit writing this-story with the pen!

"I AM"
