

THE FLETCHER BULLETIN

THE FLETCHER SCHOOL

TUFTS UNIVERSITY

This Bulletin contains descriptions for courses offered at The Fletcher School for the 2009-2010 academic year only; however, they are typical of the courses offered every year. Biographies are also provided for our faculty, both those who have full time appointments and those with part-time appointments. These associated faculty are appointed each year to add additional breadth and depth to our curricular offerings. In addition to the courses offered at Fletcher, students are eligible to cross-register in other graduate schools/departments of Tufts University and Harvard. It should be noted that students may be denied admission to another school's course due to restrictions in class size or other school policy. Enrolled students should contact the Registrar of the Fletcher School for policies and procedures. Prospective students should refer to the Catalog and Application Bulletin for additional information. Course requirements for our field of study are detailed on pages 24-33. Beginning in the fall 2006 semester, new breadth requirements for all MALD students was established. Information about this new requirement can be found on pages 36-37. The Fletcher School reserves the right to change, at any time, any of the information provided in this Bulletin, including adding and dropping courses. Changes will be announced and posted by the Registrar of the Fletcher School at the beginning of each semester.

COURSE DESCRIPTIONS

DIVISION OF INTERNATIONAL LAW AND ORGANIZATIONS

ILO L200: THE INTERNATIONAL LEGAL ORDER

This introductory course deals with structural aspects of the international legal system, including the jurisprudence of international law and differing cultural and philosophical perspectives; the history of the international legal system; customary international law; treaty law; statehood and recognition; the United Nations and international organizations; and the relationship of the international legal system to domestic legal systems, using the United States as a primary example. Fall semester. Michael Glennon

ILO L201: PUBLIC INTERNATIONAL LAW

This survey course provides an overview of the international legal system's principal sub-regimes, including those relating to international dispute resolution, jurisdiction and immunities, human rights, the use of force and terrorism, the law of war, criminal responsibility, arms control, the environment, and the relationship of these sub-regimes to domestic legal systems, using the United States as a primary example. Open to students who have completed ILO L200 or its equivalent. Spring semester. Michael Glennon

ILO L207: SEMINAR ON INTERNATIONAL POLITICS AND INTERNATIONAL LAW

International politics and international law are clearly intertwined. Policy professionals often are required to use international legal discourse, and to establish international legal rules and organizations in order to achieve their goals. At the same time, international lawyers must consider political realities in crafting rules that will be respected and enforced. This seminar is suitable for students who already have some background in international politics and international law. Also listed as DHP P207. Not offered 2009-2010. Joel Trachtman and Daniel Drezner

ILO L209: INTERNATIONAL TREATY BEHAVIOR: A PERSPECTIVE ON GLOBALIZATION

This seminar examines treaty behavior over a broad spectrum of subject areas—including security, environment, trade and human rights. Approaches to international agreements affect economic, security and foreign policy in this interdependent world. The seminar examines IL and IR theories of compliance. It explores exceptionalism in treaty behavior—American and other nations. The seminar offers students the opportunity to do research in depth on one or more treaties, or the behavior of a given nation or group of nation under several treaties. Prior law courses helpful but not required. Fall semester. Antonia Chayes

ILO L210: INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS LAW

An introductory survey of international human rights law and procedures, including detailed examination of global, regional, and national institutions to protect human rights. The course traces the development of contemporary concepts of human rights, including issues of universality, whether or not certain categories of rights have priority over others, and the means of creating and enforcing human rights law. The role of non-governmental organizations in fact-finding and publicizing human rights violations is also addressed. Fall semester. Hurst Hannum

ILO L211: SEMINAR ON CURRENT ISSUES IN HUMAN RIGHTS

This seminar analyzes in greater depth a limited number of issues that are of contemporary interest in the field of international human rights law. While specific topics vary, those addressed in recent years have included equality and non-discrimination; democracy; economic and social rights; international criminal law; business and human rights; and humanitarian intervention. Open to students who have completed ILO L210 or equivalent. Spring semester. Hurst Hannum

ILO L212: SEMINAR ON NATIONALISM, SELF-DETERMINATION AND MINORITY RIGHTS

This seminar explores the evolution of the concepts of self-determination and minority rights from the nineteenth century to the present. The focus is on changing legal norms, including interpretation of the principle of self-determination by the League of Nations and United Nations; protection of the rights of ethnic, religious, and linguistic minorities; and the articulation of the rights of indigenous peoples. The seminar requires a substantial research paper that analyzes a contemporary situation in which these issues are significant. Prerequisite: ILO L200, L210, or equivalent. Fall semester. Hurst Hannum

ILO L213: INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL LAW

Word Count: This seminar will expose students to international criminal law re: genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes, torture, and terrorism. They will also study the International Criminal Court (ICC), the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY), the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR), and the hybrid tribunals in Sierra Leone, Cambodia, Bosnia, East Timor and Kosovo. The seminar begins with an historical overview since Nuremberg followed by analysis of the legal instruments of these tribunals and their major cases. The seminar ends with domestic application in selected countries emphasizing those exercising universal jurisdiction. Fall semester. Louis Aucoin

ILO L214: TRANSITIONAL JUSTICE

This seminar deals with the choices facing countries attempting to establish accountability for past abuses of human rights in the aftermath of mass atrocities. Students will consider the philosophical and moral issues associated with this subject and analyze the mechanisms available for post conflict justice including international ad hoc criminal tribunals, the International Criminal Court, the hybrid tribunals in Sierra Leone and East Timor, and approaches like Truth and Reconciliation Commissions and mechanisms, including the gacaca process in Rwanda, which incorporate local custom. Students will also study the reconstruction of the justice system, examining non-criminal sanctions and considering the challenge of reconciliation in these contexts. Fall semester. Louis Aucoin

ILO L220: INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

This course provides an introduction to the theory and practice of international organizations (IOs). Its central theme is the interaction between international law and politics, illustrated through an in-depth examination of the United Nations and a secondary focus on selected regional organizations. After a number of classes on theory and cross-cutting institutional issues, the bulk of the course is devoted to the substantive work of IOs in three principal areas: peace and security, human rights, and sustainable development. It concludes by considering reform of IOs from the perspective of the 'democratic deficit'. The format of the course is primarily lectures and structured discussion. Spring Semester. Ian Johnstone

ILO L221: SEMINAR ON ACTORS IN GLOBAL GOVERNANCE

This seminar is designed to explore in a comparative mode various actors in global governance: global organizations, regional organizations, groupings of states, non-governmental organizations, private sector actors and networks. The first part of the course is devoted to theoretical, institutional and legal issues. Each student then develops and presents to the class an outline for a "Reform Report" on an organization of their choice, taking stock of its performance and offering a vision for the future. Based on feedback from the class, constituted as the 'senior management group' of the organization, the report is finalized and submitted as the major assignment for the course. Spring semester. Ian Johnstone

ILO L223: SEMINAR ON INTERNATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL LAW

This course addresses the nature, content and structure of international environmental law. The course commences with an introduction to international environmental problems, together with basic principles of international law and environmental regulation. Specific topics include global warming, stratospheric ozone depletion, and exports of hazardous substances. Other topics may include marine pollution, transboundary pollution, trade and environment, and development and environment. The course evaluates the role of international and non-governmental organizations; the interrelationship between international legal process and domestic law; and the negotiation, conclusion, and implementation of international environmental agreements. Fall semester. David Wirth

ILO L224: SEMINAR ON PEACE OPERATIONS

Enthusiasm for peacekeeping has fluctuated in recent years, from exuberance in the early 1990s to disillusion in the mid-90s, back to cautious enthusiasm at the end of the decade, followed by an unprecedented surge in UN and non-UN operations over the past several years. Combining a thematic and case study approach, the course begins with several sessions on the legal framework, functions of peace operations and doctrine. Select contemporary cases are then considered to draw out recurring themes and dilemmas, such as the protection of civilians and peace v. justice. The course concludes with a simulation exercise on a possible new operation. Fall semester. Ian Johnstone

ILO L230: INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS

This course provides an examination of private and public law aspects of international business transactions, including conflicts of law and foreign law issues. It examines the selection of the optimal business format for international operations, including branch, subsidiary, joint venture, technology license and distributorship; international commercial law, including sales contract, and commercial documents; international contracts and dispute resolution issues, including governing law, and choice of forum, force majeure, currency, and treaty issues; and the United States Foreign Corrupt Practices Act. Fall semester. John Burgess

ILO L232: SEMINAR ON INTERNATIONAL INVESTMENT LAW

This seminar examines the laws, policies, and legal institutions influencing cross-border investments, with special emphasis on emerging markets and developing nations. It studies the nature of international investment and multinational investors, the international legal framework for international investment with particular emphasis on rapidly evolving treaty law, such as bilateral investment treaties (BITs), NAFTA, and the Energy Charter Treaty, as well as arbitration and judicial decisions applying them. It also considers national regulatory frameworks for foreign investment, legal mechanisms for structuring, financing, and protecting projects, portfolio investment in emerging markets, and methods for settling investment disputes. Spring semester. Jeswald Salacuse

ILO L233: INTERNATIONAL FINANCIAL AND FISCAL LAW

This course is intended to introduce students to the legal and regulatory context of international finance. It covers selected domestic and international aspects of (i) corporate law relating to finance, (ii) bank financing and regulation, (iii) securities financing and market regulation and (iv) insolvency law. It also addresses the process of innovation in international financial law, with coverage of emerging market debt, swaps and other derivatives, privatizations, and securitization. These topics will be reviewed from the standpoint of domestic law of the United States and other selected jurisdictions, as well as from the standpoint of applicable international law and practice. Spring semester. John Burgess

ILO L234: INTERNATIONAL INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY LAW AND POLICY

This course will provide an introduction to basic principles of intellectual property law concepts, specifically patents, trademarks and copyrights. From there, the course will examine the impact of various international conventions and treaties on intellectual property rights. Particular attention will be paid to the protection of intellectual property rights in selected legal regimes; and to the competing interests of intellectual property owners in global commercial transactions. The rapid development and widespread adoption of Digital Technology and the Internet pose serious challenges to long accepted doctrines of copyright and trademark law, and these will also be addressed. Spring semester. Thomas Holt and Tara Clancy

ILO L237M: MERGERS AND ACQUISITIONS: AN INTERNATIONAL PERSPECTIVE

This module will review the structuring, negotiation and implementation of cross-border merger and acquisition transactions, taking into account applicable issues of international law and national practice. The module will discuss alternative forms of transaction structure and the underlying tax and legal considerations considered for choosing particular approaches. We will also analyze different forms of acquisition agreements, review the role and application of key transactional concepts, and analyze how they are addressed in the context of specific transactions. We will also review trends in deal terms drawing on recent North American, European and Asian transactions. One-half credit. Not offered 2009-2010. John Burgess

ILO L239M: CORPORATE GOVERNANCE IN INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS AND FINANCE

This module seminar explores business, financial and legal issues affecting corporate governance and management of risk, both in industrialized and developing countries. Students will examine the nature of the corporation, management roles and board responsibility, the role of regulatory authorities, as well as corporate culture, corporate social responsibility, and capital market development. The seminar will focus on policy implications, including wide-spread efforts to effect corporate governance reforms and set standards in the wake of corporate scandals and systemic risk. Also listed as EIB B239m. One-half credit. Spring semester. S. Donald Gonson

ILO L240: LEGAL AND INSTITUTIONAL ASPECTS OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE

This course examines the law of international trade in goods and services, focusing principally on the law of the World Trade Organization and its General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, as well as on the foreign trade law of the United States. This sector of international law includes specialized negotiation and dispute settlement processes, as well as particular types of rules, restraining national restrictions on trade. These rules address tariff and non-tariff barriers, discrimination, regionalism, anti-dumping duties, countervailing duties and safeguards measures. This course will pay particular attention to how this legal system manages various facets of globalization. Spring semester. Joel Trachtman

ILO L243: SEMINAR ON INTERNATIONAL LEGAL ASPECTS OF GLOBALIZATION

Globalization has economic, social, political, historical, cultural and legal dimensions. This seminar will focus on legal parameters of, and mechanisms for, globalization. This course will examine the relationship between efforts to promote international markets and the right to regulate, international regulatory competition, efforts to regulate international business at a global or regional level, judicial responses to globalization, and global constitutionalism. Students will have an opportunity to engage in research on legal aspects of globalization and to present their work in the seminar. This course is not suitable as a first course in international law. Not offered 2009-2010. Joel Trachtman

ILO L250: LAW AND DEVELOPMENT

This seminar examines the role of law and legal systems in the economic and social development of developing nations, emerging markets, and countries in transition. It explores how law may both inhibit and foster change and the ways that legal institutions may be organized to achieve national goals.

It first considers the nature of law, the nature of development, and the theoretical relationships of law to the development process. It then explores the links between law and development through case studies on land tenure, foreign investment, the environment, governance, constitutionalism, corruption, judicial reform, and the rule of law. Spring semester. Jeswald Salacuse

ILO L251: COMPARATIVE LEGAL SYSTEMS

This course covers the two principal legal traditions in the world—the common law and the civil law traditions with exposure to the Islamic tradition and European Union law as well. It is intended for diplomats, international civil servants, business executives, and lawyers. Students will study the historical evolution of the traditions in comparative perspective with emphasis on France and Germany in the civil law and on the United States and the United Kingdom in the common law. The methodology entails study of the underlying legal philosophies of these traditions through analysis of the sources of law, judicial process and judicial review and through learning constitutional law, contracts, and criminal and civil procedure. Spring semester. Louis Aucoin

ILO L252 RULE OF LAW IN POST CONFLICT SOCIETIES

This seminar studies methodologies used by international actors in promoting the rule of law post conflict. It focuses on eight aspects: constitutional development, code reform, legal drafting, judicial reform, accountability for past abuses, fighting corruption, democratic policing, and local custom. These are strategies for building the basic institutional framework strictly necessary for the maintenance of peace and security in the immediate aftermath of conflict. The seminar will therefore deal with the restoration/ reestablishment of the justice sector and only minimally with economic issues. It includes case studies of East Timor, Kosovo, South Africa, Cambodia, Rwanda, Iraq, and Afghanistan. Not offered 2009-2010. Louis Aucoin

ILO L260: THE LAW OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

The seminar offers an overview of the law and institutions of the European Union with historical perspective from the Treaty of Rome of 1957 through to the Treaty of Lisbon currently in negotiation. Also, students will learn the substantive law relating to the famous four freedoms: the freedom of goods, persons, services, and capital as well as selected substantive areas including competition law, trade law, and human rights. Study includes the primary treaty provisions and European norms (regulations, directives, and decisions) and major cases. Students will consider the supranational and intergovernmental aspects of the EU and will learn about the direct effect of the law in Member States. Spring semester. Louis Aucoin

ILO L262: FOREIGN RELATIONS AND NATIONAL SECURITY LAW

This seminar deals with the intersection of international law and United States constitutional law, focusing upon the separation of powers doctrine and the allocation of decision-making authority, international law as part of United States law, treaties and other international agreements, the war power and terrorism, the appropriations power, federalism, the role of the courts, and current national security issues. Open to students who have completed ILO L200 or its equivalent, or with permission of the instructor. Enrollment limited to 18 students. Spring semester. Michael Glennon

ILO 300-399: INDEPENDENT STUDY

Directed reading and research for credit, providing an opportunity for qualified students to pursue the study of particular problems within the discipline of International Law and Organizations under the personal guidance of a member of faculty. The course may be assigned to a Field of Study according to the topic selected. By consent of the professor and petition.

ILO 400: READING AND RESEARCH

Noncredit directed reading and research in preparation for PhD comprehensive examination or dissertation research and writing on the subjects within this division. By consent of the professor.

DIVISION OF DIPLOMACY, HISTORY, AND POLITICSDHP D200: DIPLOMACY: HISTORY, THEORY, AND PRACTICE

Diplomacy is one of the very constitutive "orders" of the international system, a mainstay of civilization itself. This seminar examines classical diplomacy, diplomatic concepts and forms that evolved in the West, the "integration" of different traditions through the League of Nations and United Nations, the establishment of foreign ministries and bilateral embassies, the professionalization of diplomatic services, the rise of "summit" diplomacy and use of special envoys, diplomatic language and its nuances, official ceremony and protocol, media and the new public diplomacy, educational and cultural exchanges, the organization of intercultural "dialogues," and the issue of the future of diplomacy—state as well as non-state—in an age of globalization. Fall semester. Alan Henrikson

DHP D202: ETHICAL REASONING IN INTERNATIONAL POLITICS

Is the state an effective ethical actor in international relations? That question will animate the seminar, which is intended to cultivate a capacity to think critically about policy options involving ethical choices. This is not a comprehensive "how to" course, nor one that imparts a particular code of behavior. Students will review classical discourses drawn from different cultural traditions about the role(s) of the state, consider contemporary treatises concerning ethics in international relations, and examine cases selected from disparate moments and places so as to appreciate the universality of difficulties faced by political leaders who must reconcile ethical and other interests. Spring semester. Alan Wachman

DHP D204 UNITED STATES PUBLIC DIPLOMACY

This seminar will be a study in depth of the theory and practice of public diplomacy by United States. By means of lectures, readings and a term paper, students will explore issues of current relevance, including: how public diplomacy deals with foreign criticism of the United States; terrorism and radicalism issues; parallel activities by State and DOD; the role of the private sector; and creative uses of modern information technology. Special attention will be given to understanding the challenges facing public diplomacy professionals doing their jobs at embassies abroad. Fall semester. William A. Rugh

DHP D210: THE ART AND SCIENCE OF STATECRAFT.

It is easy to develop explanations for foreign policy; it is quite another thing to act as a policymaker. What are the available tools of influence that an international actor can use to influence other actors in the world? When are these tools work? The goal of this course is to offer an introduction into the world of policymaking and statecraft. Topics include using coercion and inducement; intervening in the domestic politics of another country; the nature of public and private diplomacy; and case studies of notable policy successes and failures from the past. Fall semester. Daniel Drezner

DHP D211: THE POLITICS OF STATECRAFT.

Foreign policy is not immune from public debate, political gridlock, or human frailties. Building on The Art and Science of Statecraft, this course examines the political environment in which foreign policy is crafted and implemented. Topics include the role of public opinion, interest groups, bureaucracies, think tanks, and experts in the formulation of policy. Case studies of notable successes and failures of the policy process will be discussed. There will also be frequent in-class exercises in the various arts associated with the promotion of policy. The Art and Science of Statecraft is a prerequisite for taking this class. Spring semester. Daniel Drezner

DHP D213: HUMANITARIAN STUDIES IN THE FIELD

This course, run jointly with Harvard and MIT, offers a practical training in the complex issues and skills needed to engage in humanitarian work. Students will gain familiarity with the concepts and standards for humanitarian work and will focus on practical skills, such as rapid public health assessments, field cluster sampling and operational approaches to relations with the military in humanitarian settings. The course includes a separate three-day intensive field simulation of a humanitarian crisis, in late April. Early January 2010. Peter Walker and Jennifer Leaning

DHP D214M: THESIS RESEARCH AND WRITING MODULE

This module provides guidance in the researching and writing of the thesis. Topics include: choosing and working with a thesis adviser, how to frame a research question, identifying the data and methods needed to answer the question, and common problems in conceptualization and writing. The product of the course is a four-page thesis proposal, which must be signed off by the student's thesis adviser. One-half credit. Pass/Fail grading. Fall semester – Alan Wachman. Spring semester – Karen Jacobsen

DHP D215: QUALITATIVE RESEARCH METHODS

The class learns qualitative methods by developing a case study focusing on how a particular issue (e.g., financial crisis, global warming, violence, etc.) affects their own communities. Class members collaborate as an interdisciplinary team and contribute their field experiences and expertise. Taught primarily from an ethnographic perspective, the exercises lead to constructing critical theories based on grounded evidence and interpretation. Exercises include field note documentation, participant observation, life histories, focus groups, and participatory methods. Cross-listed with the Friedman School of Nutrition. Spring semester. Lynellyn D. Long

DHP D220: PROCESSES OF INTERNATIONAL NEGOTIATION

This course explores the processes, rather than specific substantive issues, of international negotiation. Using exercises and simulations, it examines the nature of conflict in the international arena; the special characteristics of negotiation in the international setting; pre-negotiation and the problems of inducing parties to negotiate; negotiation dynamics; the roles of culture and power; and the strategy and tactics of international negotiation. International mediation, arbitration, special problems of multilateral negotiation, and the follow-up and implementation of negotiated agreements are also examined. Enrollment limited to 30 per class. Fall semester, Two sections: Brian Ganson; Spring semester, Two sections: Nadim Rouhana and Eileen Babbitt

DHP D221: SEMINAR ON INTERNATIONAL MEDIATION

This seminar focuses on the roles and functions provided by mediators in the international arena. Mediation is located within the broader family of international intervention approaches, as practiced by individuals, international and transnational organizations, small and large states, and in bilateral or multilateral contexts. Topics to be covered include: understanding the perspective of a mediator as opposed to other parties in a dispute; analyzing the strengths and weaknesses of different kinds of international mediators; understanding the strategies and tactics that have been adopted in previous mediation efforts; and exploring how mediation might be used in current conflicts. Fall semester. Eileen Babbitt

DHP D223: CONFLICT RESOLUTION THEORY

International conflict resolution is a field of practice and of theoretical study. The primary goal of international conflict resolution is to use means other than violence to settle both inter-state and intra-state disputes, and to transform the relationships of disputing parties such that violence is not likely in the future. The theory is drawn from many disciplines, including law and many of the social sciences. This course will provide an in-depth look at the theories of conflict and the theories of conflict resolution that address such conflicts. It will also explore some of the major theoretical debates in the field. Spring semester. Eileen Babbitt

DHP D227: LAW AND POLITICS OF INTERNATIONAL CONFLICT MANAGEMENT

The course examines the legal, political and policy issues involved in international intervention in conflict since the end of the cold war. It explores legal doctrine, official policy and political practice with respect to conflict intervention, but it also covers conflict prevention and especially post-conflict recovery. Introductory sessions cover legal, conceptual and historic background, but move quickly into the intersection of law and politics. The course offers themes that deal with the continuum from war to peace, rather than in-depth case studies. Specific cases such as Rwanda, Somalia, Bosnia, Kosovo, Afghanistan, and Iraq will be used illustratively. Not offered 2009-2010. Antonia Chayes

DHP D228: PROTRACTED SOCIAL CONFLICT: DYNAMICS, MAJOR ISSUES AND POSSIBLE CONSEQUENCES

This course gives an overview of the dynamics and consequences of protracted social conflict. It is divided into four sections. The first part reviews contending and complimentary frameworks that examine sources of social conflict and its societal and psychological dynamics. The second part critically reviews the role of culture, religion, and historical narratives, as well as the role of power asymmetries in the dynamics of conflict and the possible approaches to its resolution. The third part focuses on the dynamics of escalation and entrapment, models of explaining stalemate and deterrence, and factors that contribute to escalation. The fourth part focuses on de-escalation and some ways of breaking stalemates and on various processes of dealing with protracted social conflict. Fall Semester. Nadim Rouhana

DHP D229: THE POLITICS AND PROCESSES OF RECONCILIATION: TRANSITIONAL JUSTICE AND MULTICULTURAL CITIZENSHIPS

This course examines the processes of reconciliation as distinguished from political settlements and conflict resolution. It covers major issues that have been emerging in the context of transition to democratic order. These issues include transitional justice, historic responsibility, historical narratives, apology, recognition of past evil, and eliminating forms of discrimination. The course examines the importance of these issues in democratic and multiethnic contexts and therefore will focus on reconciliation and multicultural citizenship. The course reviews mechanisms that were developed and employed to deal with these issues and their applicability in various contexts and how these mechanisms contribute to processes of reconciliation. Spring Semester. Nadim Rouhana

DHP D230: HUMANITARIAN ACTION IN COMPLEX EMERGENCIES

This multi-disciplinary course covers a broad range of subjects, including the evolution of the international humanitarian system, the political economy of conflicts and humanitarian aid, analytical and normative frameworks for humanitarian action, and a variety of programmatic topics. By the end of this course you will be aware of the historical, legal, social, political and moral context of both the causes and responses to complex humanitarian emergencies and have a working knowledge of the principles and standards for performing humanitarian response to complex humanitarian emergencies. This course is cross-listed with The Friedman School of Nutrition Science and Policy. Fall semester. Daniel Maxwell

DHP D231: HUMAN RIGHTS PROTECTION OF CIVILIANS DURING SITUATIONS OF ARMED CONFLICT

The course investigates the historical development and evolution of protection, anti-civilian ideologies that motive the targeting of civilians, and efforts to promote pro-civilian behavior. The course covers the Geneva Conventions and their Additional Protocols, emphasizing the distinction among combatants and civilians, conduct of hostilities, and the Fourth Convention; international human rights instruments; humanitarian impartiality and neutrality; jurisprudence regarding crimes against humanity and war crimes; protection obligations and structures; protection models; civilians' perceptions of security and protective strategies; negotiating access with armed groups; recruitment into armed forces and groups; gendered violence; and disappearance, detention, and torture. Spring semester. Dyan Mazurana

DHP D232: GENDER, CULTURE AND CONFLICT IN COMPLEX HUMANITARIAN EMERGENCIES

This course examines situations of armed conflict and the international and national humanitarian and military responses to these situations from a gender perspective and highlights the policy and program implications that this perspective presents.

Topics covered include gender analyses of current trends in armed conflict and terrorism; gender analyses of the links among war economies, globalization and armed conflict; the manipulation of gender roles to fuel war and violence; sexual and gender-based violations; women's rights in international humanitarian and human rights law during armed conflict; peacekeeping operations; peacebuilding; and reconstruction. Case studies are drawn from recent and current armed conflicts worldwide. This course is cross-listed with The Friedman School of Nutrition Science and Policy. Spring semester. Dyan Mazurana

DHP D233: DAILY RISKS AND CRISIS EVENTS

This course bridges classes on development and those on complex emergencies. Survival risks of individuals are related to household security, which in turn relates to the economic, cultural and political backdrop to household behaviors. Conditions that determine food and nutritional stresses persist in countries undergoing economic transformation and political unrest, but also in those struggling with globalization, increasing poverty, and declining public sector responsibility. International careers involve assessing potential risks and returns of alternative intervention strategies. This course is cross-listed with the Friedman School of Nutrition Science and Policy. Spring semester. Patrick Webb

DHP D235M FIELD RESEARCH METHODS IN HUMANITARIAN SETTINGS

This module partners with the Thesis Research and Writing module (D214m), which is a pre-requisite unless you have taken other research methods courses. The Field Methods module addresses primary data collection in field settings, especially those characterized by conflict and forced displacement where data collection methods confront logistical and ethnical challenges. The course is 'hands-on' and includes a simulated field study. The objective is to prepare students to conduct their own fieldwork, and to assess the value of other field research. One-half credit. Spring semester. Karen Jacobsen

DHP D236: GLOBAL MIGRATION AND DISPLACEMENT

The course explores international and internal migration arising from conflict, climate/environmental change, economic/labor migration, global criminal networks (trafficking, smuggling), natural disasters, and poverty/livelihood breakdown. We begin by examining causes and patterns (scale and scope), then explore the problems that migrants confront, including security and rights violations, and the economic, social and security impact on host countries and communities. We then investigate policy responses - how states, international organizations and local communities have responded to these problems, and implications for future migration. Spring semester. Karen Jacobsen

DHP D237: NUTRITION IN COMPLEX EMERGENCIES: POLICIES, PRACTICE AND DECISION-MAKING

This course will examine the central role and importance of food and nutrition in complex emergencies. The implications of this for nutrition assessment, policy development, program design and implementation will be examined. This will provide an understanding of; the nutritional outcomes of emergencies (malnutrition, morbidity and mortality); and also the causes of malnutrition and mortality in emergencies (the process and dynamics of an emergency). The course will also develop a broader range of management skills needed for humanitarian response initiatives. This course is cross-listed with The Friedman School of Nutrition Science and Policy. Spring semester. Kate Sadler and Helen Young

DHP D239M01: INTRODUCTION TO FORCED MIGRATION – OVERVIEW, CAUSES AND INSTITUTIONAL RESPONSES

The course begins with an analysis of the root causes and push factors underlying refugee movement, internal displacement, trafficking, and other forms of involuntary migration related to persecution, development, natural disaster, environmental change and impoverishment. The course then provides a critical overview of the international legal framework that has evolved in response to these forms of migration, including international refugee law and recent innovations regarding trafficking and internal displacement. The third segment explores comparative asylum and refugee policies in different national contexts. Not offered 2009-2010. Karen Jacobsen

DHP D239M02: CRITICAL ISSUES IN FORCED MIGRATION

This module is structured as a group-based, weekly discussion seminar with most classes led by a different class member, guided by the professor. The course is focused on current, critical issues in humanitarian assistance and protection in forced migration contexts, drawing on a range of disciplines, including human rights protection, nutrition and public health, and security studies. Specific topics will be decided according to class membership and interests, but the topics will have in common a critique of current practice and discussion of alternatives. Open to students who have either completed D239m01 or with permission of instructor. Not offered 2009-2010. Karen Jacobsen

DHP D260: SOUTHWEST ASIA: HISTORY, CULTURE, AND POLITICS

A survey of Southwest Asian history from the conquest of the Crimea (1783) to modern times. Trade with Asia and Europe, Turko-Muslim empires and culture, Shi'ism and Persia, Great Power competition in Southwest Asia, colonialism, formation of modern states, development, fundamentalism, the end of the Cold War, regional violence, and the role of oil are emphasized. Fall semester. Andrew Hess

DHP D263: THE ARABS AND THEIR NEIGHBORS

With a particular focus on the Arab world and the Levant, this course examines the evolution of nation-states in the Middle East from colonial rule to the present. Themes addressed include the rise of nationalism and pan-Arabism, ideologies of internal unity and regional tensions, Islam as a political force, globalization, reform and radicalism, and the search for new alternatives. Fall semester. Leila Fawaz and Ibrahim Warde

DHP D264: GLOBALIZATION OF EURASIA: THE TURKS AND THE POLITICS OF EURASIA

An historical survey of the Turks designed to emphasize the geopolitical importance of the Eurasian steppe. Topics examined are: formation of Eurasian steppe empires; the era of Turko-Mongol invasions; decline of classical Islamic civilization; conversion of the Turks to Islam; the rise of Turko-Muslim empires; decline of Byzantium and the conquests of the Ottoman empire; expansion of Russia and the absorption of Turko-Muslims; modernization movements among the Turks; the emergence of modern Turkey; Soviets and Central Asian society; the collapse of the USSR and the emergence of modern nationalism in Central Asia; China and the New Great Game. Spring semester. Andrew Hess

DHP D265: THE POLITICS AND CULTURE OF IRAN, AFGHANISTAN, AND PAKISTAN

The course establishes a basis for understanding modern political and cultural change in Iran, Afghanistan, and Pakistan. A major effort will be made to discover the causes and identify the consequences of the Iranian and Afghan revolutions. The modern political culture of each of the three states of this Turko-Persian region will be examined and compared with special attention to the disintegrative role of ethnic violence. Other topics studied are: modern development, fundamentalism, the role of Islamic law, education, the place of women in society, transfer of modern technology, ethnic politics, regional violence, and actions of Great Powers. Not offered 2009-2010. Andrew Hess

DHP D267: THE GLOBALIZATION OF CENTRAL ASIA AND THE CAUCASUS

The course establishes a basis for understanding modern political and cultural changes in Central Asia and the Caucasus. A major effort will be made to describe how the role of external factors in combination with internal conditions framed the problems new leaders had to confront when the Soviet Union collapsed. Special attention will be devoted to the place of ethnic and sectarian violence. Other topics studied are: economic development, transfer of modern technology and its environmental impact, ethnic politics, fundamentalism as a response to rapid change, politics of oil and the new 'Great Game' in Central Asia. Fall semester. Andrew Hess

DHP D270: SINO-U.S. RELATIONS SINCE 1900

The aim of this course is to consider conflicting cultural impulses and enduring historical patterns that have dominated US interactions with China since the start of the twentieth century. Studying past interactions is intended to inform discussion of present problems and possibilities. Readings will be drawn from diplomatic histories, journals, and primary source material. While the focus remains Sino-US relations, lectures and discussions deal also with fundamental principles of international relations and diplomatic practice. Fall semester. Alan Wachman

DHP D271: INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS OF THE UNITED STATES AND EAST ASIA: 1945 TO THE PRESENT

An examination of the international relations of the United States and East Asia since the end of World War II, principally US interactions with China, Japan, and Korea, and secondarily, with Vietnam and Southeast Asia. Focus on fundamental concepts and realities of international politics governing interactions between the U.S. and East Asian nations, as well the major geopolitical issues of the day. Study of the continuing patterns of interaction among the U.S. and East Asian states—the dynamics of wars, ideologies, political, economic and cultural issues. Spring semester. Sung-Yoon Lee

DHP H200: THE FOREIGN RELATIONS OF THE UNITED STATES TO 1917

The history of American foreign relations from the Revolution to the First World War. The transformation of the former colony into a “world power,” with attention to the internal dynamics of this remarkable, paradoxical development as well as to its external causes. The evolution of America’s major foreign policies—Non-entanglement, the Monroe Doctrine, the Open Door, and Dollar Diplomacy—and the relationships of these to westward expansion, post-Civil War reconstruction, and urbanization and industrialization. The national debate after the Spanish-American War over “imperialism.” Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, and their contrasting ideas of American power, interests, and purpose. Fall semester. Alan Henrikson

DHP H201: THE FOREIGN RELATIONS OF THE UNITED STATES SINCE 1917

The history of U.S. foreign relations from the First World War to the present. American responses to the Bolshevik Revolution, European fascism, and Imperial Japanese aggression. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the entry of the United States into the Second World War, and the major wartime conferences. The postwar “revolution” in foreign policy—the Truman Doctrine, Marshall Plan, and NATO. The “long peace” of the Cold War and crises in East Asia, Eastern Europe, the Middle East, Africa, and the Caribbean region. The Vietnam war, the diplomacy of détente, human rights, the North-South Dialogue, nuclear arms control, the opening to China, conflicts in the Gulf, the “new world order,” the Yugoslav tragedy, the “clash of civilizations,” and the “global war on terror,” and their causes and consequences. Spring semester. Alan Henrikson

DHP H202: MARITIME HISTORY

A study of world history over the past 500 years from a salt-water perspective. The course will examine the ocean as avenue, arena, source, and cultural metaphor, analyzing major themes such as the impact of changing technologies and modes of warfare, evolving patterns of trade, and differing cultural perceptions. The format will be lecture, with some discussion. Fall semester. John Curtis Perry

DHP H203: THE INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS OF THE CHINA SEAS

The region this course examines is now the world’s commercial maritime center. The course offers, within a global salt water perspective, the opportunity to explore strategic, environmental, economic, or cultural problems, depending on individual student interests. Course format is lecture and discussion, with two short written exercises and an oral report leading to a final paper of journal article length. Writing and speaking skills receive considerable attention. No prerequisites other than a lively curiosity. Fall semester. John Curtis Perry

DHP H204: CLASSICS OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Most courses in international relations focus on “cutting edge” research. Without a working knowledge of Thucydides, Kant, or Schelling, citizens and policymakers are unable to place new theoretical propositions into a historical context. This course surveys the history of international relations theory through a close reading of 10-15 classic works in the field. Among the questions that will be addressed: how far has IR theory developed since Thucydides? How closely do theories of international relations mirror the era in which they were written? In what ways are these widely cited works simplified or misstated in the current era? Not offered 2009-2010. Daniel Drezner

DHP H270: THE UNITED STATES AND EAST ASIA

An examination of the American experience in China, Japan, and Korea, from the centuries of sporadic encounter between the two distinctly disparate and seemingly antithetical worlds of Euro-America and Northeast Asia to the aftermath of the end of the Pacific War. Focus on the late nineteenth century, when mutual images begin to take form and the evolving pattern of the unequal relationship during the first half of the twentieth century. Topics include East Asian cultural traditions, Christianity, imperialism, wars, and modernization. Emphasis on ideas, national mythologies, and images. Fall semester. Sung-Yoon Lee

DHP P200: INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS: THEORY AND PRACTICE

Traditional, behavioral, and post-behavioral theories of international relations, and the nature of theory in international relations; the role of normative theory; levels of analysis, structure-agent relationships, and concepts of foreign policy behavior and decision making; utopian/neo-liberal and realist/neo-realist theory, and democratic peace theory; theories of power and its management; theories of integration, cooperation, conflict, war, and geopolitical and ecological/environmental relationships; constructivism; systems theory; regime analysis; the relationship between theory and the international system at the early 21st century; traditional and contemporary paradigms of the international system. Fall semester. Robert Pfaltzgraff

DHP P201: COMPARATIVE POLITICS

The course will examine the main concepts and arguments in comparative politics and cover debates over such topics as the making of state power and the determinants of state-building and social change; the balance between states, societies and economies; the role of culture, institutions and development in state-building; and the role of external actors and international environment in sociopolitical change. The course relies on a theoretical overview but also draw on historical evidence and case studies. The course will provide students with an understanding of the main ideas and debates in comparative politics and also provide them with an analytical framework for examining global politics. Not offered 2009-2010. Vali Nasr

DHP P202: SEMINAR ON LEADERSHIP CHALLENGES

Leadership involves guiding individuals and organizations in the public or private sector while making decisions about highly complex problems. This course examines how leadership is defined, theoretical models for evaluating leadership, why certain practical approaches to leadership succeed while others fail, and evaluates various leaders and leadership styles. It draws on case studies of diverse leaders from government and business, including presidents, prime ministers, CEOs of major corporations, and mayors. It aims to develop frameworks for evaluating leadership styles while thinking systematically about challenges facing contemporary leaders. Not offered 2009-2010. William Martel

P203: ANALYTIC FRAMEWORKS FOR PUBLIC POLICY DECISIONS

Introduction to the basic tools of policy analysis and decision making, providing students with analytic skills to make policy decisions in many types of organizations. The course includes an introduction to public policy objectives, decision making, and the role of analysis. Students then learn powerful analytic decision-making techniques, including decision trees, Bayes theorem, utility theory, prospect theory, game theory, benefit-cost analysis, and tipping models. Case studies are used to learn the policy analysis tools while applying them to real world policy problems. Cases come from developed and developing countries, and cover many different policy fields. No background in economics or statistics is required. Fall semester. Spring semester. Carolyn Gideon

DHP P204M: QUALITATIVE RESEARCH IN COMMUNITIES AFFECTED BY WAR

This course aims to enhance student understanding of the risks, dangers, challenges and constraints involved in working in war and post-war contexts; develop skills for formulating resourceful, ethical, and appropriate responses to them; and expand student knowledge of qualitative field research fundamentals. It is intended for students who are thinking of either working in war/post-war situations or on war-related issues. It will address technical issues and contextual concerns. Devising practical responses to difficult challenges is a core theme of the course. One-half credit. Not offered 2009-2010. Instructor to be announced.

DHP P205: DECISION MAKING AND PUBLIC POLICY

All organizations, including governments, require policymakers to make informed decisions about complex problems.

This interdisciplinary course considers how domestic and international forces influence decisions, while developing interpretive models for understanding the theory and practice of policymaking. It uses case studies to evaluate governmental interagency processes. Students prepare several policy memoranda on national security and domestic crises, play the role of principal in simulated meetings of the National Security Council, and discuss their recommendations. This course encourages students to think analytically and critically about theoretical and practical challenges of policymaking. Spring semester. William Martel

DHP P206: FOUNDATIONS OF POLICY ANALYSIS

This interdisciplinary course examines the instruments of policy analysis and strategic planning for public and private sector policymakers. It builds qualitative frameworks for policy analysis, which is the analytical process by which decision makers define problems, generate and evaluate alternatives, and select options to make the best possible decisions. The course also examines how strategic planning permits organizations to connect policy analysis to future directions for the organization. Broadly, this course develops frameworks and tools to help students think analytically and critically about policy analysis and strategic planning in public policy. Fall semester. William Martel

DHP P207: SEMINAR ON INTERNATIONAL POLITICS AND INTERNATIONAL LAW

International politics and international law are clearly intertwined. Policy professionals often are required to use international legal discourse, and to establish international legal rules and organizations in order to achieve their goals. At the same time, international lawyers must consider political realities in crafting rules that will be respected and enforced. This seminar is suitable for students who already have some background in international politics and international law. Also listed as ILO L207. Not offered 2009-2010. Joel Trachtman and Daniel Drezner

DHP P208: SEMINAR ON GEOGRAPHY, FOREIGN POLICY, AND WORLD ORDER

Napoleon asserted that “the policy of a state lies in its geography.” Arguably, world order itself—the structures of any well-functioning international system—depends on conformity with geographical realities. In contrast with the often static “control” orientation of politics, geography can be highly dynamic. Specific seminar subjects include: boundaries and the partitioning of territory; human migration and settlement patterns including cities; the siting of political capitals and also selection of diplomatic venues; “classical” theories of geographical determinism and possibilism as well as contemporary geopolitical and geostrategic thought; the technical methods and subtle suasion of cartography, as well as Geographic Information Systems and “mental maps.” Spring semester. Alan Henrikson

DHP P209: INTERNATIONAL NGOS: ETHICS AND MANAGEMENT PRACTICE

The course will look at key ethical frameworks for individual action within international development and humanitarian agencies. This course will confront students with ethical dilemmas and challenge them to reflect on the moral and ethical ideas underpinning today’s changing world. In turning to international NGO management practice students are asked to develop their own NGO, using the skills learned. This course will introduce students to such essential skills such as strategic planning, advocacy, the media, human resource management, fundraising, budgets, evaluation and reading financial statements. Spring semester. John Hammock

DHP P210M: RESEARCH DESIGN AND METHODOLOGY

Research design and methodology offers PhD candidates grounding in several of the main methods of social scientific research. The focus will be the identification and critical review of each method's assumptions, strategies of argumentation and presentation, and standards of evidence, with the aim of helping each student select an approach that best suits his or her research question. Each participant will complete a variety of practical exercises in order to help clarify and refine his or her research question, and as preparation for writing a formal dissertation proposal. This course is for PhD students only, or in exceptional cases with permission of the instructor. One-half credit. Fall semester. Anna Seleny

DHP P211: FIELD SEMINAR IN COMPARATIVE POLITICS AND INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In this seminar, students will analyze classic and contemporary work in comparative politics and international relations from a methodological perspective. The readings will cover the major themes and theories that dominate these fields. They will also include both exemplary and less successful applications of both theory and methods, with the goal of students learning how to better develop their own research strategies. Participants will be required to produce and present a draft dissertation proposal by the end of the course. Open to PhD students only or with permission of the instructors. Spring semester. Daniel Drezner and Anna Seleny

DHP P212: STATE-FORMATION, CONFLICT, AND INTERVENTION IN COMPARATIVE PERSPECTIVE: THE CASES OF AFGHANISTAN, RWANDA, AND SIERRA LEONE

This seminar will provide three theoretically grounded, in-depth case studies of Afghanistan, Rwanda, and Sierra Leone to gain a deeper understanding of state-building, conflict and post-conflict reconstruction. It will seek to explore conflict and intervention with regard to general theories of state formation as well as context-specific histories of each case. It will also assess the evolving model of international post-conflict state-building and its various critiques. Not offered 2009-2010. Peter Uvin

DHP P213: CHARISMATIC LEADERSHIP AND INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The concept and the theory of charisma and charismatic authority have been formulated, elaborated, and applied in what was essentially a domestic political setting. Do they also have specific implications for diplomacy and international relations? This is an intriguing but neglected question, which will be explored with reference to relevant historical examples (Napoleon, De Gaulle, but also Hitler and Khomeini), including three from Modern Greece (E. Venizelos, C. Karamanlis, A. Papandreou). Fall semester. George Mavrogordatos

DHP P214: INTRODUCTION TO GLOBAL HEALTH

This course examines current and emerging health issues in developing and industrialized countries. Students learn to define the nature, determinants, and impact of selected health problems in developing countries and describe the pattern of morbidity and mortality in poor countries and by geographic region. Students are introduced to data sources and health service delivery. Considerations at the local, national, and regional levels, including sources of funding, the role of culture in health and disease, and the global impact of health, are explored. Cross-listed as MPH 243. Spring semester. Jeffrey Griffiths and Janet Forrester

DHP P216: INTERNATIONAL HUMANITARIAN POLICY AND PUBLIC HEALTH

Seminar drawing on interdisciplinary research evidence in health promotion, disease prevention and control in settings of "Complex Humanitarian Emergency" (CHE). Participants will critique systematically a wide range of relevant published documents with the aim of formulating research questions on health in CHE. Contrasting contexts of recent and/or current CHE events will be examined; and the local, national, and international responses evaluated with the aim of articulating lessons for epidemiology, global health, and human security in the twenty first century. Fall semester. Astier Almedom

DHP P217: GLOBAL POLITICAL ECONOMY

What determines the direction, magnitude, governance, and fluctuation of international economic exchange? This course surveys the theories and issue areas of the global political economy, both in the current day and in the past. Different analytical models are presented to explain the variations in economic exchange over time. The issue areas that will be examined include: world trade, monetary orders, global finance, and foreign investment. Current topics that will be covered include: the effects of the 2007/8 financial crisis, the rise of the BRIC economies, the future of the dollar, and the future of global economic governance. Fall semester. Daniel Drezner

DHP P218: RELIGION AND NATIONALISM

Nationalism has often been compared to a 'secular' or 'civil' religion. The reverse side of the same coin, however, is that religion has often provided a ready-made initial core of national identity, which has proved remarkably resilient over the centuries. Few denominations actually coincide with a single 'chosen people' or nation. In most cases, a religion or denomination is common to several nations. How can it become identified with any one among them in particular? It is here that differences between religions in terms of authority structure and organization become crucial. These issues will be examined on the basis of several examples, both from the various Christian denominations and from other religions. Spring semester. George Mavrogordatos

DHP P219: POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DEVELOPMENT

This class offers a survey of some of the key debates and issues in the political economy of development. Part One examines alternative conceptions of development and how they have informed policies in developed and developing countries since the 1950s. Part Two analyzes alternative development trajectories among nation-states with an emphasis on the role of the state in promoting or retarding development. Part Three examines the provision of international assistance to developing countries with an emphasis on poverty reduction. Fall Semester. Katrina Burgess

DHP P221: INTERNATIONAL POLITICAL ECONOMY

This course introduces students to the key issues and approaches in international and comparative political economy. The first section provides an historical overview of the shifting balance between “states” and “markets” since the first age of globalization at the turn of the 20th century. The second section examines alternative approaches to explaining foreign economic policy in the areas of trade, international monetary policy, and foreign investment. The third section compares national systems of political economy across developed and developing countries. The final section addresses the impact of globalization and regional integration on domestic politics and policymaking. Not offered 2009-2010. Katrina Burgess

DHP P222M01: DEVELOPMENT AID, POLICIES AND CHALLENGES

This module gives students a political economy perspective of international development aid. It explores changes in historic aid paradigms as it weaves in current trends and today’s hottest debates, including aid and terrorism, harmonization and alignment, the UN Millennium Development Goals, and the Millennium Challenge Corporation. This module pairs well with the module Development Aid – Tools of the Trade. One-half credit. Fall semester. Peter Uvin and Kim Wilson

DHP P222M02: DEVELOPMENT AID – TOOLS OF THE TRADE

Where Development Aid, Policies and Challenges examines the macro issues of international aid, this module discusses development practices at the field level. Students walk away from this course understanding the basic tools and techniques applied by local and international actors in aid delivery. The course investigates issues and methods in project formulation, assessment, design and evaluation as well as practices related to community participation, social enterprise, and local partnerships. By the end of this module, students are familiar with cutting edge trends in aid delivery across various development sectors including education, agriculture, disaster preparedness and market-based solutions. One-half credit. Fall semester. Kim Wilson

DHP P224: CULTURAL CAPITAL AND DEVELOPMENT

This multidisciplinary seminar examines the role that cultural capital—the values, beliefs, and attitudes of a society—plays in development. Some societies are rich in cultural capital—they develop rapidly. Other societies are cultural capital poor—they develop slowly. The seminar explores factors that influence the evolution of cultural capital, religion prominently among them, through the views of writers like Max Weber and Alexis de Tocqueville and guest seminar leaders like Harvard psychologist Jerome Kagan and CNN’s first president, Reese Schonfeld. The seminar concludes with consideration of measures that promote cultural capital. Fall semester. Lawrence Harrison

DHP P225M: ADVANCED SEMINAR IN PROJECT EVALUATION AND LEARNING

Evaluation concepts underpin the majority of techniques to ascertain results in social change programming. Not only are agency staff currently expected to be conversant in evaluation; increasingly evaluation skills and tools are part of their daily responsibilities. At the same time, the international community struggles to learn in a systematic and efficient manner, with the glaring gap between evaluation and learning being one reason why. This course is for all students who wish to work in international development and peacebuilding who have taken DHP P228 or have gotten instructor permission to enroll in this course. One-half credit. Fall semester. Cheyanne Scharbatke-Church

DHP P226M: CORRUPTION, CONFLICT AND PEACEBUILDING

Despite the increasing attention placed on corruption by the international community, the nuances of corruption in a conflict or post-conflict environment have received scant attention. The goal of this class is to look at the intersection of conflict, corruption and peacebuilding as a cutting-edge issue in post-conflict statebuilding. The course objectives are: achieve a solid grounding in the basics of the corruption literature; review current approaches to anti-corruption measures at the policy and practice level; understand how corruption and anti-corruption concepts apply to conflict environments. The course is intended for students wanting to work on peacebuilding or governance. One-half credit. Fall semester. Cheyanne Scharbatke-Church

DHP P227: ADVANCED SEMINAR IN DEVELOPMENT AND CONFLICT RESOLUTION

This seminar is in-depth and cutting-edge discussion of what development and conflict resolution practitioners currently do together on the ground in conflict situations on all continents. It deals with methodologies (conflict vulnerability assessments; conflict impact assessments, etc.), issue areas (reconciliation; security sector reform; demobilization, disarmament and reintegration) and context (political economy of peacebuilding; relations with the military). Open to students who have completed D223, P222m01 & m02 or with permission of the instructors. Spring semester. Diana Chigas and Peter Uvin

DHP P228: DESIGN, MONITORING AND EVALUATION FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT AND PEACEBUILDING

This course will explore core components of the program cycle, starting with social change theories that underpin program design and finish with strategies for learning at the project, institutional and field levels. The core concepts of design, monitoring and evaluation (DME) will be applied primarily to international development and peacebuilding programming. Though a uniquely practical course, this class will also engage in organizational and donor government policy issues. Fall semester. Cheyanne Scharbatke-Church

DHP P229: DEVELOPMENT AND HUMAN RIGHTS

Until recently, development and human rights practitioners lived in splendid isolation from each other. This has now changed, and development practitioners give a more central role to human rights in their work. This course analyzes the tools, the policies and the programs, and the lessons learned so far. How do we re-conceptualize development work in terms of human rights? What do we concretely do differently as a result? Are there any insights from scholarship that can guide us? Open to students who have completed L210 or with permission of the instructors. Fall semester. Robert Wilkinson and Peter Uvin

DHP P231: INTERNATIONAL COMMUNICATION

The course covers policy issues of international communication with an emphasis on the implications for politics, democracy, security, and international relations. Students also study communication industries and their structure, and the resulting implications. Topics covered include freedom of speech, global media and international journalism, public diplomacy, propaganda, the role of media in democracies and totalitarian states, media influence on foreign policy, digital divide, intellectual property, privacy and ownership of information, convergence, malware and security, media coverage of political conflict, competition, and the role of communication in economic development. Fall semester. Carolyn Gideon

P232: COMMUNICATIONS POLICY ANALYSIS AND MODELING

Students will learn the important political and economic characteristics of communication policy and markets, and will practice using basic analytic tools through case studies and examples from different countries to enhance their understanding of communication policy issues. Students will study the general background and trends in communication policy in different parts of the world. This is followed by in-depth exploration of several issues of telecommunications policy, media policy, and policy issues of the Internet and newer technologies. Open to students who have completed either EIB E201 or EIB E211m or the equivalent. Not offered 2009-2010. Carolyn Gideon

DHP P237: GLOBAL MEDIA AND INTERNATIONAL CONFLICT

This course considers the role of media in political, military and economic conflict around the globe. The course begins with a survey of international media institutions. Next we review the literatures on media bias and framing. The remainder of the course consists of a series of case studies on regional and topical issues in international affairs. Class discussions will probe the legal, economic and social constraints under which the media operate, and the context in which the public consumes media output. We will also discuss what responsibility journalists bear as actors in the political system. Not offered 2009-2010. Instructor to be announced.

DHP P240: THE ROLE OF FORCE IN INTERNATIONAL POLITICS

This core International Security Studies course presents an examination of the role of force as an instrument of statecraft. Topics covered include: 1) military power and the role of force in contemporary world politics; 2) the causes of war and the moral/ethical constraints on armed violence; 3) instruments and purposes of coercion force: military power and strategic non-violent action; 4) national security policy formation and process; 5) the modes and strategies of military power (nuclear, conventional, internal conflict); 6) the structure of the post-Cold War and post-9/11 international security environment. Fall semester. Richard Shultz

DHP P241: POLICY AND STRATEGY IN THE ORIGINS, CONDUCT, AND TERMINATION OF WAR

This course employs case studies to assess enduring principles of war and their role in defending a nation's interests and objectives. The works of three military strategists and four political theorists are examined to develop an analytical framework for assessing the origins, conduct, and termination of war. This framework is employed to analyze six major historical conflicts: the Peloponnesian War; the Wars of Revolutionary and Napoleonic France; the American Civil War; World War I; World War II; the French-Indo-China War/US war in Vietnam. Spring semester. Richard Shultz

DHP P242: SEMINAR ON PROLIFERATION-COUNTERPROLIFERATION AND HOMELAND SECURITY ISSUES

The 21st century proliferation setting; alternative approaches to threat reduction; international negotiations and agreements including the Non-Proliferation Treaty; the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Missile Technology Control Regime, the Chemical Weapons Convention, the Open Skies Treaty, the Biological Weapons Convention, and the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty; approaches to nonproliferation and counterproliferation; issues of homeland security; coping with the effects of weapons of mass destruction; problems of controlling technology transfer; the fissile material production problem; cooperative security; compliance, verification, and on-site inspection, missile defense, negotiating strategies, styles, objectives, asymmetries, and techniques. Spring semester. Robert Pfaltzgraff

DHP P242: SEMINAR ON PROLIFERATION-COUNTERPROLIFERATION AND HOMELAND SECURITY ISSUES

The 21st century proliferation setting; alternative approaches to threat reduction; international negotiations and agreements including the Non-Proliferation Treaty; the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Missile Technology Control Regime, the Chemical Weapons Convention, the Open Skies Treaty, the Biological Weapons Convention, and the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty; approaches to nonproliferation and counterproliferation; issues of homeland security, especially in light of the terrorist attacks against the United States; coping with the effects of weapons of mass destruction; problems of controlling technology transfer; the fissile material production problem; cooperative security; compliance, verification, and on-site inspection, missile defense, negotiating strategies, styles, objectives, asymmetries, and techniques. Spring semester. Robert Pfaltzgraff

DHP P243: SEMINAR ON INTERNAL CONFLICTS AND WAR

Instability, conflict and irregular warfare within states due to burgeoning challenges posed by armed groups have proliferated in number and importance since the Cold War ended. With the spread of globalization, the technological shrinking of the world and interdependence of states and regions, these internal/transnational conflicts have taken new dimensions with far-reaching consequences. This seminar examines their patterns and evolution. Topics include examination of: the global strategic environment which armed groups exploit; the causes of internal/transnational conflict; types of armed groups, their operational patterns and strategies; and six case-studies. Open to students who have completed P240 or with permission of the instructor. Fall semester. Richard Shultz

DHP P245: SEMINAR ON CRISIS MANAGEMENT AND COMPLEX EMERGENCIES

Consideration of crisis management in theory and practice, drawing from recent crises and from earlier crises; theories of crisis prevention, escalation, de-escalation, termination, and post-crisis management; decision making; bargaining and negotiation; the role of third-parties; the National Security Act of 1947 and decisional approaches in successive U.S. administrations. Emphasis on theoretical literature, as well as the perspective of actual participants in recent crises and utilization of case studies. The seminar includes a major weekend crisis simulation exercise with outside participants from the official policy community. Fall semester. Robert Pfaltzgraff

DHP P246: SEMINAR ON U.S. INTELLIGENCE, TERRORISM, AND NATIONAL SECURITY

This seminar analyzes intelligence and international terrorism. First, it discusses definitions of "intelligence" and "terrorism". Next, major elements of intelligence (collection, counterintelligence, analysis and estimates, covert action) are assessed in terms of their principles, activities, organization, and role in counterterrorist strategy. The seminar also explores the role of domestic intelligence in a democratic society and the relationship between intelligence, policymaking, and crisis management. While the focus is on the American experience, a comparative element will be incorporated into the discussion. Open to students who have completed DHP P240, ILO L210 or ILO L262 or with permission from the instructor. Not offered 2009-2010. Richard Shultz

DHP P247: CIVIL-MILITARY RELATIONS IN POST-CONFLICT ENVIRONMENTS

Recently, post conflict environments have entered a grey area that is neither war nor peace. Simultaneous efforts involve kinetic activity, wider peace-keeping, peace building and state building. This seminar will analyze how international interveners, both civil and military, deal with such complex environments. Approaches will include themes, such as lack of coordination and planning; negotiation at HQ and in the field among civilian agencies, NGOs and the military; attempts at coordination. It will include case studies, particularly Iraq and Afghanistan. Prior to taking this course, students should have taken a course in either security studies, negotiation or law. Spring semester. Antonia Chayes

DHP P248: SEMINAR ON TECHNOLOGY AND INTERNATIONAL SECURITY

Technology shapes how governmental and private sector organizations conduct their business. While technology is integral to all facets of human interaction, this course examines the relationship between technology and security in the face of globalization and rapid technological change. It develops frameworks for evaluating how defense and commercial technologies influence international security, examines technologies that shaped security historically, and evaluates modern technological developments in information, communications, and space, among others. This course encourages students to think analytically and critically about how technological innovation is altering international security. Not offered 2009-2010. William Martel

DHP P249: TERRORISM AND COUNTER-TERRORISM: STRATEGIC CONSIDERATIONS FOR THE 21ST CENTURY

This course will provide an initial survey of some of the most important literature on terrorism and counter-terrorism, put the threat of terrorism in a strategic context, and evaluate current strategies for the conflict against Al Qaeda and other organizations. The course is broken into four sections, looking at definitions of terrorism, historical case studies of terrorism in the past, changes in the objectives and practices of 21st century terrorism, and the primary theaters of the current war on terror (Afghanistan/Pakistan and Iraq). Spring Semester. Timothy Hoyt

DHP P250: ELEMENTS OF INTERNATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY

This course is designed to provide an introduction to international environmental policy development beginning with the scientific identification of the problem, the assessment of its economic and social impact, and the political forces that shape international agreements. Following a short introduction to some of the basic scientific and economic factors that characterize most environmental problems, the course examines five case studies that illustrate the range of international problems facing diplomats and corporations. Bilateral, multi-lateral and commons issues are studied using examples of air, climate, water, fisheries, and forests/biological diversity. Fall semester. William Moomaw

DHP P251: INTERNATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL NEGOTIATIONS

The unique nature of environmental problems has brought a new style to international negotiations, which relies much more heavily on scientific and other technical expertise. Because the scientific knowledge base is constantly evolving, far more flexible, process-oriented treaties are being negotiated to address environmental issues than has traditionally been the case in other areas. This seminar brings together a scientist and a negotiation specialist to examine with students the nature of the international environmental negotiation process and its evolution. Not offered 2009-2010. William Moomaw and Lawrence Susskind

DHP P253: SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT DIPLOMACY

The principle goal of the course is to acquaint students with a thorough understanding of sustainable Development Diplomacy (SDD) from both a governance and diplomacy viewpoint. By looking at foreign policy through a sustainability and development lens, students will learn of the complexity of the competing claims on natural resources and the role that global natural resources play in national and international security, business relations and trade policies. The governance and diplomacy lessons are drawn from a range of real-world natural resource policy responses, such as in the field of forests, water, food and climate change. Fall semester. William Moomaw and Hans Hoogeveen

DHP P254: CLIMATE CHANGE POLICY

This course examines how governments can and might respond to the challenges and opportunities posed by the complex problem of global climate change. We begin with a study of the latest scientific understanding of the problem. Then, the technological options, the economic dimensions, the role of the private sector, and the domestic and international politics related to addressing climate change are explored. The policies of the major emitting countries are analyzed and compared. The international climate negotiations are analyzed. Policy tools are assessed against different criteria. The course will introduce and strengthen multidisciplinary policy analysis skills. Fall semester. Kelly Sims Gallagher

DHP P255: INTERNATIONAL ENERGY POLICY

Energy affects every dimension of human society including basic living conditions, mobility, and economic prosperity. Energy is at the heart of some of the most intractable environmental problems, national security challenges, and economic development strategies. Energy is also central to addressing each of these challenges. This course maps how issues differ among countries, exploring basic differences between industrialized and developing countries. The policies of major energy consumers and producers are compared. International energy policy topics such as the geopolitics of oil and gas, energy markets, climate change, public health, and international energy-technology cooperation and competition are covered. Spring semester. Kelly Sims Gallagher

DHP P257: CORPORATE MANAGEMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL ISSUES

This objective of this course is to examine environmental issues from the point of view of large corporations. Topics include: strategy and organization; staffing for environment; health and safety; accountability for environmental performance; ethics; corporate environmental policies; pollution prevention; management tools; accident response; companies and non-governmental organizations; response to laws and regulations; international issues; environmental accounting; corporate social responsibility; and voluntary codes of conduct. Note: This course is cross-listed as CEE/UEP 265. Fall semester. Ann Rappaport

DHP P258: CLEAN ENERGY TECHNOLOGIES AND POLICY

This course identifies the major environmental, security and economic issues associated with the continued use of traditional energy sources such as fossil fuels. It then explores alternative technologies that are capable of providing essential energy services in both developed and developing countries. Woven into the assessment of each technology is a determination of the present policies and factors that lock-in current technology and lock-out new alternatives. Types of regulatory, market, contractual and voluntary policies and practices are identified that can facilitate the introduction of new, clean energy technologies. The major emphasis is on electricity production, transportation and building energy conservation. Spring semester. William Moomaw and Maria Flyntzani-Stephanopolous

DHP P260: ISLAM AND THE WEST

Going beyond the simplistic notion of a great civilization divide, this course puts the categories 'Islam' and 'the West' under the spotlight of historical and comparative analysis. After providing some essential background, the course concentrates on the colonial and post-colonial encounter between Muslim and Western societies and polities with special, but not exclusive reference to the South Asian subcontinent. Organized along historical and thematic lines, the course focuses on the overlapping domains of culture and politics, thought and practice, to elucidate aspects of dialogue, tension, and confrontation between the worlds of Islam and the West. Fall semester. Ayesha Jalal

DHP P262: CONTEMPORARY SOUTH ASIA

Offered along both historical and thematic lines, the course surveys politics, economy, and society in late colonial India and offers a comparative historical analysis of state structures and political processes in post-colonial South Asia, particularly India, Pakistan and Bangladesh. Among the themes considered are the reasons for the partition of 1947, the nature of the colonial legacy, the origins of democracy and military authoritarianism, the history of development, the shifting balance between central and regional power, the ongoing clash between so-called secular and religiously informed ideologies and the impact on inter-state relations in the subcontinent. Not offered 2009-2010. Ayesha Jalal

DHP P263: ISLAM AND POLITICS: RELIGION AND POWER IN WORLD AFFAIRS

Islamic ideas and actors play an important part in global politics today. Their impact on political change, international security, and economic and social trends has shaped international relations in recent years. The rise of Islamist activism has been central to this development. This course will examine the role that Islamism plays in politics in Muslim countries; trace the origins and development of its formative ideas; introduce the key forces that represent it; and analyze its development and conception of politics and international relations. The course is interested in providing students with a firm understanding of what Islamism is but how to analyze it in the context of global politics. Fall semester. Vali Nasr

DHP P264: IRAN IN GLOBAL POLITICS

This course provides a basis for understanding the political, economic and security dimensions of Iran's role in World politics. It was a frontline state during the cold war before it became the home to a major Islamic revolution that changed the face of the Muslim world. Iran's role in international politics since then has an important determinant of stability in the Middle East. As the only Islamic state produced by an Islamist revolution Iran experienced a unique path to development, experimenting with political, religious and economic reforms, which is consequential for the future of the Muslim world. This course will seek to explain the making of Iran's politics and provide students with the basis to analyze its role in global politics. Not offered 2009-2010. Vali Nasr

DHP P266M1-2: THE ISLAMIC WORLD

This course aims to explain those aspects of the Islamic world – history, politics, economics, society, legal systems, business practices - that are necessary to conduct business or political negotiations in a number of countries. This course will focus primarily on a number of Middle East Persian Gulf countries as well as Islamic countries in other parts of the world. The course discusses issues of political economy of the Islamic world, with a special focus on political Islam, the question of oil, and issues of globalization and governance. The final part of the course will deal with more practical business issues. For MIB students this course is one of the regional course options. Spring—two modular sections: P266m01 (English) and P266m02 (Arabic). Each modular course one-half credit. Ibrahim Warde

DHP P270: FOREIGN RELATIONS OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA

Beginning with review of PRC foreign relations since 1949, this course will focus on thematic issues arising from the PRC's efforts to ensure its security in interactions with other states. Students will examine prominent cases that illustrate the ambitions manifested by PRC policies and the impediments that the state faces as it seeks to become more prosperous, influential, and secure. While the focus remains the foreign relations of the PRC, lectures and discussions deal also with fundamental principles of international relations and diplomatic practice. Spring semester. Alan Wachman

DHP P272: THE TIES THAT BIND: TRANSPACIFIC RELATIONS IN THE 21ST CENTURY

This course examines the complex web of transpacific relationships in Asia as an analytical vehicle for assessing Asian politics and the future of American power. While the course will focus primarily on U.S. security partnerships in Asia since the postwar period, other formal and informal regional arrangements will also be explored. Not offered 2009-2010. Instructor to be announced.

DHP P273: RISE OF CHINA: IMPLICATIONS FOR THE TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY

The resurgence of China will be among the most important and prominent features of global politics in the 21st century. Indeed, China's rise will have major implications for international relations as wide ranging a great power politics, Asian regional stability, energy security, economics and finance, the environment, and the all-encompassing phenomenon of globalization. Future leaders must therefore become increasingly familiar with the historical context, geo-strategic imperatives, domestic political processes, culture/normative practices, and increasingly, Chinese individuals that shape Beijing's outlook and behavior in the coming years. Not offered 2009-2010. Instructor to be announced.

DHP P274: THE POLITICS OF THE KOREAN PENINSULA: FOREIGN AND INTER-KOREAN RELATIONS

An examination of Korea's modern "evolution" as a state and society. Emphasis on Korea's modern political history, from the origins and theory of statecraft in traditional Korea to the major geopolitical issues of the present day. Topics include Korea's relations with the great powers of the North Pacific and the primacy of international relations in the Korean world: from imperialism and Japanese colonialism, partition of the Korean peninsula and the establishment of two separate Koreas, Cold War politics and the Korean War, economic development and political freedom, to inter-Korean relations. Fall semester. Sung-Yoon Lee

DHP P275: SEMINAR ON NORTH KOREAN STATE AND SOCIETY

North Korea is the world's last major hermit society. Since the division of the Korean peninsula in 1945, South Korea has developed into one of the largest trading nations in the world with a vibrant democratic polity, while North Korea has descended into a perpetually aid-dependent state that maintains domestic control through the deification of the ruling family and operation of extensive political prisoner concentration camps. What does the future hold for North Korea? Emphasis on the Kim family continuum, strategy of brinkmanship, human rights, nuclear politics, and the implications of regime preservation or collapse. Spring semester. Sung-Yoon Lee

DHP P276M: CHINA'S POLITICAL ECONOMY

The course is largely taught in Chinese (普通话, putonghua). The course has three objectives. The first is to expose students to a range of perspectives on the development of China's economy and political system, especially as the latter relates to the nation's economic reform and performance. A second objective is to introduce students to the original writings of well-known Chinese economists. Finally, for students whose Chinese is not fully developed, the course intends to enable these students to develop the vocabulary and spoken and reading fluency to enable them to comfortably read Chinese newspaper articles and basic journal articles. For MIB students this course is one of the regional course options. Spring semester. Gary Jefferson

DHP P284M: RUSSIA IN 21ST CENTURY: OPPORTUNITIES AND CHALLENGES

In this course, we will examine economic, political, and business development of Russia. We will not only seek to understand which industries and companies are likely to succeed, identify the most promising areas for business cooperation, and explore motivations and business practices of the Russian partners, but will endeavor to do that in dynamic context, exploring the impact of internal (e.g., social, demographic, political) and external (e.g., oil prices, international trade) factors. For MIB students this course is one of the regional course options. One-half credit. Spring semester. Ari Axelrod

DHP P286M1-2: EUROPE IN THE ECONOMIC CRISIS

This course will examine cultural, political, and socio-economic contexts that frame national and EU-wide responses to the ongoing economic crisis in Europe. The crisis has impacted not only national economics, but also the effectiveness of the EU framework and the national economic models and social compacts underlying it (social security, taxation, immigration, political legitimacy). The current crisis thus constitutes a litmus test for the sustainability and watershed in the development of EU models. Five models will be examined: France, the UK, Germany Central/Eastern Europe and the European Union. For MIB students this course is one of the regional course options. Each modular course one-half credit.

Spring – two modular sections: P266m01 (English) and P286m02 (French). Erwan Lagadec

DHP P290: MIGRATION AND TRANSNATIONALISM IN LATIN AMERICA

This seminar examines the implications of international migration, migrant remittances, and transnationalism for development and politics in Latin America. The first section addresses alternative theories of migration and reviews patterns of migration in the Americas in the context of market opening and economic integration. The second section looks at the impact of international migration and remittances on economic development and social welfare in Latin America. The third section focuses on migrant transnationalism and its implications for citizenship, politics, and U.S. immigration policy. Not offered 2009-2010. Katrina Burgess

DHP P293: DEMOCRACY AND STATE REFORM IN LATIN AMERICA

This seminar examines how democratization and market reform have interacted to reshape the state and society in Latin America. Part One reviews the major changes that have occurred in the region's political regimes, with an emphasis on Argentina, Brazil, Mexico, Bolivia, El Salvador, Guatemala, Colombia, Peru, and Venezuela. Part Two addresses how trends in representation, accountability, decentralization, and participation have affected the quality of democracy in the region. Part Three examines the causes and implications of the rise of the political left in Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, Bolivia, Ecuador, Peru, and Venezuela. Fall semester. Katrina Burgess

DHP P293M: DEMOCRACIA Y REFORMA DEL ESTADO EN AMÉRICA LATINA

El tema principal de este seminario es la calidad de la democracia en América Latina. En la primera parte, tendremos una discusión comparativa (con un énfasis en los casos de Brasil y Chile) sobre los derechos y la ciudadanía, la rendición de cuentas, y la influencia de la sociedad civil en las políticas públicas. En la segunda parte, nos enfocaremos en la calidad de la democracia en los siguientes países y/o regiones: Colombia, Venezuela, Bolivia,

Ecuador, Perú, Argentina, México, y Centroamérica. One-half credit. Fall semester. Katrina Burgess

DHP P294M1-2: POLITICAL ECONOMY AND BUSINESS CONTEXT OF LATIN AMERICA

Survey of the structural economic and business context of Latin America and the policies that shape it. Consists of twelve largely microeconomic topics such as labor markets, social security regimes, regional free trade, taxation and industrial policy, with the controversial role of the state at issue throughout. A high level of student participation is required. Prior command of microeconomics very helpful, but not required. This course is offered (identically) in both English and Spanish sections. For MIB students this course is one of the regional course options. Spring – two modular sections: P294m01 (English) and P294m02 (Spanish). Each modular course one-half credit. Lawrence Krohn

DHP P297: AFRICAN COMMUNITIES IN CRISIS: PERSPECTIVES OF WAR AND ITS AFTERMATH

The purposes of this course are to illuminate community perspectives and experiences of African wars and assess their implications on policy and practice. It aims to reveal how warfare and communities in Africa intersect, and how national and international actors might enhance their work. Students will be encouraged to re-assess assumptions and predispositions about the nature and impact of war, and contemplate whether new understandings can or should effect collective action. Topics to be covered include security, terror warfare, gender, sexual violence, education, employment, forced migration, demography, transitional justice, child soldiering, trauma, resilience, exclusion, refugee camp life, youth, and urbanization. Not offered 2009-2010. Instructor to be announced.

DHP 300-399: INDEPENDENT STUDY

Directed reading and research for credit, providing an opportunity for qualified students to pursue the study of particular problems within the discipline of Diplomacy, History and Politics under the personal guidance of a member of faculty. The course may be assigned to a Field of Study according to the topic selected. By consent of the professor and petition.

DHP 400: READING AND RESEARCH

Noncredit directed reading and research in preparation for PhD comprehensive examination or dissertation research and writing on the subjects within this division. By consent of the professor.

IR CPT: PRACTICUM IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Summer study and internship for Fletcher MALD students who do not hold US work authorization and who choose to engage in off-campus work or internship experiences in the United States. Experiential learning and application of academic experiences are standard components of a two-year, master's level international affairs program. Requirements include successful completion of the Professional Development Program, mandatory attendance at three lectures, the internship and a paper at the conclusion of the internship. Available only for F-1 visa holders. Please consult with Registrar's Office for more information about this course.

UNIVERSITY SEMINAR COURSESCIS 201: CHILD AND YOUTH DEVELOPMENT: INTERNATIONAL PERSPECTIVES ON CHILDREN IN EXCEPTIONALLY DIFFICULT CIRCUMSTANCES

Millions of the world's children encounter developmental contexts that present major challenges to mental and physical development: They experience life in orphanages, refugee camps, juvenile detention facilities, or homeless shelters; they are child soldiers, or experience trafficking or forced labor. We will explore what the long term consequences of marginalized mental and physical health and low educational attainment are, and what programs and policies are in place to assure that these children's potential is maximized. Fall semester. M. Ann Easterbrooks, Christine D. Economos and Laurie C. Miller.

DIVISION OF ECONOMICS AND INTERNATIONAL BUSINESSEIB E201: INTRODUCTION TO ECONOMIC THEORY

This course provides the foundation of modern economics with an emphasis on its applications. Topics include demand and supply analysis, consumer theory, theory of the firm, welfare economics, monopoly and antitrust, public goods, externalities and their regulation, unemployment, inflation and economic growth, national income determination, monetary and fiscal policy. This is an introductory course for non-specialists. Fall semester—Carsten Kowalczyk; Spring semester—Lawrence Krohn

EIB E210M: QUANTITATIVE METHODS MODULE

This module presents the mathematical methods that are used widely in economics, including logarithms, exponential functions, differentiation, optimization, constrained optimization, and an introduction to dynamic analysis. The mathematical material is presented in the context of economic applications and examples that illustrate the bridge between mathematics and economics. One-half credit. Fall semester. Michael Klein

EIB E211M: MICROECONOMICS

This half-semester course develops and applies the analytical tools that economists use to address questions about price determination, individuals' and firms' choices, effects of government policies on market outcomes and efficiency. The course's focus will be on: basic theory of consumer behavior; production and costs; partial equilibrium analysis of competitive markets; general equilibrium; welfare. Open to students who have completed EIB E210m. One-half credit. Fall semester. Deborah Menegotto

EIB E213: ECONOMETRICS

This course provides an introduction to the basic tools of data analysis in studying economic and social relationships. The course equips students with the facts, intuition and experience necessary for independent econometric research and for critical reading of empirical research papers. The techniques covered include ordinary least squares, probit, fixed effects, two-stage least squares and weighted least squares. The course also addresses potential problems associated with these techniques, such as omitted variables, measurement error, multicollinearity, heteroskedasticity and autocorrelation. Pre-requisites include familiarity with 1) basic probability and statistics, and 2) basic concepts of functions and derivatives (EIB E210m or an introductory calculus course). Spring semester. Jenny C. Aker

EIB E215M: EMPIRICAL TOPICS IN GLOBALIZATION

This six-week modular course examines evidence on the extent of globalization and its consequences. We will look at whether the evidence supports the notion that the last few decades have, in fact, seen an unprecedented rise in the globalization; the effects of expanding trade on economic inequality, and the environment, and the effects of greater capital market liberalization on economic growth. A focus of the course is the use of data to address economic questions. Open to students who have completed EIB E210m and either EIB E201 or EIB E200. EIB E213 is recommended, but not required and may be taken concurrently. One-half credit. Spring semester. Michael Klein

EIB E216M: GLOBAL MACROECONOMICS

Combines the standard macroeconomics curriculum with the macro side of the international economics curriculum. The assumption dictating the choice of topics is that students, once employed, will have a daily need to understand global macroeconomic events, foresee the evolution of macro variables and apply this knowledge to professional (and perhaps personal) decision-making. Theoretical exposition is rendered more concrete through case studies drawn from around the globe. The "data watch" component of each unit ensures students' familiarity with the actual global indicators encountered in the international business and economics media. One-half credit. Spring semester. Lawrence Krohn

EIB E217M: MANAGERIAL ECONOMICS

This course is a brief introduction to management issues presented from the perspective of economics. The focus is on the strategic responses a firm can make regarding both its internal organization and its external interaction with both consumers and other firms. Students will learn the role of economic analysis in determining organizational design and developing competitive strategies whether the organization is a for-profit firm or a non-profit enterprise. One-half credit. Spring semester. Daniel Richards

EIB E220: INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INVESTMENT

This course investigates why nations trade, what they trade, and the distribution of the gains from trade. Topics include trade and economic growth, technology, the product cycle, multinationals, international labor integration, tariffs, regional economic integration, dumping, and international competitiveness of firms and nations. Special attention is given to analyzing the effects of various policy instruments. Open to students who have taken EIB E211m. Spring semester. Carsten Kowalczyk

EIB E221: ADVANCED SEMINAR ON INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INVESTMENT

This seminar explores current issues in trade policy reform and institutions. Topics include subsidies, agriculture, market access and reciprocity, the WTO Doha Development Round, preferential integration, dispute settlement, World Bank and IMF trade policy measures, trade and income distribution, and trade and the environment. The course is open to students who have taken E220 or have permission of instructor. Fall semester. Carsten Kowalczyk

EIB E230: INTERNATIONAL FINANCE

This course examines the determination of income, the exchange rate, and the trade balance in economies that trade goods and services, as well as assets, with the rest of the world. Theory is developed and employed to study current events as well as historical experience. Issues studied include exchange rate determination, monetary and exchange rate policy, the causes and consequences of external imbalances, international policy coordination, financial crises, and the global capital market. Open to students who have completed EIB E201 or equivalent. EIB 210m is suggested, and may be taken concurrently, but is not required. Fall semester. Michael Klein

EIB E232M: ECONOMIC GROWTH

Economic growth has been, and continues to be, one of the central concerns of economics. Long-run economic growth is one of the best ways to bring people out of poverty. Some formerly poor countries, like South Korea, have had impressive growth performance and, consequently, a significant increase in its citizen's living standards. Other countries, notably many in sub-Saharan Africa, have had much less success in advancing the material welfare of their citizens. This module presents theory and evidence on economic growth and long-run economic performance. One-half credit. Fall semester. Michael Klein

EIB E233M: FINANCE, GROWTH AND BUSINESS CYCLES

In this module we consider the potential role played by financial markets and the role of financial intermediation. We also study the actual structure and performance of banks, stock markets, and bond markets across a range of countries, and the extent of worldwide financial integration. The ultimate goal is to give students the theoretical tools, the empirical background, and the familiarity with experience needed to understand the causes and implications of the rapidly changing structure of international capital markets. This module should appeal to students with interests in economic policy, financial and portfolio management, and international business. One-half credit. Spring semester. Michael Klein

EIB E240: DEVELOPMENT ECONOMICS

This course provides an introduction to several central themes in development economics. The organizing framework is economic growth. By combining economic models and case studies, one can draw lessons regarding what approaches have worked to alleviate poverty. The course also pays particular attention to situations that have led to economic crises, and develops models of macroeconomic management and structural adjustment. Lectures and assignments presume a background in economics at the introductory level. Open to students who have completed EIB E201 or equivalent. Fall semester. Spring semester. Steven Block

EIB E241: MICRO DEVELOPMENT ECONOMICS: POVERTY REDUCTION POLICY ANALYSIS FOR DEVELOPING COUNTRIES

This course presents a systematic approach to analyzing the costs and benefits of—and brainstorming about ways to improve—poverty reduction and development efforts. We examine policies ranging from short-run cash and food transfer programs, to infrastructure, agricultural technology and micro finance projects, to policies shaping long-run investments in education and health. Emphasis is on rigorous use of economic reasoning, identification and use of key empirical evidence, and the effective communication of policy analytic results. Open to students who have completed EIB E201 or the equivalent. Fall semester. Julie Schaffner

EIB E242: MICROECONOMICS OF DEVELOPMENT

This course teaches students how to use microeconomic theory and econometric skills to analyze issues in low-income countries, to develop policy interventions to address those issues and to measure the impact of such interventions in a rigorous empirical manner. It then addresses the issues that constrain and support development, particularly in sub-Saharan Africa: labor markets, including health and education; rural factor markets, including land and access to credit; access to information and agricultural markets; social networks and risk-sharing schemes; and institutions. Open to students who have completed EIB E211 or an intermediate microeconomic theory course. E213 is strongly recommended. Spring semester. Jenny C. Aker

EIB E243: SEMINAR ON AGRICULTURE AND RURAL DEVELOPMENT IN DEVELOPING COUNTRIES

This seminar examines a range of issues relating to agriculture and rural development policy in developing countries. The course is designed to introduce students to the fundamental issues and literature relating to agricultural and rural development. Central topics will include: famine, the role of agriculture in poverty alleviation, the relationship between poverty, population growth, and resource degradation, food price policy analysis, agriculture's contribution to economic growth, and the role of the state. Open to students who have completed EIB E201 or its equivalent. Fall semester. Steven Block

EIB E244M: SEMINAR ON THE POLITICAL ECONOMY OF REFORM, GROWTH, AND EQUITY

This seminar explores the insights and critiques of rational political economy in explaining the determinants of reform, growth, and equity in developing countries. This approach applies tools of economic analysis to understanding political processes. In particular, the seminar will apply theories of "public choice" and collective action in explaining development policy outcomes in relevant areas including: the relationship between political and economic liberalization, income distribution and growth, trade regimes, land reform, and democratization and growth. Students are encouraged to have completed EIB E240. One-half credit. Spring semester. Steven Block

EIB E245: MANAGING ECONOMIC REFORM IN LOW INCOME COUNTRIES

The international development discourse has changed markedly in tone and substance over the past decade and a half. This course will attempt to evaluate the experience of economic reform in developing countries from the point of view of the interaction between politics and economics. There will be a broad analysis of the critical issues of reform on the macroeconomic, institution and governance areas along with in-depth case studies of a select number of low income countries spanning different regions. The main emphasis will be on the practical and management challenges that countries face. Not offered 2009-2010.

EIB E246: NATURAL RESOURCE AND ENVIRONMENTAL ECONOMICS

This course covers major issues in contemporary environmental economics. Includes analysis of environmental degradation and resource depletion, valuation of the environment, incentives to protect the environment, impacts of population growth and agricultural expansion, management of renewable and non-renewable resources, pollution analysis and policy; energy and global climate change; international trade and the environment; national and multinational environmental policies. Special attention will be paid to policies to respond to climate change, including carbon trading and "clean development" institutions. Open to students who have completed E201 or equivalent. Spring semester. Jonathan Harris

EIB E250: ECONOMIC PROBLEMS OF LATIN AMERICA

Focuses on the many reasons for Latin American's failure to realize its economic potential. Emphasis placed on macroeconomic policies and their responsibility for the region's many crises. Perspective is decidedly economic, but sight is never lost of the ways in which political institutions shape economic policy and national well-being. Each problem is illustrated with cases drawn from recent history. Unifying theme is that of economic inefficiency, i.e. how poorly conceived institutions and policies lead to economic waste. Prior mastery of basic macroeconomics is essential; microeconomics and familiarity with the region are helpful, but not required. Fall semester. Lawrence Krohn

EIB E254: THE POLITICAL ECONOMY OF CHINA

This course provides a political economy perspective on China's economic rise and integration with the world economy, with particular emphasis on the reform period beginning in 1980. Topics covered in the course include the reform process, the role of institutions, corporate governance reform, trade and foreign direct investment, science and technology, regional and income disparities, and the changing role of China's political system in the country's emerging capitalist system. Where appropriate the course uses basic tools of economic analysis to analyze the conditions that are shaping China's economic performance, including the changing role of the state, the principal sources of growth, and China's integration with the world economy. Not offered 2009-2010. Gary Jefferson

EIB B200: FOUNDATIONS IN FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING AND CORPORATE FINANCE

An introductory course to corporate finance from the perspective of the chief financial officer (CFO). Much of the course deals with valuation concepts which are at the core of investment decisions (capital budgeting) for new equipment, the launch of new products, mergers & acquisitions and LBOs... and the funding/financing decisions to be coordinated with those investment decisions. Special attention is given the cost of capital and valuing stocks, bonds, convertible and preferred. In the process of addressing these issues you will develop an understanding of financial accounting, planning and budgeting. Fall semester. Laurent Jacque

EIB B205: DATA ANALYSIS AND STATISTICAL METHODS FOR DECISION-MAKING

This course provides an overview of classical statistical analysis and inference. The language and methods of statistics are used throughout the Fletcher curriculum, both in the classroom and in assigned readings. In addition, the language and methods of statistical analysis have permeated much of academic and professional writing as well as media reporting. The goal is to present a broad introduction to statistical thinking, concepts, methods, and vocabulary. Fall semester. Spring semester. Robert Nakosteen

EIB B207: FINANCIAL STATEMENT MANAGEMENT

Accounting is an economic information system, and can be thought of as the language of business. Accounting information provides individuals with a starting point to understand and evaluate the key drivers of the firm, its financial position and performance. This can then be used to enhance decisions as well as help predict a firm's future cash flows. The present (or current) value of those cash flows provides an estimate for the value of the firm. This course will cover the basic vocabulary, concepts, procedures and mechanics of financial and managerial accounting and the role of accounting information in society. Fall semester. Lawrence Weiss

EIB B208: FINANCIAL STATEMENT ANALYSIS

This course will provide participants with an understanding of the techniques used to alter and evaluate the key competitive value drivers of a firm and assess the nature and likelihood of future cash flows. We begin by reviewing the basics and remembering the limits of accounting information. Next we deepen our examination of ratio analysis and extend our analysis to build pro-forma (as if, or future) financial statements. Then, we look at certain accounting choices and their impact on financial statements and analysis. Finally, we will study the nature of bankruptcy and how creditors assess this possible end game. Spring semester. Lawrence Weiss

EIB B210: GOVERNMENTAL AND NON-PROFIT ACCOUNTING

Accounting is an economic information system, and can be thought of as the language of money. Accounting information provides individuals with a starting point to understand and evaluate the economic condition of an organization. This can then be used to assess the ability and likelihood of an organization's future financial endeavours. This course will cover the basic vocabulary, concepts, procedures and mechanics of financial and managerial accounting and the role of accounting information in society. Spring semester. Lawrence Weiss

EIB B220: SEMINAR ON GLOBAL FINANCIAL SERVICES

The focus is on the determinants of competitive performance of financial institutions including commercial banks, insurance companies, hedge funds, investment banks and private equity firms. Review of bank management principles emphasizes asset liabilities management, interest rate risk management and Value at Risk (V@R). Discussion of international commercial banking will focus on international trade financing, syndicate lending, project finance and international securitization. Open to students who have complete B200 or B221 or equivalent. Spring semester. Laurent Jacque

EIB B221: INTERNATIONAL FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT

This course develops a conceptual framework within which the key financial decisions faced by multinational corporations can be analyzed. The traditional themes of corporate finance, including working capital management, capital budgeting, mergers and acquisitions, and funding strategies, are revisited in the context of volatile exchange rates, different regulatory environments and segmented capital markets. Focus on foreign exchange risk management including the appropriate use of new hedging instruments such as currency options, swaps, and derivatives. Case studies emphasize how international financial management should be integrated with corporate strategy and operating decisions. Open to students who have completed EIB B200 or equivalent. Spring semester. Laurent Jacque

EIB B225: CORPORATE FINANCE AND BANKING: A COMPARATIVE ASIAN PERSPECTIVE

This seminar explores major themes in corporate finance and banking in Asia drawing on the diverse experiences of regional actors. Systemic issues dominate the first third of the seminar, specifically the legacy of bank-centric finance, trends in financial deregulation and internationalization, and crisis. The balance of the seminar will examine decisions at the firm-level on issues such as corporate ownership, performance, and governance, and capital structure management, across both public and private debt and equity and balance sheet management through the use of derivatives and asset-backed securities. Fall semester. Patrick Schena

EIB B226M: LARGE INVESTMENT AND INTERNATIONAL PROJECT FINANCE

A case study approach to employing the latest techniques for structuring transactions, including risk mitigation by financial intermediaries. Course stresses decision making and prioritization of tasks, policy formulation, the selection of world-class partners and on-the-ground operational skills necessary to ensure timely completion of construction, budget adherence and efficient start-up. Large investment projects across a variety of geographic regions, industrial sectors, and stages of project execution are examined, including data on default and loss characteristics. Contrasts differences in risk between domestic and export sector projects, including foreign exchange issues and the role of host governments. One-half credit. Fall semester. Phil Uhlmann.

EIB B227: ISLAMIC BANKING AND FINANCE

The course is a comprehensive introduction to Islamic banking and finance. In addition to providing religious background, the course discusses the political and economic context of the creation and evolution of Islamic institutions. The course also focuses on the underlying principles of Islamic finance and explains how Islamic products (murabaha, mudaraba, musharaka, ijara, sukuk, takaful, Islamic mutual funds and derivatives, etc.) work. The final part of the course will discuss Islamic finance in the context of the "war on terror" and the recent global financial meltdown. Spring semester. Ibrahim Warde

EIB B228M: RISK MANAGEMENT FOR FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Risk management has become a field of major importance in finance. The major financial risks are: liquidity risk, interest rate risk, credit risk, and market risk. The innovation came originally from the capital markets where risks are traded using "derivatives". A second impulse was triggered in the banking industry, when the management of financial risks of banking institutions became a major issue because of the strong pressure of regulatory bodies. Today, risk management in the financial industry has become the center of attention by all. It is a core central function for globally reaching financial organizations, banks, funds, insurance companies, because of the stringent rules imposed worldwide. One-half credit. Fall semester. Joel Bessis

EIB B229: GLOBAL INVESTMENT MANAGEMENT

The objective of this course is to develop the analytical framework & practical skill sets required for managing global portfolios and risk analysis. Topics covered include asset allocation; security selection; portfolio risk management using derivatives; trade execution; portfolio monitoring & rebalancing; and performance evaluation & attribution. The course examines the investment decisions faced by institutional investors as well as private wealth management. The course takes a global approach with asset class, country/currency selections/allocations decisions spanning instruments traded in global financial markets. Pre-requisites: EIB B200 and EIB B221 or a strong finance background. Fall semester. Hamza Abdurezak

EIB B230: STRATEGY AND POLICY FOR COMPETITIVE ADVANTAGE

This course introduces fundamental issues in the strategic management of firms. The aim of the course is to provide students with basic theoretical perspectives and practical tools for understanding firm performance over time. This course considers both business and corporate strategy, and particular emphasis is given to industry analysis, competitive rivalry, organizational structure, company growth, and different types of diversification. The course is open to all students. EIB E201 and EIB B200 or their equivalent are strongly recommended (and may be taken concurrently). Spring semester. Jonathan Brookfield

EIB B231: INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS STRATEGY AND OPERATIONS

This course surveys issues related to the internationalization of firms and the strategic management of multinational enterprises. The aim of the course is to expose students to a variety of theoretical perspectives and managerial practices related to international business. In particular, this course considers the internationalization process, organizational design, modes of foreign investment, and global strategy. It also explores questions related to globalization and the cross-border flow of people, goods, ideas, and money, and reflects on issues related to political risk, country analysis, comparative economic organization, and emerging markets. Fall semester. Jonathan Brookfield

EIB B232M: TECHNOLOGY STRATEGY AND INNOVATION IN GLOBAL MARKETS: MANAGING INNOVATION FOR SECURING GLOBAL COMPETITIVE ADVANTAGE

The course will enable students to develop understanding of the emerging challenges from the demand/consumption sides for a range of economies from $500/capita to $50,000/capita, North & South, and East and West; The emerging technologies (e.g. new materials and bio technologies) which together could offer more sustainable solutions for future advancement of the global economy and; Role of leaders in business and government as innovators and entrepreneurs have to play, as global issues on energy, ecology, water, health, and materials become more complex and intertwined. One-half credit. Fall semester. Partha Ghosh

EIB B234: SEMINAR ON STRATEGIC MANAGEMENT IN PRIVATIZING AND DEREGULATING INDUSTRIES

This course surveys the literature related to privatization, considering both theoretical perspectives and practice. It also explores current issues shaping debates about effective enterprise privatization in a comparative and interdisciplinary manner. The seminar examines key concepts and policy issues related to privatization and deregulation, looks at different national experiences, and explores the impact of privatization from an industry perspective. Students should come away from the seminar with a deep appreciation of the challenges confronting executives and policy makers dealing with changes to the boundary between public and private sector activity across a variety of different settings. Fall semester. Jonathan Brookfield

EIB B235: MANAGING THE GLOBAL CORPORATION

The course will touch on the major elements of directing the global corporation from an overall management perspective. Hence, while the course will touch on financial, human resources, marketing, manufacturing, and other areas, the emphasis will be on the management decisions and issues, rather than on the detailed technical aspects of each area. The course will focus largely on international management issues. It will draw on examples of issues, particularly from the technology, financial services and consumer products industries. Selected guest experts will also participate in the lectures. Fall semester. G. Richard Thoman

EIB B236M: CROSS BORDER STRATEGIC ALLIANCES

The course explores enterprise strategies and reasons why a firm may turn to strategic alliances to achieve their strategic objectives. It will then examine how strategic alliances are implemented—finding the right partners, structuring the alliance, and managing the partnership. Finally, we will extend what has been learned, by applying it to real situations—through case studies and projects. Although the course will focus extensively on examples from the Pacific Rim in order for students to gain a deeper understanding of alliance issues in this area, we will also discuss cross-border alliances more broadly. One-half credit. Fall semester. William Reinfeld

EIB B237: FIELD STUDIES IN GLOBAL CONSULTING

The goal of this course is to provide an introduction to consulting as it is practiced worldwide and across sectors. Students will achieve this goal by undertaking a consulting engagement for a real-world client. The first part of the course will include an introduction to and practice in the essential skills that form the core of professional development for consultants at top-level firms. Students will then put these skills to the test by completing a team consulting project for a sponsoring company. Open to students who have completed EIB B225 or EIB B230 and/or EIB B200 or with permission of the instructor. Class size will be limited by the number of projects confirmed by external sponsors with a maximum of four projects, or twenty students, being accepted. Input for the project grade will come primarily from the client; team self-evaluations will be reflected in individual final grades. Note: Students are limited to only one “field study” type of course during their career at the Fletcher School. This also includes courses taken outside of Fletcher that are considered field study courses. Spring Semester. Christopher Tunnard

EIB B238M: STRATEGIC MANAGEMENT

Effective strategists can: size up the dynamics of the external environment of a firm, covering its economic, political and social contexts; take a holistic view across all functions and configure all of a firm’s internal choices to give it a competitive advantage; sustain this advantage over time and leverage it into adjacent business and geographic opportunities; use acquisitions and alliances when these are the more effective approaches to support a strategy; create the right organizational context to execute the chosen strategy efficiently; ensure the continuous renewal of the firm in anticipation of and adapting to its changing environment. The objectives of this short course are to master the field’s core concepts and to build the skills needed to be an effective strategist. One-half credit. August Pre-session. Bala Chakravarthy

EIB B239M: CORPORATE GOVERNANCE IN INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS AND FINANCE

This module seminar explores business, financial and legal issues affecting corporate governance and management of risk, both in industrialized and developing countries. Students will examine the nature of the corporation, management roles and board responsibility, the role of regulatory authorities, as well as corporate culture, corporate social responsibility, and capital market development. The seminar will focus on policy implications, including wide-spread efforts to effect corporate governance reforms and set standards in the wake of corporate scandals and systemic risk. Also listed as EIB B239m. One-half credit. Spring semester. S. Donald Gonson

EIB B241: MICROFINANCE AND INCLUSIVE COMMERCE

Microfinance once meant small loans delivered through groups to microentrepreneurs. Today, microfinance has become robust. It includes loans, savings, insurance and the complex and emergent ways of delivering these services. This course explores the development environment that inspired early microfinance interventions and concludes with the breakthroughs in inclusive business approaches such as microfranchising. The course assumes no financial background but requires that students master financial skills during the semester as a prerequisite to understanding the issues discussed. Fall Semester. Kim Wilson

EIB B242M: MICROFINANCE COLLOQUIUM

This course plumbs the depths of topics discussed in B241: Microfinance and Inclusive Commerce. It is designed as a true seminar where we focus on one topic in particular and delve into its background, review the current debates that surround the topic, and then explore practical interventions that are occurring right now in the industry. One-half credit. Fall semester. Kim Wilson

EIB B260: INTERNATIONAL MARKETING

This course introduces students to the fundamentals of marketing in a global environment. It addresses the problems encountered by all organizations—small and large, for-profit and non-profit—as they operate in an international environment. The full range of marketing activities is covered: marketing research, product policy, branding, pricing, distribution, advertising and promotion, customer service, planning, organization, and control. While internationally oriented in nature, the aim of the course is also to build a significant understanding of classic marketing management principles. Non-traditional aspects of international marketing (e.g., nation branding) will also be considered for a variety of constituencies. Fall semester. Bernard Simonin

EIB B261: SEMINAR ON ADVANCED TOPICS IN MARKETING

This seminar offers comprehensive coverage of both fundamental and emerging issues in the fields of marketing that continue to capture marketers’ time and attention. The first three modules of the seminar (market orientation; customer orientation; learning orientation) follow a classic marketing paradigm centered on best marketing practices and superior organization performance. Issues will be examined with respect to various contexts (e.g. for-profit vs. non-profit; organizational vs. individual behavior). The fourth module, co-designed and moderated by students, will be centered on students’ specific interests. Not offered 2009-2010. Bernard Simonin

EIB B262: MARKETING RESEARCH AND ANALYSIS

This course adopts a comprehensive, hands-on approach to designing and conducting research. Students will be exposed to the various stages of the research process from recognizing the need for research and defining the problem to analyzing data and interpreting results. Proper design of research methods, fieldwork, questionnaires, and surveys (e.g., online surveys) is covered. Both qualitative (e.g., focus groups, projective techniques) and quantitative approaches (e.g., cluster, discriminant, and factor analysis) are presented. Various analytical techniques are introduced “hands on” via a series of computer exercises and cases (using SPSS and Excel). Fall semester. Bernard Simonin

EIB B263M: MARKETING MANAGEMENT

The course addresses the managerial, organizational, ethical, societal, environmental, and global dimensions of marketing decision making. The main objectives of the course are to sharpen your skills in marketing decision-making, problem diagnosis, and management skills; to understand and apply some fundamental marketing concepts; to improve your familiarity and understanding with institutional marketing knowledge, terminology, and practice; and to provide you with a forum for formulating, presenting, and defending your own marketing ideas and recommendations. Note: Students having taken or planning to take B260 are not eligible to enroll in this course. One-half credit. Spring semester. Bernard Simonin

EIB B264: SEMINAR ON STRATEGIC MARKETING FOR NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS

This seminar offers a comprehensive coverage of the fundamental issues in marketing and branding in nonprofits. The aim of this course is to arm students with the analytical skills and knowledge necessary to make, evaluate, and critique marketing and branding strategy decisions facing nonprofit organizations in an increasingly global arena. The seminar addresses how to craft a nonprofit marketing strategy; implement a coherent marketing plan and optimize the use of marketing resources, develop brand identity and positioning statements; leverage brand alliances and partnerships; and perform financial brand valuations. Spring semester. Bernard Simonin and Nathalie Laidler-Kylander

EIB B265: ENTREPRENEURIAL MARKETING – BUILDING A WINNING BUSINESS PLAN

This course guides students through the development of a new product/service strategy and detailed business plan. It is an applied, project based course, designed to weave together field research, theory, case studies, class discussions, lectures and workshops into a comprehensive approach. Students actively engage in their own learning as they construct the building blocks of their business plan, working in teams throughout the semester. The objective of this course is to craft a comprehensive business plan which students present to a panel of investors at the end of the course. This course is relevant for business students and social entrepreneurs alike. Fall semester. Natalie Laidler-Kylander

EIB B270: SEMINAR ON ASIAN BUSINESS GROUPS

While Asian economies are increasingly important to the world, a full understanding of how such economies are organized is difficult to achieve without some consideration of business groups. This seminar looks at business groups in Japan, the Republic of Korea (South Korea), the Republic of China (Taiwan), Hong Kong, Singapore, and the People's Republic of China (PRC). The goal of the seminar is to put Asian business groups in their historical, political, and economic context, and then to examine current conditions in an effort to give some insight into future trends. Not offered 2009-10. Jonathan Brookfield

EIB B270M: MODULE ON BUSINESS GROUPS IN ASIA

While Asian economies are increasingly important to the world, a full understanding of how such economies are organized is difficult to achieve without some consideration of business groups. This seminar looks at business groups in Japan, the Republic of Korea (South Korea), the Republic of China (Taiwan), Hong Kong, Singapore, and the People's Republic of China (PRC). The goal of the seminar is to put Asian business groups in their historical, political, and economic context, and then to examine current conditions in an effort to give some insight into future trends. One-half credit. Not offered 2009-10. Jonathan Brookfield

EIB B272M: THE POLITICAL ECONOMY AND BUSINESS ENVIRONMENTS OF GREATER CHINA

This course will expose students to similarities and differences in the business environments of Greater China. At the end of the course, students should have a better understanding of Chinese business and the context in which business occurs in Hong Kong, Singapore, the Republic of China (Taiwan), and the People's Republic of China (PRC). The class will be taught in English. For MIB students this course is one of the regional course options. One-half credit. Spring semester. Jonathan Brookfield

EIB B280: THE GLOBAL FOOD BUSINESS

The purpose of the course is to introduce the student to the rapidly expanding global food business. The growing, processing, distribution, and marketing of food are major and necessary economic endeavors of the world's people. Today, the international food industry is increasing at historically high rates of growth paralleled by increasing world trade in agricultural commodities, motivated by new multinational trade agreements. The course focus will be to introduce the student to the management, business strategy, marketing, research, and analytical skills required in the international food business. Spring semester. James Tillotson

EIB B284: PETROLEUM IN THE GLOBAL ECONOMY

This course covers the structure of the international petroleum industry and its role in the international economy. The first half will address the technical, commercial, legal, economic and political basis of the industry and the business models for key segments, including exploration and production, refining, marketing and natural gas. Drawing on this knowledge base, the second half will consider key issues of the petroleum industry, including the resource base, pricing, environmental impacts, alternative energy sources and geopolitics. Open to students who have basic Excel skills and have completed EIB E200, EIB E201, EIB B200 or equivalent. Fall semester. Bruce Everett

EIB B290: LEADERSHIP: PERSONAL AND ORGANIZATIONAL CHALLENGES

This course provides students with a practical and intellectually challenging roadmap to their own development as leaders. Lectures and readings give meaning to leadership as a concept; however, we will leverage students' own experience and the experiences of leaders from industry and government to explore leadership as a vocation. Two themes are central: first, leadership is a life-long vocation and, second, leaders improve through practice. The link is learning how to "practice while you perform." Through readings, exercises, and discussions with invited guests, we will all experience what it means to practice while you perform. Spring semester. Robert J. Thomas

EIB 300-399: INDEPENDENT STUDY

Directed reading and research for credit, providing an opportunity for qualified students to pursue the study of particular problems within the discipline of Economics and International Business under the personal guidance of a member of faculty. The course may be assigned to a Field of Study according to the topic selected. By consent of the professor and petition.

EIB 400: READING AND RESEARCH

Noncredit directed reading and research in preparation for PhD comprehensive examination or dissertation research and writing on the subjects within this division. By consent of the professor.

FIELDS OF STUDY

INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS FIELDS OF STUDY FOR MIB STUDENTS

The following four fields of study are the international business fields for the MIB degree. Students in the MIB program must complete one of these four International Business Fields of Study along with one International Affairs (MALD/PhD) Field of study. The International Affairs Fields are listed on the subsequent pages. MIB students must complete a minimum of three course credits in a single field to fulfill the International Business Field of Study requirement. Modular courses (1/2 credit courses) must be matched up to make a full credit. Each field has one required course and two electives. An asterisk (*) denotes the required course for the field.

Through petition to the Committee on Student Academic Programs, MALD students may offer one of the MIB International Business Fields of Study. However it should be noted that in doing so, they are ineligible to officially offer the International Business Relations Field toward their plan of study.

KEY

- * This course is required for constitution of the field.
- ++ Any one of these courses may be used as the required course in the field.
- + Any one of these courses may be used as the second required course in the field
- [] Bracketed courses are those not offered 2009–2010.

Unless other wise indicated, students need three course credits to complete a field of study. Modular courses count as one-half credit and if listed in a field, two must be taken to complete one course credit.

International Finance and Banking

The International Finance and Banking field prepares students for careers such as treasurers, comptrollers, and chief financial officers (CFOs) of globally reaching manufacturing and trading corporations; investment bankers in financial services encompassing international banking, investment and insurance; and asset managers with institutional investors, hedge funds, private equity firms, and sovereign wealth funds. It is also appropriate for students looking to deepen their skills in quantitative financial analysis and knowledge of the global financial sector. The field deals with valuation concepts which are at the core of investment decisions, including new product launches, mergers and acquisitions, leveraged buy-outs, privatization, project finance, and private equity. Emphasis is placed on funding/financing within the multi-currency setting of global capital markets. Special attention is devoted to the challenge of managing credit, interest rate, and exchange risk in the context of financial engineering and asset securitization.

Strategic Management and International Consultancy

This field is relevant for students pursuing general management careers with multinational corporations as well as management consulting careers. The field provides students with a deep grounding in the basic logic of competitive advantage, premised on a careful analytical treatment of the distinct qualities and positions of individual firms, and an understanding of broader competitive dynamics. This background positions students well for guiding strategy at both established and emerging enterprises pursuing both domestic and international strategies. Foreign market entry strategies through exporting, licensing, franchising, acquisitions, or foreign direct investments are also emphasized.

Marketing

The Marketing field investigates the fundamental approaches to understanding local and global markets, competitors, and portfolios of product offerings in both developed and emerging markets and through the private, public, and non-profit sectors. It is appropriate for students interested in general management careers, entrepreneurial management as well as management consulting. The Marketing field helps students acquire the grounding in the basic disciplines (e.g., psychology, economics, statistics) essential to understanding consumer and organizational buying patterns and develop successful marketing strategies.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS FIELDS OF STUDY FOR MALD, MIB, AND PHD STUDENTS

PUBLIC INTERNATIONAL LAW

International Law has been one of the key subjects studied at The Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy since the founding of the School. This has never meant that economic, political (including military), social and other aspects of international affairs are neglected, but that the play of various policies in the international legal order is seen as a significant part of international affairs. The basic course for the field is the course in Public International Law. Admission to that course requires the prior completion of the Fletcher course in the International Legal Order. To complete the field, a student may take one of a wide variety of courses or seminars focusing on the structure of international organizations, trade, dispute resolution, human rights, international legal history, or other aspects of the international legal order as they affect current affairs

[DHP P207]	Seminar on International Politics and International Law

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

The theory and practice of international organizations is a dynamic and increasingly important dimension of world affairs. The field is at the intersection of international law and politics, and its core approach is inter-disciplinary. Students are given the opportunity to study the norms and rules that govern international relations and the institutions where those rules are formulated and implemented. In addition to survey courses on international organizations in general, course offerings cover substantive areas of international activity in which institutions play a central role, such as peace operations, human rights, the environment and international trade. Students who specialize in the field acquire a) basic knowledge of the nature and functions of international institutions – both formal organizations and less formal arrangements; b) an understanding of the role institutions play in the development of international law and policy; and c) an ability to think critically about the significance of international organizations to contemporary world affairs. Career opportunities for those who specialize in the field include inter-governmental organizations, government agencies and non-governmental organizations. The field is also helpful for positions in private sector firms that interact with international organizations and related government offices.

INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS AND ECONOMIC LAW

International business and economic law involves the public international law and domestic law applicable to international business transactions between private parties, as well as the public international law applicable to trade relations between or among states. The concerns of international economic and business law relate to the international economy, and involve sales of goods, intellectual property licensing and protection, international finance and foreign direct investment, as well as the settlement of disputes relating thereto. This field is affiliated with international business studies and with international economic studies, and also relates to international political economy. This field also involves international organizations related to international business and economic activity, including multilateral organizations such as the WTO or the IMF, regional organizations such as the European Union or NAFTA and functional organizations such as the Basle Committee on Bank Regulation. Students who present this field will be expected to understand the legal context of international business transactions, as well as how states relate to one another in the international economy.

LAW AND DEVELOPMENT

The field of law and development examines the role of law, legal institutions and legal systems, both domestic and international, in the processes of economic and social development, particularly in developing countries, emerging markets and nations in transition. It seeks to understand how law may both inhibit and foster desired change and the ways in which legal institutions may be organized to achieve national and international policy goals. This field includes a basic course on law and development, as well as more specialized courses in comparative law, international financial institutions and law, foreign investment, and intellectual property law, as well as courses from other disciplines, such as economic development.

UNITED STATES

The United States field encompasses the history of the United States, its institutions, and its international relations, with a particular focus on the development of American foreign policy and diplomatic practice. The geographical context and the cultural and economic basis, as well as the political and constitutional-legal framework, of U.S. government and foreign policy making also are studied—essential background for students who may one day be representing, or perhaps dealing with, the United States in diplomacy or in other professions such as law, business, development and humanitarian work, or international journalism. The question of the uniqueness, or “exceptionalism,” of American civilization and of the appropriateness of the “lessons” of American experience to other societies, in other parts of the world, is examined. So, too, is the issue of the definition of U.S. “national interests” and of democratic and other American “values”—and the defense and the promotion of these internationally—in a changing global environment in which coalition efforts and multilateral cooperation are increasingly necessary, and universal norms are held to prevail.

INTERNATIONAL INFORMATION AND COMMUNICATION

International information and communication is a critical component of international relations and diplomacy and at the heart of how people of different nations perceive each other. The study of international information and communication is interdisciplinary by its nature, and the curriculum at Fletcher emphasizes the policy perspective, while also providing a strong analytic, and business background. In addition to learning about the role of international information and communication in diplomacy and international relations, students will learn about the industry, policy, and technology forces that both enable and constrain different forms of communication. These include issues of governance, regulation, industry structure, equity, and technology policy. They will also become familiar with many theoretical frameworks and analytic techniques commonly used in the study of these areas. The curriculum is designed to provide students with a strong background to confront the new policy and business challenges they will encounter in their careers from an informed analytic perspective.

PACIFIC ASIA

The history of relations between the United States and the states of Northeast Asia has been the principal focus of the Asia field. Most courses in the field emphasize diplomatic, cultural, and political history. The field deals most directly with developments in China, Japan, and Korea from the nineteenth century to the present, relations among those states, and between them and the United States. Courses are intended to offer students a foundation on which to build an understanding of the contemporary interstate problems in the region, as well as the bonds and tensions that currently exist in relations between the U.S. and the states of the region.

SOUTHWEST ASIA AND ISLAMIC CIVILIZATION

Southwest Asia and Islamic Civilization provides students with conceptual skills that will assist them in interpreting current events taking place in what was the core region of Islamic Civilization. Thus the regional focus on the field includes Southwest Asia (roughly South Asia to Egypt), the Eastern Mediterranean, Central Asia and the Caucasus. At the global level of analysis its courses are particularly concerned with how the history, culture, politics and economics of the states and societies of this portion of Eurasia condition the human response to an accelerating impact of global change. Lectures, reading assignments and other course requirements are specifically designed to fit the curriculum of the Fletcher School and do not require a level of knowledge not relevant to the explanation of modern problems.

INTERNATIONAL NEGOTIATION AND CONFLICT RESOLUTION

The International Negotiation and Conflict Resolution field (INCR) examines the causes of and approaches to managing and resolving violent conflict in the international context. Toward this end, it focuses especially on the theory and practice of international negotiation and mediation. The required course for the field is Processes of International Negotiation (DHP D220). To constitute the field, a student must choose two additional courses from the list below.

DHP P247	Civil-Military Relations in Post-Conflict Environments
[DHP P251]	International Environmental Negotiations

◇ Ph.D. students offering International Negotiation and Conflict Resolution as a field of study are required to take this course.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND COMMERCIAL POLICIES

This field provides the tools for analysis of trade and investment relations between nations. Among the questions considered are why and what nations trade and invest internationally, and their effects – and the effects of international labor migration – on wages and employment, technology, international competitiveness, economic development, growth, and the environment. There is emphasis on how policies affect outcomes and on how policies are determined in unilateral, regional or preferential, and multilateral settings.

Core Requirements for the Field:

*EIB E201	Introduction to Economic Theory
*EIB E210m	Quantitative Methods Module
*EIB E211m	Microeconomics

Field Specific Required Core Course:

*EIB E220	International Trade and Investment
-----------	------------------------------------

Elective courses:

ILO L240	Legal and Institutional Aspects of International Trade
EIB E215m	Empirical Topics in Globalization
EIB E221	Advanced Seminar on International Trade and Investment

Special Note: See important note at end of Fields of Study Section.

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY THEORY AND POLICY

The International Monetary Theory and Policy field focuses on the macroeconomic performance of countries that are integrated with the world economy both through trade in goods and services and through the exchange of assets. A central concern is the way in which world financial markets contribute to growth and development as well as serve as a means by which economic disruptions may be transmitted across national boundaries. Some of the issues addressed include exchange rate and financial crises like those in Asia and Latin America in the 1990s; the appropriate exchange rate regime, a question recently addressed in the move towards a single European currency; the causes and consequences of large trade deficits, an issue that is currently facing the United States; and the appropriate role of international institutions like the IMF. Courses in this field offer both theory that provides students with frameworks for understanding issues and presentation of timely policy issues and recent experience that provides a context for the use of economic models.

Core Requirements for the Field:

*EIB E201	Introduction to Economic Theory
*EIB E210m	Quantitative Methods Module
*EIB E211m	Microeconomics
*EIB E213	Econometrics

Field Specific Required Core Course:

*EIB E230	International Finance

Elective Courses:

EIB E215m	Empirical Topics in Globalization
EIB E232m	Economic Growth
EIB E233m	Finance, Growth and Business Cycles
EIB E250	Economic Problems of Latin America

Special Note: See important note at end of Fields of Study Section.

DEVELOPMENT ECONOMICS

The field of development economics is intended to ground students in a variety of analytical perspectives on the development process. The required core course, Development Economics, concentrates on central themes including global poverty, growth, and the role of policies towards agriculture and trade. Other courses in the field complement this broad perspective, addressing such issues as nutrition and rural development, microeconomic poverty interventions, international finance, and political economy.

Core Requirements for the Field:

*E201	Introduction to Economic Theory
*E210m	Quantitative Methods Module
*E211m	Microeconomics
Or
*E213	Econometrics (in lieu of E210m and E211m)

Field Specific Required Core Course:

EIB E240	Development Economics
----------	-----------------------

Electives Courses:

EIB E232m	Economic Growth
EIB E241	Micro Development Economics: Poverty Reduction Policy Analysis for Developing Countries
EIB E242	Microeconomics of Development
EIB E243	Seminar on Agriculture and Rural Development in Developing Countries
EIB E244m	The Political Economy of Reform, Growth, and Equity
EIB E250	Economic Problems of Latin America

Special Note: See important note at end of Fields of Study Section.

INTERNATIONAL ENVIRONMENT AND RESOURCE POLICY

The rapid growth of resource use and the acceleration of land conversion to feed and house an expanding population have created a new set of transboundary and global commons problems. During the past 30 years, the international community has attempted to reverse the loss of fisheries, forests and species, the disruption of the atmosphere and climate, the degradation of land, air and water and the global distribution of toxic substances by implementing hundreds of bilateral and multilateral agreements. Many of these treaties and soft law declarations impose totally new responsibilities upon national governments, and create new approaches to the relationships among states and with the private sector and non-governmental organizations. The program demonstrates how environment and resource issues are integral to the ongoing economic development process and are critical to the security of societies. The role of science in developing sound policies is emphasized, as is the role of technology choice and the policies that influence them. Clashes such as those that occur between trade and environmental treaty regimes, forest protection and sovereignty and between developed and developing countries create new challenges for international diplomacy. The program emphasizes the need to utilize multiple disciplinary tools from science, economics, politics, law and engineering in developing sustainable solutions.

POLITICAL SYSTEMS AND THEORIES

The study of political systems and theories represents an essential basis for explaining, understanding, and comparing the units and actors that comprise the world of the early 21st Century. As a field, Political Systems and Theories encompasses courses whose focus is alternative theoretical approaches for the conduct of research and analysis about political systems, major forces shaping the emerging world, the nature of international change and continuity, and the basis for theoretical development. The Political Systems and Theories field offers students the opportunity to explore, evaluate, and compare theories about such crucially important phenomena as power, legitimacy, institutions, cooperation, conflict, peace, and war. Conceptually, the field is (or should be) integral to, and an essential prerequisite for, courses that comprise the "practice" parts of the curriculum. Students taking this field are expected to acquire basic knowledge about the major theories that shape international and comparative politics. Specifically, the field includes courses on such topics as international relations theory; non-governmental organizations in international politics; geography as a factor in international politics; theories of statecraft, bureaucracy, democratization, ethno-religious conflict, identity, sovereignty, nationalism, and self-determination. This field should be of great importance to students preparing MALD theses or Ph.D. dissertations and/or planning academic careers focused on political science. It should also be of interest to students seeking to understand the theories that help explain behavior and assumptions that guide policymakers. All students offering this field of study are required to take DHP P200. Students taking the Political Systems and Theories field for the PhD must take DHP P200 and at least three other courses. A second required course for PhD students should be selected from a list that includes DHP P205, DHP D210, and DHP P224.

INTERNATIONAL SECURITY STUDIES

The International Security Studies field consists of courses that examine the sources, conduct and termination of conflict, strategy and statecraft, crisis management, regional security, intelligence, and the emerging spectrum of new and complex security issues. The course offerings encompass approaches that are both theoretical and policy oriented, as well as historical and contemporary. Since the end of the Cold War, the faculty has revised the course offerings to reflect a rapidly changing international security environment. Among the new issues introduced into the curriculum are: the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and non-proliferation/counter-proliferation policy; ethnic, sectarian, and religious conflict; internal war and state failure; the management of humanitarian emergencies by alliances and/or international organizations; the use of military forces in peace operations; information technologies and security; and the increasing role of ethics in security policy. In support of its course offerings the International Security Studies Program sponsors a senior level guest lecture series, a conference with one of the U.S. military services or commands, a colloquium series, and a crisis simulation exercise. MALD students taking International Security Studies are required to take DHP P240 and at least two other courses. PhD students taking the International Security Studies field must take DHP P240 and at least three other courses. A second required course for PhD students should be selected from a list that includes DHP P206, DHP P241, and DHP P245.

INTERNATIONAL POLITICAL ECONOMY

The field of IPE analyzes the interactions between international political and economic dynamics. It consists of a set of interdisciplinary approaches to analyze structures and processes of globalization and economic integration, as well as the interactions between domestic and international political and economic phenomena. It tries to overcome the artificial separation between politics and economics, between states and markets, and between domestic and international levels of analysis. Recent empirical research has concentrated on issues such as structural adjustment, regional economic integration, state-business relations, Third World development, multinational corporations, and the institutions of international economic governance.

HUMANITARIAN STUDIES

Some 240,000 people are employed in humanitarian work around the world today. The agencies they work for spend close to $10 billion/year and they are present, on the ground in all of the political, economic and environmental crisis events we are familiar with. This field of study seeks to equip students with an understanding of both how these crisis environments evolve, how communities caught up in them survive and what role the international aid system plays in that survival. Students will take away from the field an understanding of the natural of humanitarian crises and a critique of the humanitarian aid system.

HUMAN SECURITY

The human security field brings together the concerns and practices that deal with the interconnection between freedom from fear and freedom from want. This covers a broad variety of issues and practices, but they all share a) a desire to cross boundaries between fields of social change until now usually treated separately, and b) a strong ultimate focus on the inclusive well-being of all human beings.

INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS RELATIONS

The IBR field is concerned broadly with the management of the business enterprise in a multinational context. It encompasses theoretical, technical and practical analyses of manufacturing, trading, service and financial firms, which may be operating at different stages of their internationalization process. International management builds on a thorough understanding of the firm’s broader socio-political, socio-economic, and industry-specific environments. Within the firm idiosyncratic setting, international management also requires an integrated understanding of accounting, finance, marketing, production and logistics, and strategic management. The IBR field offers a comprehensive coverage of the socio-political, socio-economic, and industry-specific contextual environments while providing a rigorous training in core functional disciplines such as accounting, finance, strategic management and marketing. Note: MIB students are not permitted to offer International Business Relations Field of Study to satisfy one of their field requirements.

Students taking the International Business field are required to complete four courses

Special Note regarding the three Economics Fields of Study (International Trade and Commercial Policies, International Monetary Theory and Policy and Development Economics)

All students who wish to concentrate in an economics field need to take 3 economics credits in addition to E201 (if they place out of E201, they need 4 credits to complete the field). Each of the fields has 1 or 2 credits of core requirement courses (the two-module sequence of quantitative methods and microeconomics and/or econometrics), one core course, and 1 elective course. Together, they constitute a minimum package of economics knowledge allowing Fletcher students to use economic tools to reason analytically in their chosen domain.

Students who place out of E210m can continue with the Microeconomics module (E211m); those students will be able to complete the economics field with 3.5 course credits in total.

Some students seek to offer both of their fields of study in economics. Mostly, this simply means that they do twice what the students in the previous group do, with these two caveats:

- all students who offer two fields in economics must take E213 econometrics
- students offering two economics fields should finish with 7 economics courses higher than E201. As some of the core requirement courses are the same between the different economics fields, this means that they may be able (and are required) to take more elective courses in one or both of their fields.

CERTIFICATES

Certificates complement the MALD degree by allowing students to define themselves in a manner that more closely reflects the realities of a competitive job market and the need to master certain core knowledge and skills. Certificates available at Fletcher include:

- International Finance & Banking
- Strategic Management & International Consultancy
- Human Security
- Diplomatic Studies
- International Development
 - Political and Social Change
 - Economic Analysis, Trade and Investment
 - Sustainable Development

INTERNATIONAL FINANCE & BANKING

For students aspiring to careers in the global financial services industry, Fletcher's international business program offers a rigorous sequence of courses in Accounting, Finance and Banking that, coupled with International Business Transaction and Securities Law, uniquely prepares our graduates for the fast-paced world of international finance. This certificate program requires students to intern with a financial institution and to write a thesis on a related topic.

STRATEGIC MANAGEMENT & INTERNATIONAL CONSULTANCY

For students aspiring to careers in management consulting and international management, the International Business Program offers a rigorous sequence of courses in global strategic management and the law of international business transactions, foreign private investment and international intellectual property. This certificate program uniquely prepares our students for the rapidly evolving world of international business. It also requires students to intern in the private sector and to write a thesis on a related topic.

HUMAN SECURITY

The certificate in human security provides guidance in course selection for those seeking a deeper professional understanding of the interactions among the main fields of social change across borders: development, conflict resolution, human rights, and humanitarian assistance. Students who graduate with the certificate in human security will possess a deep understanding of the core issues and challenges that underlie all action for social change across borders, and be capable of leading inter-disciplinary teams for policy-making, research, field action, or advocacy. The Certificate consists of four introductory courses, which will acquaint students with each of the four fields whose concerns and methodologies need to be understood within a human security framework; two capstone courses laying out the cross-disciplinary framework; two courses allowing students to gain some degree of further specialization in one of the relevant fields; an internship and associated discussion series designed to deepen the students' understanding of the operational challenges of interdisciplinary work; and the writing of a MALD thesis whose subject matter falls within the realm of human security.

DIPLOMATIC STUDIES

The purpose of the certificate in diplomatic studies is to enable a student to acquire, through a concentrated and interdisciplinary group of courses, advanced knowledge, both theoretical and practical, of the institutions and exercise of formal, or interstate diplomacy. Its focus, in short, is on the diplomatic achievement of international agreement. The certificate encompasses the study of the historical evolution of diplomacy as well as the ways in which diplomatic concepts and methods are applied today—by the U.S. government and by the governments of other countries, large and small, bilaterally as well as in multilateral settings across the broad agenda of current international relations. The certificate is intended to serve the interest of those planning, or continuing, careers in professional diplomacy, whether within ministries of foreign affairs or in international organizations. It is designed also to serve the purposes of those having primarily a scholarly, investigative interest in the study of diplomacy, a rich and intellectually rewarding academic subject that is currently undergoing a major revival.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

For students aspiring to careers in international development, the International Development certificate offers a rigorous sequence of three core courses (chosen from four offered) in political and social change in developing countries, developing economics, development theory, and law and development. The core courses will ensure that students receive a basic understanding of development and introduce them to the complex and interdependent nature of the field of study. The core courses are followed by specialization courses within one of three tracks:

- Political and Social Change
- Economic Analysis, Trade and Investment
- Sustainable Development

BREADTH REQUIREMENTS

All MALD degree candidates will be required to take:

- two courses in the Division of Diplomacy, History, and Politics,
- one course in the Division of International Law and Organization,
- one course in the Division of Economics and International Business,
- one course in Quantitative Reasoning.

Specific requirements/options for each of the three divisions as well as Quantitative Reasoning are noted below.

Students who have performed equivalent graduate level work for courses listed below may apply for equivalence with the approval of the appropriate Fletcher instructor. Students who receive equivalence must still meet the requirement of pursuing one or two courses in the division but may choose from any course in the division rather than just those listed below.

MA degree candidates can meet the breadth requirement by taking one course from each division (ILO, DHP, and EIB). LLM degree candidates are required to take one course in both the DHP and EIB divisions. MIB degree candidates satisfy the breath requirement by the nature of the structured curriculum. PhD degree candidates must complete at least two courses in your choice of two of the three divisions and at least one course from the remaining division.

DIVISION OF DIPLOMACY, HISTORY, AND POLITICS (DHP)

Each MALD student is required to take two courses from the DHP Division. One of those courses must be one of the following:

DHP D210:	The Art and Science of Statecraft
DHP D220:	Processes of International Negotiation
DHP H200:	The Foreign Relations of the United States to 1917
DHP H201:	The Foreign Relations of the United States Since 1917
DHP P200:	International Relations: Theory and Practice
DHP P201:	Comparative Politics
DHP P219:	International Political Economy of Development
DHP P221:	International Political Economy
DHP P240:	The Role of Force in International Politics

DIVISION OF INTERNATIONAL LAW AND ORGANIZATION (ILO)

Each MALD student is required to take one of the following courses:

ILO L200:	The International Legal Order
ILO L210:	International Human Rights Law
ILO L220:	International Organizations
ILO L230:	International Business Transactions
ILO L250:	Law and Development
ILO L251:	Comparative Legal Systems

DIVISION OF ECONOMICS AND INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS (EIB)

Each MALD Student is required to take EIB E201: Introduction to Economic Theory. Students who pass the E201 equivalency exam must take another economics course for their breadth requirement. They can choose from the following list:

EIB E210m:	Quantitative Methods and EIB E211m: Microeconomics
EIB E220:	International Trade and Investment
EIB E230:	International Finance
EIB E240:	Development Economics
EIB E246:	Natural Resource and Environmental Economics

QUANTITATIVE REASONING

Each MALD student who does not pass one of the quantitative reasoning equivalency exams will be required to take one of the following courses:

EIB B205:	Statistics for Decision-Making
EIB E210m:	Quantitative Methods
EIB E213:	Econometrics
DHP P203:	Analytic Frameworks for International Public Policy Decisions*

*DHP P203 may not be used to satisfy the second required DHP course.

FACULTY BIOGRAPHIES

Hamza Abdurezak, Adjunct Assistant Professor of Finance, also holds an appointment at Harvard teaching Investment Management & Corporate Finance. He shares his time between New York and Boston consulting for Wall Street firms and Pension Funds on investment management and portfolio risk analytics. Abdurezak has been teaching finance courses at Harvard since 1999. In the financial services industry, he has worked for a number of Wall Street firms such as Capital Markets Risk Advisors, Manhattan Family Office, Utah State Pension Fund and Lasair Capital LLC. Prior to his coming to the US in 1995, he worked for the Science and technology Commission and the Ministry of Planning and Economic Development as an economist in Ethiopia. Abdurezak's earned a BA degree in economics from Addis Ababa University, and a Masters and PhD degrees with concentrations in finance from Harvard University and The Fletcher School respectively. He has also earned Financial Risk Manager (FRM) designation from the Global Association of Risk Professional (GARP®) and is a regular member of the CFA® Institute. He recently completed a major research work on the dynamics of alpha & beta decomposition of hedge fund returns and risk profiling. Abdurezak's favorite sport is Basketball and he is loyal fan of Boston Celtics both in the up season like last year's (World Champion!) and down season like this one!

Jenny C. Aker is an Assistant Professor in Development Economics at the Fletcher School and the Economics Department. Prior to joining Tufts University, Aker was a Visiting Fellow at the Center for Global Development (2008-2009) and worked as the Deputy Regional Director for Catholic Relief Services in West and Central Africa (1998-2003). Her research agenda assesses the impact of agro-food market performance on producer and consumer welfare in sub-Saharan Africa, with a specific focus on the impact of information technology on a variety of development outcomes, including agricultural markets, literacy rates and farm behavior. Aker also developed rigorous impact evaluation techniques to measure the effectiveness of development aid, working with NGOs and other development practitioners in sub-Saharan Africa and Haiti. Over the past five years, she has worked as a consultant for a variety of international and non-governmental organizations, including Catholic Relief Services, CHF International, CARE, Helen Keller International, the World Bank and the FAO. Aker received her Ph.D. in Agricultural Economics at the University of California-Berkeley (2008), her MALD from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy (1997) and her AB from Duke University (1993).

Astier Almedom is an applied anthropologist and is a cross-school member of faculty: serving as Professor of Practice in Humanitarian Policy and Global Public Health (Fletcher School), and Director of the International Resilience Program (Institute for Global Leadership) with teaching and advising commitments also to the School of Arts & Sciences (graduate and undergraduate). Almedom received a Graduate Student Council award for "Outstanding Contribution to Graduate Education" in the Graduate School of Arts & Sciences. Almedom's background includes the Henry R. Luce Professorship in Science & Humanitarianism (Tufts University); Lectureship in Medical Anthropology (London School of Hygiene & Tropical Medicine, University of London), and senior management in the National Health Service (London). She has engaged in fieldwork and research methods training of health and community development workers in East Africa, India and Afghanistan over the past twenty years. Almedom is an old member of Wadham College, Oxford, where she received her BA (Hons) and MA in human sciences, and D.Phil. in biological anthropology, Oxford University. Almedom recently served a term as an independent Board member of the Geneva-based Humanitarian Accountability Partnership—International; is a sustaining fellow of the Society for Applied Anthropology; Fellow of the Royal Anthropological Institute; and editorial advisory board member of Waterlines; and African Health Sciences.

Louis Aucoin is an Associate Research Professor in the Institute of Human Security at The Fletcher School. His teaching covers a range of fields from Rule of Law and Transitional Justice to Comparative Law and European Union Law. He comes to Fletcher with significant academic and field experience. He has taught for fifteen years at Boston University School of Law and in various law faculties in France. In his research and writing, he has studied the constitution-making process in post conflict countries and has served as a foreign advisor to the development of the Constitutions in Cambodia, East Timor, Rwanda and Kosovo. In 2000, he served as an acting Minister of Justice for East Timor while it was under UN auspices. He has also served as a Rule of Law Program Officer at the United States Institute of Peace in Wash. D.C. and was the recipient of a United States Supreme Court Fellowship in 2001-2002. His writing deals extensively with French law and often aims to expose jurists in the common law tradition with the workings of systems of the civil law. His recent research projects have involved the use of local customary law as a strategy for the promotion of rule of law post conflict. He is an avid singer and enjoys biking, jogging, and the culinary arts.

Eileen F. Babbitt is Professor of International Conflict Management Practice, Director of the International Negotiation and Conflict Resolution Program and co-director of the Program on Human Rights and Conflict Resolution at The Fletcher School. She is also a Faculty Associate of the Program on Negotiation at the Harvard Law School. Her research interests include identity-based conflicts; coexistence and trust-building in the aftermath of civil war; and the interface between human rights concerns and peacebuilding. Her practice as a facilitator and trainer has included work in the Middle East, the Balkans, and with the United Nations, U.S. government agencies, regional inter-governmental organizations, and international and local NGOs. His undergraduate education was at the London School of Economics and Columbia College.

Christopher (Rusty) Tunnard, Lecturer in International Business, is an independent management consultant and a Visiting Professor at HHL-the Leipzig Graduate School of Management. He has spent more than thirty years in international business and management consulting. Most recently, he was a Director at Arthur D. Little's offices in Cambridge, Brussels and London and had responsibilities for sales and major-case leadership.

In addition, Tunnard was a senior member of ADL's Professional Development staff, and he created and/or delivered a full range of skills courses in consulting and related business skills. Prior to joining ADL, he directed world-wide strategy and technology partnerships for American Express. He has also run his own consulting firm; and has owned and operated a hotel barge company in southern France. He is a recognized expert on innovation and technology-led change in the international communications, travel, and financial service industries, and he has successfully led board-level strategy assignments for some of the world's most respected companies and for many government ministries in Europe, Asia, Africa and the United States. Tunnard has written on the use of the Internet and related technologies in the resistance to the Milosevic regime in Serbia and the 1990s. Currently, he is researching public and private social networks and their impact on organizations, and he is developing analytical tools based on the evolving science of social network analysis.

Phil Uhlmann, Adjunct Assistant Professor, has an extensive background in international banking, finance and economics. He received his Bachelor of Commerce, with a specialization in finance, from the University of British Columbia. Holds graduate degrees in business and international relations, respectively from the Rotman School, University of Toronto and the Maxwell School, Syracuse University. He received his PhD from The Fletcher School. Prior to undertaking his doctoral studies, Uhlmann worked for more than 25 years at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, primarily in Vancouver and Toronto. He has substantial international risk management expertise, particularly in the areas of country risk and international banking systems. His dissertation, "See How They Run: Linkages Between National Elections and the Behavior of International Banking Flows in Developing Countries," deals with how banking funds flow into and out of emerging market countries around national election dates. His research interests include international finance, economics and political business cycles, especially as these areas relate to multinational financial services, country risk management and international relations. He also has a special interest in international Project / Infrastructure Finance and Western Asia, including Armenia where he taught in August 2004. Currently teaches International Finance and International Project / Infrastructure Finance at Bentley University, Waltham, MA. He has taught at Fletcher since 2003.

Peter Uvin is Academic Dean and Henry J. Leir Professor of International Humanitarian Studies at the The Fletcher School. He has written extensively on development, food, NGO scaling up, and the intersection between human rights, development, and conflict resolution. His area of interest is mainly Africa, and especially Burundi and Rwanda. He has been a frequent consultant to bilateral and multilateral agencies working in Africa on these very same issues. His 1998 book "Aiding Violence: The Development Enterprise in Rwanda" won the Herskovits Award for the most outstanding book on Africa. In 2006-2007, he received the prestigious Guggenheim Fellowship, which led to his latest book "Life after Violence. A People's History of Burundi." He also wrote a book on "Development and Human Rights."

Alan M. Wachman, Associate Professor of International Politics, teaches and writes about issues arising from China's foreign relations, emphasizing links between diplomatic history and contemporary international security. He is currently completing a book about Mongolia's national security in the context of emerging rivalries among great powers in Asia. His other books include Why Taiwan: Geostategic Rationales for China's Territorial Integrity and Taiwan: National Identity and Democratization. Wachman writes for policy and academic journals in the U.S. and abroad and is on the editorial board of Asia Policy, China Security, and Issues and Studies. He has been awarded grants for research by the Smith Richardson Foundation, the Chiang Ching-kuo Foundation, and the East West Center, and was a Fellow in the Program on Peace, Governance, and Development in East Asia as a guest lecturer at institutions in Beijing, Seoul, and Tokyo (2008-2009). Wachman served in New York as the president of China Institute in America (1995-1997) and was the American Co-Director of the Johns Hopkins University-Nanjing University Center for Chinese and American Studies in the PRC (1993-1995). He has lived in Nanjing, Taipei and Taichung and travels regularly to Asia. Wachman received an A.B. in Fine Arts and an A.M. and a Ph.D. in Government from Harvard University, as well as an MALD from The Fletcher School.

Peter Walker is the Irwin H. Rosenberg Professor of Nutrition and Human Security at the Friedman School of Nutrition and the Director of the Feinstein International Center, a research center studying on humanitarian crises, human rights and livelihood analysis of marginalize communities. His research at the center focuses on the long term consequence of globalization and climate change for humanitarian action. Active in development and disaster response since 1979, he has worked for a number of British-based NGOs and environmental organizations in several African countries, as well as having been a university lecturer and director of a food wholesaling company. Walker joined the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies in Geneva in 1990 where he was Director of Disaster Policy for 10 years before moving to Bangkok as Head of the Federation's regional programs for Southeast Asia. He has traveled extensively in the Middle East, Africa, Eastern Europe and the Former Soviet Union, and has published widely on subjects as diverse as the development of indigenous knowledge and famine early warning systems, to the role of military forces in disaster relief. Walker was the founder and manager of the World Disasters Report and played a key role in initiating and developing both the Code of Conduct for disaster workers and the Sphere humanitarian standards. He is a founding member of the International Humanitarian Studies Association.

Ibrahim Warde is Adjunct Professor of International Business. He is Carnegie scholar working on informal and underground finance in the Islamic world. His most recent book is The Price of Fear: The Truth Behind the Financial War on Terror, which has been translated into French, Italian, Japanese, and Czech and was selected by Foreign Affairs as one of the best books of the year about economic, social, and environmental issues. His other books include Islamic Finance in the Global Economy. He has previously taught at the University of California, Berkeley, at MIT's Sloan School of Management and at other universities. He is also a writer for Le Monde diplomatique and a consultant. He holds a B.A. from Université Saint Joseph in Beirut, Lebanon, an M.B.A. from France's Ecole des Hautes Etudes Commerciales, and an M.A. and a Ph.D. in Political Science from the University of California, Berkeley.

Patrick Webb is Dean for Academic Affairs and Alexander MacFarlane Professor of Public Policy at the Friedman School of Nutrition Science and Policy. He worked for six years in the United Nations World Food Programme (WFP), most recently as Chief of Nutrition. At WFP he had global responsibilities for emergency nutrition interventions (including the Asian tsunami response), oversaw maternal and child programs in 30 developing countries, and monitored nutrition trends (including in North Korea). He worked on inter-agency coordination and policy harmonization, including service on the Hunger Task Force of the Millennium Project reporting to UN Secretary General Kofi Annan. Earlier, Webb spent 9 years with the International Food Policy Research Institute, stationed mostly in Ethiopia, Niger, and The Gambia, working with national officials on food and agriculture policy and humanitarian relief. He has researched many aspects of malnutrition, humanitarian practice, and household food security. His co-authored book on Famine in Africa, sold out of its first edition and went into a second run. Other publications include 20 book chapters and 50 peer-reviewed journal articles. Patrick holds honorary professor status at the University of Hohenheim (Stuttgart, Germany) as designated by the Minister for Education of the State of Baden-Wuerttemberg.

Lawrence Weiss, Professor of International Accounting, research focuses on three themes. The first is the reorganization of financially distressed firms. He is a recognized expert on US corporate bankruptcy, and has testified before the US Congress on bankruptcy reform. The second is how managers gather and use information for decision making. The third is the transition from country specific accounting standards (Local GAAP) to one set of global standards (IFRS). He has over 40 publications, has been cited over 500 times and won the All Star Paper award from the Journal of Financial Economics. He is the co-author of Corporate Bankruptcy: Economic and Legal Perspectives (1996). Professor Weiss earned his BSc, a Diploma in public accounting and MBA from McGill University and his DBA from Harvard Business School. Prior teaching appointments include Georgetown University, The University of Lausanne, HEC, MIT-Sloan School of Management and INSEAD.

Robert Wilkinson is a Lecturer in International Development, Human Rights and Conflict Resolution. A practitioner with 15 years of experience in some 12 countries in Africa, Asia and Latin America, he has worked for organizations such as the UN Department for Peacekeeping Operations, Oxfam and the Department for International Development (DFID). From 2006 to 2008, he ran the DFID Policy and Research Division Cabinet in London, where he was responsible for a $1 billion budget for global development policy and research work. He is a member of the UK International Advisory Board of conflict and security experts for the Center of Security Sector Management (CSSM), and earned degrees from Stanford University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He has also earned professional qualifications from the University of Geneva (in International Human Rights Law and the Law of Armed Conflict), and the Ashridge Business School (in Senior Organizational Management).

Kim Wilson, Lecturer in Microfinance and Human Security, began her interest in microfinance early in her career as she as a specialist in early stage financing for franchiseable companies. She entered the microfinance field, a promising blend of social impact and commercial sustainability, in its infancy. She started out as a volunteer, a first step that led her to professional employment as a loan officer, MFI director, investment fund advisor for both non-profit and for-profit micro-finance ventures. She also oversaw the microfinance portfolio of a large international NGO. Her work in micro-finance has led her to service in other sectors critical to rural development such as water, agriculture, and education. She is a fellow at Fletcher's Center for Emerging Market Enterprises and also at the Feinstein International Center. She graduated from Wellesley College and Simmons Graduate School of Management. She is interested in the financial resilience of households and markets at the base emerging market economies. She is the 2009 recipient of the James L. Paddock teaching award at The Fletcher School.

David Wirth, Visiting Professor of International Law, holds a primary appointment at Boston College Law School where he is Professor of Law, teaching courses on environmental law, administrative, public international, and foreign relations law. Previously, he was Senior Attorney and Co-director of International Programs for the Natural Resources Defense Council and Attorney-Advisor for Oceans and International Environmental and Scientific Affairs for the U.S. Department of State. A graduate of Yale Law School, he holds undergraduate and graduate degrees in chemistry from Princeton and Harvard, respectively. Wirth served as law clerk to Judge William H. Timbers of U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. He has been the recipient of a Fulbright Scholarship and a National Science Foundation Fellowship. A life member of the Council on Foreign Relations, Wirth has served on advisory boards to a number of institutions of higher learning, domestic agencies, and international organizations, including Vermont Law School, the Environmental Protection Agency and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development. He has been a consultant to the United Nations Development Program, the United Nations Environment Program, the North American Commission for Environmental Cooperation, the C.S.

Mott Foundation, the German Marshall Fund of the United States, and the Belgian State Secretary for Energy and Sustainable Development. Professor Wirth is the author of more than five dozen books, articles, and reports on international environmental law and policy for both legal and popular audiences.

Helen Young is a Research Director at the Feinstein International Center at Tufts University and a Professor at the Friedman School of Nutrition Science and Policy. She is Director of the FIC Darfur Program 'Livelihoods, Vulnerability and Choice', which combines action research, capacity development and institutional change in partnership with local universities, government and civil society groups and a wide range of international organizations. This work has influenced humanitarian, recovery and peace-building policies and programs. Her professional career started in 1985 in Sudan, and she continued to work in Africa in public nutrition and food security for Oxfam GB, UNHCR, the World Bank, FAO and others in Africa. In 2002 she developed the new Sphere Minimum Standards on food security and in 2004 she directed a series of cross-university field studies in Darfur and Libya, which laid the foundations for the current Tufts Darfur livelihoods program. Young is also Co-Editor of the journal Disasters: The Journal of Disaster Studies, Policy and Management (1998-present) and is author of a wide range of books and publications. She holds a Ph.D. from the Council for National Academy Awards, Bournemouth University, UK and a B.Sc. from Oxford Polytechnic.
