Weather, music make for great Spring Fling

by MATT CARSON
Daily Editorial Board

The weather was beautiful. There wasn't a cloud in the sky; perfect shorts weather. The staggering lameness of last year's rain venue of Cousens Gym, and the dark clouds that found their way into the sky over last Friday's block party, turned this year's Spring Fling weather into quite a concern. But prayers were answered and there was not a drop of rain in sight.

So 5,000 people ventured forth onto President's Lawn to hear some music, have some fun, and ingest all kinds of different things.

Legend has it that the concert started at noon, with a reggae band whose name nobody can remember. Of course, noon is kind of early for college students, especially after one of this school's best party nights. So, alas, some of us showed up a tad late.

Thankfully, though, this writer arrived in time to hear Digable Planets do their thing. Now, a live rap show can be really cool, or it can be duller than a butter knife. Digable's album Reachin' is fantastic, so one of those dull shows would have been a crushing disappointment.

They appeared on The Tonight Show last week, backed by two horns, a drummer, a deejay, and the coolest instrument ever invented: an upright bass. Judging from this little sneak preview, we were all in for a great show.

And we were. The best place to be for their set was right up close, where the bass was heavy enough to make your lungs shake. Digable Planets has found the perfect marriage between rap and be-bop jazz, giving new dimensions to both forms of music and creating a new sound all its own.

And the band was tight. Their music would seem to be difficult to reproduce outside of the studio, but they made it look easy. It was sad to see them leave the stage after playing an extended version of "Rebirth of Slick (Cool Like Dat)" with some sensational horn lines. I could have listened to them play all afternoon.

The saddest thing is that the Students see Fling as successful

by JULIE CORNELL
Daily Editorial Board

This year's Spring Fling was considered a success by students from Tufts as well as from other schools. The weather couldn't have been better, and the bands were well-received.

The day started out cold and gray, but improved by the time the concert began, and the good weather lasted the rest of the day. There wasn't a cloud in the sky, and the temperature was a balmy 65-70 degrees.

Many students feared bad weather, which would have forced the concert indoors. Last year's Fling, held in Cousens Gym because of rain, was not as well-attended. "We ditched last year because it was indoors. We went to the movies instead," said junior Robyn Liebman.

Senior Bob Patterson said, "The last Spring Fling I was at was freshman year, and it was The Band and it sucked."

Although many students had either never heard of the bands or didn't like them if they had, they were quite a hit. One junior said, "Well, I'm normally not into that kind of music, but they made great Fling bands. It was a great time."

Steve Conant, a junior at the Berklee College of Music, had never heard of the Digable Planets before the show but after he heard their first song, he said, "This is great. I'm going out to buy the album today."

Senior Harold Cheyne said, "I was really impressed with the Digable Planets, but the Lemonheads were disappointing."

Cheyne's sister, Hilary, a high school sophomore, said, "The Violent Femmes were the best; they were awesome."

Even University President John DiBiaggio could be seen enjoying the day. Many students reported seeing him with his wife, Nancy, and his dog. "I think it's great that the president should interact so closely and be so involved with the student body," said one junior.

"Spring Fling is always held on President's Lawn, but this is the first time the president has really kicked back and been with the students," said one student.

Many students commented on the general atmosphere on campus. "It's nice to look around Tufts on a particular day and finally know that you live on a college campus," said one junior.

Another student said, "it was like an infectious good mood."

Some students commented on the timing of Fling. Many felt that it should be held after classes end. "I think it's pretty silly that we have classes tomorrow," said Patterson yesterday.

British cool as Christopher outlines strategy for Bosnia

LONDON (AP) -- Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher was skeptical Sunday that the signing of an international peace plan by Bosnian Serbs would end their ethnic cleansing campaign, but he fell short of winning British support for military steps designed to force their hand.

At the start of a six-day European trip, Christopher said the Serbs' signing of the plan in Athens would not deter the United States from trying to force an end to the bloodshed in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

'What really matters is what happens on the ground," Christopher said, after speaking twice by phone to President Clinton. "Whether the killing stops, whether the aid is permitted to get into those who need it, whether the heavy weapons are silenced, whether the parties carry out their agreements."

Within hours of Christopher's remarks, Bosnian Serb forces lobbed four shells into Sarajevo, killing at least two people. Two of the shells hit a police station near the presidency building.

Christopher then had dinner with Prime Minister John Major and other British Cabinet ministers. He and Pentagon officials outlined the air attacks and lifting of the arms embargo against the Muslims that Clinton tentatively has approved.

The U.S. presentation elicited a joint statement in which the British government agreed to try to develop "a common position with our partners and allies on stronger measures to be taken if the Serbs fail to implement the peace settlement."

Military steps are among the options under consideration, the statement said. It did not announce Britain's approval of Clinton's military strategy nor make mention of its two main features -- an air attack on Serb artillery and lifting the arms embargo against Bosnia.

The statement began with an appeal to the warring parties in the former Yugoslav republic to come to a cease fire and implement the peace agreement without delay.

In Washington, Clinton released a statement calling approval of the peace plan a "positive step." But he said he will continue planning for military force in case the Serbs "do not act in good faith."

"We will judge intentions by actions," Clinton said in the statement.

Administration officials are concerned that Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic's signing of the international peace plan in Greece was an empty gesture to avoid military action from the West.

Christopher said the Serbs had approved agreements in the past to end the fighting but then went on with the war.

Meanwhile, Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said Clinton had decided on allied aerial attacks on Serbian positions and permitting weapons to get to the outgunned Muslims in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Dole said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" that Clinton had called to tell him the two steps were the key elements in the new strategy Christopher is pressing the European allies and Russia to endorse.

Clinton decided on Saturday to take U.S. strategy in a new and more forceful direction, although he released few details.

While Christopher was en route to London, Karadzic approved the plan to end the fighting and to establish 10 ethnic provinces in the former Yugoslav republic.

The Croats and Muslims had already endorsed the plan worked out by mediators Cyrus R. Vance of the United Nations and Lord Owen of the European Community, even though it would codify some of the Bosnian Serbs' territorial gains. The 15-month war has left some 134,000 people dead or homeless.

"This is good news so far as it goes," Christopher said Sunday. But he noted that approval required the endorsement of the self-styled Bosnian Serb legislature. He said

TCU Senate appoints Trustee reps

Trustee representative positions were appointed by the Tufts Community Union Senate at the final TCU Senate meeting of the year in closed session last night.

Administration and Finance Representative for next year will be Alison Feiner. Representative for Academic Affairs will be Jennifer Fox, and the Development Representative will be Jason Rashkin.

Also approved for the Educational Policy Committee were Adam Pearlman, Sherry Dong, and Ajit Joshi.

At press time, positions for the Peter-Paul Committee on University budgetary issues were still undecided.

Positions for the Allocations Board were also slated to be discussed later in the Senate's agenda.

The Tufts Daily is a non-profit newspaper, published Monday through Friday during the academic year and distributed free to the Tufts community. The Daily is entirely student-run; there are no paid editorial positions. The Daily is printed at Charles River Publishing, Charlestown, MA.

The Daily is located at the back entrance of Curtis Hall at Tufts University. Our phone number is (617) 627-3090. Business hours are 9:00 a.m. - 6:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 1:00 p.m. - 6:00 p.m. on Sunday.

The policies of The Tufts Daily are established by the editorial board. Editorials appear on this page, unsigned. Individual editors are not necessarily responsible for, or in agreement with, the policies and editorials of The Tufts Daily.

The content of letters, advertisements, signed columns, cartoons and graphics does not necessarily reflect the opinion of The Tufts Daily editorial board.

Letters to the Editor Policy

The Tufts Daily welcomes letters from the readers. The letters page is an open forum for campus issues and comments about the Daily's coverage.

Letters must include the writer's name and a phone number where the writer can be reached. All letters must be verified with the writer before they can be published.

The deadline for letters to be considered for publication in the following day's issue is 4:00 p.m.

Due to space limitations, letters should be no longer than 350 words. Any submissions over this length may be edited by the Daily to be consistent with the limit. Letters should be accompanied by no more than eight signatures.

The editors reserve the right to edit letters for clarity. Publication of letters is not guaranteed, but subject to the discretion of the editors.

Letters should be typed or printed from an IBM or IBM-compatible computer in letter-quality or near-letter-quality mode. Letters written on Macintosh computers should be brought in on disk — files should be saved in "text-only" format, and disks should be brought in with a copy of the letter. Disks can be picked up in the Daily business office the following day.

Letters should address the editor and not a particular individual. While letters can be critical of an individual's actions, they should not attack someone's personality traits.

The Daily will not accept anonymous letters or pen names except in extreme circumstances if the Executive Board determines that there is a clear and present danger to the author. The Daily will not accept letters regarding the coverage of other publications, unless their coverage itself has become a newsworthy issue that has appeared in the Daily. The Daily will accept letters of thanks, if space permits, but will not run letters whose sole purpose is to advertise an event.

When writers have group affiliations or hold titles or positions related to the topic of their letter, the Daily will note that following the letter. This is to provide additional information and is not intended to detract from the letter.

Classifieds Information

All Tufts students must submit classifieds in person, prepaid with cash or check. All classifieds must be submitted by 3:00 p.m. the day before publication. Classifieds may also be bought at the information booth at the Campus Center. All classifieds submitted by mail must be accompanied by a check. Classifieds may not be submitted over the phone.

Notices and Lost & Founds are free and run on Tuesdays and Thursdays only. Notices are limited to two per week per organization and run space permitting. Notices must be written on Daily forms and submitted in person. Notices cannot be used to sell merchandise or advertise major events.

The Tufts Daily is not liable for any damages due to typographical errors or misprintings except the cost of the insertion, which is fully refundable. We reserve the right to refuse to print any classifieds which contain obscenity, are of an overtly sexual nature, or are used expressly to denigrate a person or group.

The PC police should stop banning the 'Source'

The Administration has an opportunity this week to dispel the notion that it is willing to compromise free speech. The Primary Source, the campus's conservative student journal, has tried for several years to secure early on-campus housing for its staff so it can publish its annual Orientation Issue. So far, the Administration has denied the Source's requests.

If the Source is denied early housing once again, the Administration will simply be perpetuating its disturbing pattern of selectively permitting free speech — a trend brought to the forefront of campus debate when a forum on gays in the military was canceled earlier this month. Both the Daily and the Observer are permitted to return early to publish their orientation issues, yet interestingly the Source is not. Members of the Source are not barred from publishing, they just are not allowed to move into their campus housing until the incoming freshmen have been thoroughly "diversified" by the Administration's orientation activities.

Several current members of the Source complained last week that they felt the Administration's motives for barring them from campus during orientation were purely political. It certainly appears that by obstructing the Source from publishing, the Administration is living up to its reputation of going to unacceptable lengths to "protect" the Tufts student body from alternative (The Primary Source) or controversial (the forum on gays in the military) viewpoints.

In its defense the Orientation Committee — the administrative body in charge of orientation activities — has cited the need to clean dormitories as a reason for delaying as long as possible the return of upperclassmen. The Orientation Committee has also said that other media and performance groups "perform a function" during orientation, yet simply by printing an orientation issue the Source is performing a function.

As a legitimately recognized Tufts Community Union organization funded by the Student Activities Fee, The Primary Source deserves to enjoy the same courtesy offered to all other TCU organizations that are granted early housing. The Source, by virtue of the fact that it publishes an orientation issue (on-campus housing or not) is performing a genuine function for orientation. By denying the members of the Source the right to early housing, the Administration is proving once again that free speech is not an inalienable right at this University, but simply a privilege given to those with sympathetic or non-controversial points of view. It's time the PC police lay down their weapons and let The Primary Source live on campus during orientation.

Tufts should have cable

To the Editor:

As graduating seniors who have spent a large amount of time here at Tufts working for Tufts University Television (TUTV), we would like to express our disappointment with the Administration for their lack of support.

The Tufts campus has been promised cable television "soon" since 1978. This would include a public access station providing student programming through TUTV. Three years ago, we received detailed plans for a cable system on campus that would be installed by the end of that summer.

Two years ago, Ted Turner was invited to speak at commencement. The irony was that most of the student body could not even watch his Cable News Network during the Persian Gulf War earlier that year.

As a university that claims to be a progressive institution, Tufts has shown itself to be behind other, smaller universities in their commitment to providing their students with a complete range of opportunities to prepare them for a modern world. We only hope that the next generation of Tufts students will fare better.

On weeds and silence

To the Editor:

Nature seems to be such that we will probably always have to deal with weeds in our gardens. Constant vigilance is necessary to prevent them from taking over. And so it is with hateful cowardly bigots who, instead of trying to make a significant and long-lasting contribution to their own lives and others as a result of their own work, put their energy into spreading their hate like weeds in a garden, hoping that their words will be a spark that will ignite into a flame and take over our community and society. We must nurture and fortify the flowers of our garden of people to withstand the onslaughts of their simplistic ideas.

We must not do what I did last April 21 when, upon reading in The Tufts Daily about the swastika graffiti on our campus, I said to myself, "so what is new?" — and this, after I had put together and led a Holocaust Memorial Service for a number of my friends the previous weekend. We must not become bored with or complacent about such events. The Administration and faculty must speak out clearly, in no uncertain terms, and without hesitation in condemning them. We should not have to wait to learn about the impact of these activities on our community from heartrending letters of our students, who call out for a response from the authorities of the University.

We are fortunate that there are a number of groups on campus that are working hard to help the Tufts community deal with tensions surrounding diversity. We are also fortunate to have the Race Awareness course offered through the Ex-College every semester. These efforts need the full measure of support of the faculty and Administration. More must be done. We need a course on diversity awareness. Establishing and providing for such a course deserves at least as much attention as most any other course we offer here. We also ought to provide for more opportunities for dialogue and interaction among our students, as has been called for by numerous applicants for the Wendell Phillips award.

To those Jewish students on campus who have found this past week very disturbing, I suggest reading Alan Dershowitz's book Chutzpah. I recommend the book also to non-Jews who would like to better understand the feelings of many American Jews.

And finally, we can be hopeful that since human beings are much more complex than weeds, there exists the possibility of transforming a weed into a flower.

Activism must last

To the Editor:

This being the last day of classes and the half-way point in my career at Tufts, I would like to reflect on a significant change I have noticed in the general attitude of the student body this semester. Beginning in January it seems that many longstanding concerns have been made important issues on campus by student groups. This surge of activism is something I have wished to see at Tufts for a year and a half now. We, as students, have a lot of power to make ourselves heard, organize into large forces, and influence our University to take a stand on issues that affect people world wide.

ECO has worked very hard this semester to bring the James Bay issue to the forefront of student concerns and hold the University to its stated policy. Tufts, however, has still not made a decision about its investment in Hydro-Quebec.

It is essential to remember, as the summer begins, that this and many other concerns have not been resolved. They are not over. They need to be continually addressed and the University must be pushed to form an opinion. I hope that the activism that began to build this semester continues even more influentially next year. Never again let the Administration silence student opinion, on this or any other issue.

Thanks offered to Fling volunteers

To the Editor:

The Concert Board and the Programming Board would like to thank those students who volunteered one hour of their time to make this years Spring Fling an overwhelming success. If it were not for their dedication to the tradition of Spring Fling it would have not been possible to facilitate the activities of 6000 students and guests. The students who volunteered at this year's Spring Fling can be proud of the fact that they were an integral part in the operations of the concert which witnessed the highest attendance in the history of Spring Fling.

If you missed the private screening of Aladdin for volunteers, you can still pick up your official Spring Fling T-shirt in the Student Activities office this week. This is a small token of our appreciation for the students who are committed to the betterment of social life at Tufts.

Teach-In to protest fees canceled

UNIVERSITY OF CONNECTICUT, Storrs, Conn. -- A teach-in proposed by the Graduate Student Senate to protest fee increases for graduate students has been called off. The university agreed not to increase general university fees that raised registration fees and activity fees for one year. In addition, a committee will be formed to examine the appropriateness of the fee increase, the procedure for raising the fee, and will take into consideration the graduate students' claims that they do not use the university services enough to warrant an increase.

Project against violence is a success

BRIDGEWATER STATE COLLEGE, Bridgewater, Ma. -- The Women's Center and the Student Government Association of Bridgewater State College co-sponsored the second annual Clothesline Project last Wednesday. Three hundred shirts were displayed in Boyden Hall, color-coded to represent the crimes committed against the victim who hangs the shirt as part of the healing process. For example, blue and green are hung for survivors of incest and child abuse; red, pink, and orange are hung for survivors of rape; yellow, beige, and brown are hung for survivors of domestic violence, etc. The Clothesline Project, started in the summer of 1990 with 30 shirts, has grown to over 5000 shirts.

Diversity celebration on campus

UNIVERSITY OF SOUTHERN MAINE, Portland, Me. -- A display of over 100 Maine cultures was held at the University of Southern Maine in order to celebrate the cultural diversity of Maine's people. The keynote speaker of the conference, Maine's Penobscot Nation Governor Jerry Pardilla and his mother, Ann Pardilla, reflected on their lives as Maine Native Americans. Highlights of the conference included a sampling of Maine foods, a performance written by a University of Southern Maine student, 30 presentations including a history of visual artists in Maine and the history of the Passamaquoddy Nation and language, a multicultural festival, and the dedication of the college's Franco-American Heritage Collection, a music and photo exhibit.

Workshop helps season new TAs

YALE UNIVERSITY, New Haven, Conn. -- In an effort to aid new teaching assistants at Yale, a workshop, Working at Teaching, has been developed by veteran TAs to offer classroom strategy for effective teaching. One hundred and fifty graduate students participated in the five workshops that discuss different teaching methods and offer advice on how to handle various situations that arise in the classroom. TAs have found the program "incredibly helpful," and the program is expanding next year to include video equipment so that TAs can tape themselves during section to evaluate their performance. Working at Teaching is funded by the Graduate School's budget.

An elephant as a school mascot? Of what was Barnum thinking?

by JESSICA RUZZ
Daily Editorial Board

P.T. Barnum must have had an absolutely scintillating sense of humor.

With school spirit (and a last, lingering whiff of Wacky Weed) still in the air as we say goodbye to yet another Spring Fling Weekend, let's take a moment of silence to consider that most revered emblem of our beloved school:

The elephant.

One can only imagine the forces that motivated a man who split his administrative time between a circus and an institution of higher education. Barnum, a former trustee of Tufts College, donated Jumbo-the-world's-largest-stuffed-elephant to Tufts. Did his generous act stem from an incredible lack of foresight, or is good ol' P.T. rolling -- with laughter -- in his grave?

The tiger is a common -- and appropriate -- school mascot. Picture it: a sleek, ferocious beast that roars, growls, and plows down everything in its quest for the kill. The knight, too, is a popular choice. A knight sits proud and tall on his white steed -- determined soldier by day, gallant gentleman by night. It may be sexist, but at least it's got dignity.

What can one say about an elephant?

A huge, lumbering mammal with oversized ears and a mating call that resembles the cry of an asthmatic rhinoceros does not a dignified mascot make. As if the situation weren't bad enough, this particular elephant was named Jumbo. In addition to its lack of grace, the elephant lends itself -- and our beloved University -- to all sorts of unseemly terms and phrases. Here are a few that aren't listed in the Pachyderm (which, by the way, means "thick-skinned;" to what or whom might that refer?) Glossary:

"Jumbo Cheerleaders" -- "We've got spirit, We've got spunk, Come on Jumbos, Shake your trunk!!" Those poor women.

"Jumbocentrism" -- The disease that plagues those who don't listen to radios, watch TV, or read the newspaper; allows them to forget that the rest of the world exists. This deadly affliction manifests itself in dangerous ways (i.e. a certain Assistant Features Editor, whose name will remain undisclosed in order to protect the clueless, had no idea whatsoever that the rest of the world was changing its clocks early one Sunday morning; as a result, said editor came rather close to missing her physics exam that Monday morning).

"Hey, man, slip me some tusk." -- A Jumbocized variation on an innocent greeting takes on a questionable hue. Good thing nobody actually says that. They don't, do they?

"Peanuts" -- What a disgruntled former Dining Services worker claims the University pays its employees.

"Elephant's Feet" -- Those huge, smelly grey trash cans in the dining halls. It's a good thing Jumbo didn't live to see those...

"Jumbo Columbo" -- Unofficially coined in the 1973 yearbook. See above reference to Wacky Weed.

"Jumbo Tuition" -- Tell us something we don't already know.

Of course, these Jumboisms (there's another one) are all well and good now that the animal in question resides between the insulation and the sheetrock of Barnum Hall. Be warned, though: its grandchildren may be out for revenge.

The elephant never forgets.

The Features Department would like to use this space to say that you should both recycle this newspaper and write Features.

An Open Letter to the Tufts Community:

Last week, the Dean and Associate Dean of Students and the Director of Student Activities met with a group of students calling themselves respect. The students raised questions about the Controversial Programs Policy and how it affected the recently proposed forum on Gays and Lesbians in the Military, and voiced other concerns. This letter attempts to respond to some of the questions about the policy and to other issues raised in the discussion.

The Controversial Programs policy was adopted in 1988 by the faculty/student Committee on Student Life. Its purpose is to insure that there is sufficient planning and security so that a program may be carried out successfully. The University pays the cost of any additional security required. In 1992, the policy was modified to direct planners of controversial programs to avoid scheduling their events during the final two weeks of the semester, thereby assuring that programs would occur while the media were still operating, providing an opportunity for follow-up campus programming, and avoiding conflicts with reading period and exams. Until this proposed event, the policy had never prevented a program from taking place. In this case, the planners' change of date from early April to May 2nd created the conflict with the policy. For those who believe that the program was not approved because it conflicts with the University's views on gays in the military, we excerpt from President DiBiaggio's letter of February 3, 1993 to President Clinton:

> "I... applaud your decision that the military no longer ask recruits whether they are homosexual [and] encourage you to take additional steps to allow homosexuals and bisexuals to serve openly and without fear of punishment... in our nation's armed services ..."

Copies of the letter in its entirety may be obtained from the Office of the President or the Dean of Students.

In response to the issues raised in our discussion, the following initiatives are either underway or will be undertaken in the fall:

1. Whatever the merits of the University's intentions, it is clear from the campus response that we must rethink the policy. Thus, we are in agreement with respect's call for reexamination of the policy by a committee. The Committee on Student Life has already expressed its desire to lead campus discussion on the issue. As established by the faculty bylaws, the voting membership of the Committee is six faculty members and five students. The Committee will invite a group of student leaders to work with its members to provide broader participation in the discussion and eventual formulation of policy.

2. We also concur with the sentiment that there should be an opportunity for students, faculty and administrators to work together to create a multicultural campus. In the fall, the Committee on Diversity will extend an invitation to Tufts students, faculty and staff to become active members of the Committee.

3. The mandate for the Committee on Intellectual Life is to improve the quality of life on campus by increasing out-of-class contact between faculty and students. The Committee will be urged to promote and support programs which address a broad range of topics, including those dealing with the diverse experiences within our community. The cultural resource centers will make available to the Committee information about the prolific programming they offer, some of it in collaboration with the Lecture Series, in the hope that such programming may be more widely attended.

Beyond these undertakings which address issues raised by respect, we wish to institute another structural change. Our offices have always been open to students, whether as individuals or as groups and will continue to be. These recent conversations, however, have led us to believe that a more formal, structured opportunity for discussion of campus issues is necessary. The Dean of Students will invite students to meet with her and members of her staff — monthly or every other week, depending upon the wishes of the group — throughout the year, so that administrators and students may routinely talk about campus issues. Although the core of participants will be invited student leaders, there will be an open invitation for other students to meet with the group.

We value the opportunity to have met with those concerned about these and other issues, and consider the continuation of the dialogue and focus on pro-active efforts to be a priority for the institution. We hope these initiatives will encourage intellectual discourse on controversial subjects and will work to achieve an environment in which such discourse can be safely engaged.

As the major motion picture studios prepare for the profitable summer season, audiences brace themselves for the glut of action-adventure, buddy-cop, and tear-jerking sagas that will begin to invade the theaters as the weather gets warmer. But for those longing for something more than the typical formulas, Lost in Yonkers provides the perfect solution. It is an entertaining movie that blends outstanding acting performances with superb writing: a combination that is almost always a guarantee for success.

Film Review

Lost in Yonkers is the screen adaptation of Neil Simon's Pulitzer Prize and Tony Award winning play. The movie begins with a fairly simple premise: a father who has fallen on hard financial times has to head South for a new business opportunity. A widower with two sons, he is forced to leave his boys behind in the care of his mother and sister. This sets the scene for the Summer of 1942 that the two boys, Jay (Brad Stoll) and Artie (Mike Damus), spend with their quirky extended family in Yonkers, New York.

Although the premise may seem basic, it is enriched by the intricate relationships within the family, and the outstanding performances of a talented cast. However, these talented actors would be nowhere without the fantastic writing of Simon's play.

Simon is truly gifted; the writing is clever, humorous, and tender all at the same time. The snappy one-liners and sarcastic wit of Jay and Artie, the random statements from Aunt Bella (Mercedes Ruehl), and the quirky tendencies of the rest of the family, have the audience reeling with laughter.

This movie is not all laughter, though. There are some particularly touching and sensitive scenes, between Bella and her mother (Irene Worth), and Bella and her boyfriend (David Stratihan), that tug on the proverbial heartstrings of the viewer. The movie has a few powerful arguments between family members that demonstrate Simon's ability to create tension for a dramatic effect that captivates the audience.

Newcomers Stoll and Damus, who play Jay and Artie, are both excellent. Their boyish innocence, youthful exuberance, and authentic New York accents enable the boys to hold their own with the more experienced actors in the film, and at times they even steal the scene.

Oscar-winning actress Ruehl also delivers an outstanding performance as Bella, the boys' slightly mentally handicapped aunt. She brings a sense of child-like innocence combined with inner strength to her rich and demanding role. Richard Dreyfuss is excellent as Louie, the boys' tough gangster uncle and some of the film's best scenes take place as Louie shows the boys how to have fun in Yonkers.

Worth delivers a sound performance as the strict and domineering grandmother. Half-way through the movie, the audience fears her as much as the boys do. And Stratihan rounds out the cast as Bella's shy boyfriend, creating a character who effectively stands his own among the more volatile personalities.

Lost in Yonkers is simply a good movie about everyday life. However, when viewed with a finer lens, it is a movie about family struggles, inner conflicts, and, most importantly, relationships. The movie successfully mixes humor with drama as the story and the secrets of one Yonkers' family unfold. The almost flawless script is brought to life by some of today's finest actors. With that dynamite combination, Lost in Yonkers is a must-see for anyone planning to spend time in a movie theater this summer.

John Cleese (right) steals the show in Splitting Heirs, which also stars Eric Idle.

'Splitting Heirs' falters plotlessly

by MATT CARSON
Daily Editorial Board

It's an acquired taste, really. When British humor crosses the Atlantic, it doesn't necessarily land in every airport in America. For some, there is life after Monty Python. For others, that quirky and unique style of humor had its swan song in Monty Python's The Meaning of Life.

Film Review

So how does one appraise Python alumnus Eric Idle's most recent effort, Splitting Heirs? It's tough to call. It has some very funny moments, and some that fall flat on their faces. Idle's script is at times very witty, and at others mind-numbingly simple. And even the humor and wit may not appeal to some, and you know who you are.

Idle plays Tommy Patel, the rightful heir to an enormous fortune and the Dukedom of Bournemouth. As the film opens, he relates the troubled history of the Bournemouth clan and the scandal that has fallen upon the many dukes throughout the years.

The Bournemouth curse hits Tommy quite hard. He was born Henry Butterfly Rainbow Peace Bournemouth to the American hippie Duchess Lucinda (Barbara Hershey), who accidentally forgets her infant son in a restaurant. There is a mix-up at the police station and he is adopted by a Hindu family named the Patels, who give him the name Tommy. By coincidence, Tommy becomes a stockbroker with the Bournemouths' firm.

The infant claimed by the Bournemouths grows up and is educated in America, to return and inherit the title of Duke. He is played quite well by the always likable Rick Moranis. By another coincidence, Tommy is given the job of showing him around London and they become fast friends.

That is, until Tommy discovers that he is actually the child whom the tabloids dubbed the Bournemouth Baby. Henry has the title, the money, the gorgeous fiancee (Catherine Zeta Jones), and everything that should be Tommy's.

At this point, Tommy enlists the help of a conniving ambulance chaser named Shadgrind, who has it in mind that the "accidental" death of Henry would help their case a whole lot. John Cleese plays Shadgrind exactly how one would expect the inimitable Cleese to play him, and steals every single one of his scenes (one of the movie's best jokes is how Cleese is listed in the opening credits). He is the best part of Splitting Heirs, and makes the film worth seeing.

When Cleese is not on the screen, though, Splitting Heirs finds its best moments in its jokes aimed at the English and their perceived attitudes toward drinking, sex, and class structure. This is where most of the wit mentioned above is found.

These jokes and the Cleese character comprise about half of the film. The rest is unexciting and tolerable at worst, and pretty funny at best. There are only a few belly laughs in this film, but there are numerous mild chuckles.

It is apparent that Idle, when writing this film, felt that the laughs were more important than the story, which is more or less true. The plot is nothing new, and it bends over backwards to make sure that there is some sort of tenuous connection between all of the characters. There is very little to engage the viewer on any intellectual level. But Splitting Heirs is a good time and it leaves no aftertaste. It's not a bad movie to see during finals.

The A to Z year in the wide, wonderful world of A&E

by THE A&E DEPARTMENT
Daily Editorial Board

Well, the 1992-93 school year is just about done. Since this is our last issue before Commencement, we here at the Art and Entertainment Department have decided to sum up some of the year's happenings in one grand A-Z list o' Art. There has never been a lack of events to cover either on our own campus or in Boston...so, here are a few of them:

All the different rumors about who was playing at Spring Fling; but, it worked out great, right?
Boston Ballet from Don Quixote to Cinderella.
Campus groups with new releases: Gus, Frankly Scarlett, The Beelzebubs, Thumper, and The Jackson Jills.
Dumb, dumb movies like Sniper, Falling Down, Sidekicks, and Three Ninjas.
Excellent films, even if not all were recognized at the Oscars: Like Water for Chocolate, Aladdin, Malcolm X, Under Siege (Carson's pick), and Glen Gary Glen Ross.
Finally Billy and Allison hooked up on Melrose Place! You have to love the Friday Fox Updates.
Greasy bacon strips and cheese curls as fine art.
Happy happy joy joy at all the Animation Festivals.
Icelandic Cinema at the Museum of Fine Arts (O.K., we didn't ever review this one, but it did take place. And Icelandic Cinema? Who knew?)
Jills and Bubs bring home first place in the nation's first collegiate a capella competition from Carnegie Hall.
Kolumns -- It's Just and Flick This, we had to mention them somewhere, and we needed a K so badly that spelling lost its mportance. Perhaps we should get hooked on phonics.
Letterman announces his move to CBS this summer. At last, someone to nail the lids down on Arsenio's and Jay's coffins.
Madonna's book Sex, for which we sported a whopping 50 bucks, was really not worth it (except for the great single of "Erotica")!
New name for our department. How many of you noticed we started the year as Arts and ended as Art and Entertainment?
O.K. we'll admit it, all those horrible CDs we review? We get them sent to us by the record companies. We're too cheap to buy any of the good stuff.
Peter Gabriel had a new album and he's touring this summer. We love him and we'll forgive that little strong-man outfit at the Grammys!
Quality writing from all of our new writers (thanks, guys!).
Really fabulous fashions seen at BU.
Spin Doctors dissed us hard for Fall Concert. Feel free to burn their CDs, or to thank them for leaving us with so much cash to blow on Spring Fling.
Totally cool interviews with people like Eric Idle and John Turtoro.
Unforgiven. The Clint-man finally gets recognized by Hollywood as the icon, nay, legend he is!
Vile coffee consumed for a Weekender article on coffee shops. Weekender makes a come-back for this year and becomes its own department for the spring semester.

Xylophones with the Violent Femmes. Why did half the crowd raise their hands when they asked who thought it began with a Z? Maybe they were all engineers who need only one semester of English. Go, Jumbos!

Y'all come down next year and write for us, ya hear!

Z....hmm, what starts with "Z"? We can't think of anything, and wementioned that Xylophone thing where it properly belongs. Have a great summer and see you next year!

We here at the Daily would like to take this opportunity to wish you luck on your exams!

Each year, African American, Asian American and Hispanic American students lend their time and energy to support the recruitment efforts of the Office of Undergraduate Admissions. Current students have been overnight hosts to over 300 high school students, have written articles for the S.C.O.P.E. newspaper, The Inside Story, given campus tours, worked at registration tables, performed skits, dances and play routines for entertainment purposes, and came in late night to phone prospective students of color about the opportunities available at Tufts. It is because of their commitment to these efforts that we can truly claim that Tufts has a diverse and multicultural university community.

The Admissions Office staff is looking forward to seeing each and everyone of you return next year to continue these efforts to enroll the best and the brightest students of color at Tufts. But, before you take off to summer internships and jobs, and/or relaxing vacations, we just wanted to let the entire Tufts community know that you took a part in shaping the Class of 1997:

Thank You
S.C.O.P.E. Volunteers!

Bulls destroy Atlanta

Take a commanding 2-0 lead in series

CHICAGO (AP) -- Michael Jordan scored 29 points and Scottie Pippen added 25 Sunday, leading the two-time champion Chicago Bulls to a 117-102 victory over Atlanta and a 2-0 lead in their best-of-5 first-round NBA playoff series.

Jordan hit a desperation 45-footer at the first-half buzzer to open a 56-49 lead and the Bulls built on it with a 15-7 run to open the second half for a 71-56 lead that wasn't seriously challenged.

Dominique Wilkins led the Hawks with 37 points and Kevin Willis had 26.

Pippen, B.J. Armstrong and Bill Cartwright scored Chicago's first 15 points in the second half before Armstrong and Jordan hit 3-pointers as the Bulls cruised to an 85-70 lead going into the final period.

They made it 90-70 before the Hawks put on a nine-point run led by Wilkins but Jordan converted a three-point play to halt the march.

The Bulls never trailed in the first quarter and had a 20-13 lead before the Hawks battled back and cut it to 24-22 on a three-point play by Willis.

Steve Henson gave Atlanta its first lead with a 3-pointer to open the second period and Henson hit another 3-pointer for a 30-27 lead. But the Bulls went on a run that included 3-pointers by Trent Tucker and John Paxson for a 38-30 advantage.

Wilkins keyed a 10-4 run that cut it to 41-40 but the Hawks were unable to regain the lead. After Jordan put the Bulls ahead 51-42, Wilkins and Willis rallied Atlanta within four before Jordan's desperation 3-pointer that set the tone for the second half.

Lakers 86 Suns 81

PHOENIX (AP) -- Suddenly it was Showtime again.

"James Worthy and A.C. Green and Byron Scott. You know, those guys have been in the playoffs almost 10 years," Vlade Divac said Sunday after the Lakers shocked the Phoenix Suns again with an 86-81 victory for a 2-0 lead in the best-of-5 first-round series. "They know how to play under pressure."

The Lakers were relentless in the fourth quarter, holding the Suns to 4-for-21 shooting and 11 points. The Suns did not have a basket in the last 5:56.

Worthy tied it 80-80 with 2:31 remaining, hitting a 3-pointer that beat the 24-second buzzer.

"James hit that big 3," said Charles Barkley, who missed all seven of his shots in the fourth quarter. "You know, if he misses that and we score, we've got a five-point lead, but that ties it up."

Sixty-eight seconds later, Divac beat the shot clock again with a jump hook, giving the Lakers the points they needed against tentative, mistake-prone Phoenix.

Divac, who had 19 points, drove the baseline for a dunk with 46 seconds left, and Scott hit a late field goal to end the Suns' last hope.

"We did the things to make the game close in the final few minutes. That was our plan going in," said Scott, who scored all 17 of his points in the first and fourth quarters.

The Lakers, the only team with a losing record (39-43) in the playoffs, have three chances to become the first No. 8 conference seed to oust a No. 1 under the 16-team playoff format. The next two games are in the Forum in Inglewood, Calif., followed by one more here if the Suns can win twice on the road.

Phoenix, 62-20 in the regular season with a 35-6 record at home, led by six midway through the fourth quarter before Divac led the Lakers back.

Danny Ainge's jumper gave the Suns a 78-72 lead with 5:56 left, but that was their last basket.

Scott sank a 3-pointer with 5:13 to go, Elden Campbell dunked after Worthy drove across the key for a spectacular assist, and the Suns never led by more than three points again.

Barkley, second-best in NBA playoff history with a .569 field-goal percentage, hit 8 of 24 shots. The 11-point total in the fourth period was a Phoenix playoff record for fewest points in a quarter, and 81 points was their lowest total this season.

"Our offense was so out of sync. I felt the team was not playing with confidence at the offensive end," said Phoenix point guard Kevin Johnson, who had 16 assists.

Barkley finished with 18 points and 21 rebounds. Richard Dumas and Tom Chambers also scored 18 points each.

"I played as hard as I could. I just didn't play well," Barkley said.

Johnson saw his first playoff action after missing the last two regular-season games with a strained knee. He had 14 points and 16 assists, but his presence was most noticeable playing defense against the Lakers' Sedale Threatt.

Crew weathers storm, literally; Jumbos prepare for Nationals

by TAMMY DONROE
Daily Staff Writer

Despite all the mishaps that can occur during a crew race -- cox boxes going out, seats coming off the rollers, oars coming out of the oarlocks -- one can usually count on the boat staying afloat. After all, there are only a few people who routinely get wet: the coxswains of the winning boats who get to take a victory lap, the bow of the boat that gets to eat the stern's backsplash, and the occasional individual who miscalculates her stroke and catches a crab while rowing without her feet tied in. However, last week's race on the Charles against the University of New Hampshire proved to be more stress-inducing than usual, as several Tufts boats actually sank.

A rough crosswind and extremely choppy waters prevailed last Saturday morning while the only three races of the day took place. The novice women's first boat took UNH despite the terrible conditions, but the second women's boat along with the novice men suffered losses.

The varsity men's second boat began their race, but 500 meters after the start, the boat began to swamp. Sophomore Mark Hillman said, "The water was up to our waist at that point, but we continued rowing. Once it was up to our chest, we stopped to untie our feet and remove our oars. It was then that the boat capsized and we started to swim to shore."

Several launches were nearby to help taxi the oarsmen back to shore. Although no injuries were sustained, there was the potential danger of being hit by oars or riggers as the boat flipped. This -- combined with the water's frigid temperature and the fact that no life jackets were on board -- made for a difficult and dangerous situation that the oarsmen handled well.

The varsity men weren't the only ones to experience such a fate; the varsity women's second boat sunk as well. However, they were relatively close to the dock and were pulled back to safety by their oars. Needless to say, the remainder of the races were canceled.

Such miserable conditions couldn't have occurred at a worse time: the New Englands were only a week away and everyone wanted to race the course all out once more before then. Still, Tufts performed respectably at the New Englands in Worcester on Spring Fling Saturday.

The conditions were perfect as there was only a slight tail wind that shifted later in the day. The temperature was warmer than most would have liked. But that didn't seem to affect the varsity men's second boat who were the big winners of the day.

In their first race, the men finished third of four crews in their heat. Nevertheless, an outstanding performance in the finals yielded a second place finish with only the Coast Guard outsprinting them. It was their best race this season, and since they fell only to the overall winners, Coast Guard, their entry was certainly no embarrassment. The win was well-deserved after the episode last weekend. After such a finish, they should fare well at the Nationals.

The varsity men's first boat experienced problems, and did not place in the top five after a disappointing row. Although they will probably not appear at the Nationals, good team effort marked their season.

The varsity women's first boat took fourth in a close race with Connecticut College and Williams, who took second and third place, respectively. UMass continued to dominate the women's races, taking first place as well as the overall women's team trophy for another year.

Stroke Carrie Roche said, "This was the first time [this particular] eight had raced together all year so we did well considering. It's been a crazy season; things have continued to work against us from boats sinking, to rowing in the snow at the end of April."

Still, their strong performance will more than likely be rewarded by an invitation to the Nationals. Varsity women's coach Jay Britt said, "Technically, only the top three qualify, but the race was close enough that they should be invited."

Similarly, the varsity women's second boat had a strong finished, taking a third place in the finals. Conn. College took second, and

EARN $5000 IN ONE WEEK

Well, actually you can't, but we did, and for a good cause. In just 7 days the Tufts SeniorFund has received nearly $5,000 in donations, pledges, and event proceeds.

This year, in lieu of the Senior Class Gift, the Senior Class Council has established the SeniorFund, a financial aid gift to Tufts to benefit both incoming and future students. There are two components to the gift: The first part is a monetary gift to Financial Aid to help meet the needs of the Class of 1997. The second part will involve establishing an ongoing scholarship fund in hopes that future Senior Classes will participate in raising money. We have set an ambitious goal of $30,000, and your participation will ensure our success.

Please give a thought to supporting Tufts' students for the years to come.

Thank you to the following people who have already given to the SeniorFund:

Presidents of major universities rake in the big bucks

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Most of the presidents of 190 leading colleges and universities are receiving more than $155,000 a year in pay and benefits and top earners exceed $400,000, said a survey released Sunday.

The survey by The Chronicle of Higher Education showed that Boston University President John Silber topped the list, receiving $414,715 in 1991-92 in salary, bonuses, deferred income and benefits.

In salary alone, Vanderbilt University President Joe B. Wyatt was the 1991-92 leader at $395,725 compared to $275,000 for Silber. The trade paper reported that Wyatt's total compensation last year was $410,916.

The income for presidents at some private colleges has become increasingly controversial, because of spiraling tuition costs and little or no pay hikes for professors.

Those who defend the pay scales for college heads say the job is demanding, and the average salary is far below those of chief executives in private industry. But critics say there are scores of qualified educators who would work for less because of the non-monetary rewards.

The Chronicle of Higher Education said it also surveyed other top earners at the colleges and found some made far more than the presidents of the schools.

For example, Cornell University's Wayne Isom, professor of cardiothoracic surgery, received $1.78 million in pay and benefits in 1991. He was followed by 13 other medical school professors, the newspaper said. Topping the compensation list among non-physicians was Laurance Hoagland, president of Stanford University's management company, who was paid $662,280 in 1992.

The survey was based on tax forms that all private non-profit institutions must file with the Internal Revenue Service under a 1987 law.

The education journal said the form may not always be complete but is the best available information. The survey classified the institutions as research universities, doctorate-granting and liberal arts.

Other survey findings:

--Of 33 research universities, Boston, Columbia and Vanderbilt reported paying their presidents more than $400,000 in pay and benefits. Twelve others were paid more than $300,000, and only two were paid less than $200,000.

--Lehigh University President Peter W. Likins was paid $263,120, topping the list of 20 heads of doctorate-granting institutions. Eight of the presidents in the category are priests who donated their pay to their religious orders.

--The lowest paid college president was University of Denver Chancellor Daniel Ritchie, a former cattle rancher and corporate executive who forgoes his college salary, receiving $1 a year in nominal pay.

"It would have been nice to beat Conn. College since we already have this season, but they had a really fast sprint," said starboard Erica Hoffa. Tufts still has the chance to reassert its strength at the Nationals.

The novices greatly contributed to the team effort as the novice men placed third. The novice women's first boat also took third in a close race, and the second boat placed fifth. Such novice talent will help in creating an even stronger varsity team next season.

Booze aplenty

Lemonheads took the stage immediately afterwards. Their lackluster set would have been a waste of everyone's time, had it not afforded us all a good opportunity to stroll around the lawn bumping into friends and trees.

After the Lemonheads got out of our way, the three members of Violent Femmes took their places on the stage. Again, the best vantage point for this set was right down in front, on the fringes of (if not in) the mosh pit.

The Femmes' style contrasts sharply from Digable Planets, and it was a nice change to round out the afternoon. They squeezed a whole lot of sound out of their sparse instrumentation (just a drum kit, a guitar, and a bass), and lead singer Gordon Gano's high-pitched voice sounded even stronger now than it did in 1982 on their self-titled debut album.

And they seemed to be enjoying themselves. It's tough to imagine how many different ways a musician could react when confronted with college audiences, arguably the drunkest and rowdiest of all crowds. It occurred to me that the Femmes probably would have been disappointed by anything less.

Eight arrested, seven policemen injured at college party

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) -- Seven police officers who tried to break up a Satanic party near the Rhode Island School of Design campus were injured Sunday when they were attacked with rocks and bottles, police said.

Police Chief Bernard Gannon said officers responded to reports that about 200 college students were having a party inside an abandoned railroad tunnel on the city's historic Benefit Street.

"Every available car in the city of Providence arrived to try to quell the disturbance," Gannon said. "We have a lot of campuses that are really taxing our resources here at the police department."

"When police went to disperse them, they were met by a hostile crowd who pelted them with rocks and stones," Gannon said.

Police arrived at 12:45 a.m. to find the crowd, most believed to be college students, drinking and performing Satanic-like rituals, Gannon said.

"They were in various forms of dress, dancing around bonfires, beating drums in rhythm. ... One could assume it was some type of Satanic ritual," Gannon said.

Police arrested five RISD students, one Brown University student, one Rhode Island college student and one student from a Massachusetts college and charged them with disorderly conduct, assault and resisting arrest.

They were arraigned at the police station Sunday morning and released on bail, Gannon said.

Gannon said four patrolmen and three sergeants were injured trying to quell the disturbance. One sergeant, he said, needed 60 stitches in his face after he was hit with a brick.

Gannon wouldn't release the names of the injured officers.

Three police cruisers were damaged when students threw rocks and torches at them, breaking windows and denting the sides, he said.

has to offer as well as the warmth and kindness shown to them by the students, faculty and administrators.

We would like to give a special thanks to the students who volunteered to host the four hundred seniors who spent the night at Tufts. We are also very grateful to the students who escorted people to classes and lunch, gave tours and answered questions at the information booth. We appreciate the support of the faculty who allowed the seniors to attend classes and the kindness of the staff who opened up their offices to our guests.

ACS says thanks

To the Editor:

On behalf of American Cancer Society's Somerville Unit, I would like to thank everyone at Tufts University who contributed to the overwhelming success of the recent American Cancer Society Jail & Bail fundraiser held on campus.

Over $6,000 was raised during this event, and these funds will support ongoing cancer research in Massachusetts, prevention and early detection programs, and services to cancer patients in our community.

The support of Tufts staff, faculty, and students alike is gratefully acknowledged. Thank you all for helping me to make a difference in the lives of many people indeed.

Cafe says thanks for success

To the Editor:

We at the Midnight Cafe would like to thank everyone who has helped to make us a success for a second year in a row. We would like to especially thank Dining Services, Residential Life, and everyone who has performed. Without your perseverance we never could have pulled it off.

Have a great summer and we look forward to seeing you next year.

Disconnecting your phone service has never been easier.

Now there's an easy way to disconnect your phone service. It's automated, and you can do it from a touch-tone phone anywhere in the New England Telephone area. To place an order to disconnect your service just call 1 800 244-3737 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. weekdays, and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturdays.

Here's how it works. After you call, you'll be asked to enter your telephone number and customer code. This code is the three-digit number that appears after your telephone number on the Summary of Account page of your bill. Without this code the transaction can't be completed.

If you use this system, your final bill will be sent to your existing billing address. So remember to file a change of address card with the post office.

Call 1 800 244-3737. We'll be happy to disconnect you.

Government blames secessionist rebels for assassination

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) -- A cyanide capsule found on a suicide bomber's body and other clues point toward Tamil rebels in the assassination of President Ranasinghe Premadasa, police said Sunday as huge crowds gathered to pay last respects.

Tamil rebels have waged a 10-year secessionist war that has claimed thousands of lives, including several prominent figures killed in suicide bombings. Premadasa and at least 23 others were killed Saturday when a man on a bicycle triggered explosives on his body, turning the route of a May Day parade into a scene of blood and panic.

The president's death -- and the accusation of Tamil involvement -- threatened to plunge the island deeper into turmoil.

About 100,000 people, some weeping and beating their chests, mourned Premadasa, whose body lay in state at his home. Many waited hours in lines that stretched several miles.

"The Tamil Tigers are the prime suspect in the assassination," the nation's top police official, Lionell Gunatilleke, told a news conference Sunday.

Earlier, a policeman displayed the bomber's severed head to journalists.

Similar Tamil attacks have killed other military officers and politicians, including former Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi in May 1991.

Gunatilleke said many of the guerrillas carry cyanide capsules around their necks and commit suicide when cornered or captured. Gunatilleke said police found a broken cyanide capsule embedded in the neck of Premadasa's assassin.

Gunatilleke also blamed Tamil gunmen for the slaying last week of Lalith Athulathmudali, a leading opposition figure.

Rebels have denied involvement in either attack.

But authorities could step up a crackdown on the rebels in northern and eastern Sri Lanka, where fighting has been concentrated. Tamils claim discrimination at the hands of the Sinhalese-dominated government.

The death of Premadasa -- who held all important Cabinet posts, including the Ministry of Defense -- also left a power vacuum. It was feared a power struggle might ensue between the ruling party and the nation's opposition groups.

"The shape of things to come is uncertain," said Chanaka Amaratunga, leader of a party allied with the government. "One feels the country may return to its past violent times."

His wife, Hema, and his 23-year-old daughter, Dulanjalee, who had just returned from London, broke into tears, threw their arms around each other and buried their faces in a flag on the coffin.

he was "hopeful but skeptical."

Almost simultaneously Momcilo Krajisnik, the Bosnian assembly leader, announced the plan in its present form was unacceptable and that it required further work.

The assembly had rejected the plan last week. It is scheduled to act on ratification again Wednesday. The Serbs have demanded that it include corridors linking territory they control.

A senior U.S. official traveling with Christopher acknowledged the allies' doubts about military intervention.

"I know the allies have strong views about some of the issues, and I expect we will have a good discussion on the issues," he said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Christopher was briefed on the peace talks from Athens by U.S. envoy Reginald Bartholomew and then directed the American diplomat to join him on the six-day trip to London, Paris, Moscow, Brussels and Bonn.

Christopher began his mission with the hope that British loyalty to the transatlantic alliance would win out over British concern that lifting the arms embargo to help the Muslims would spread the fighting to other Balkan states.

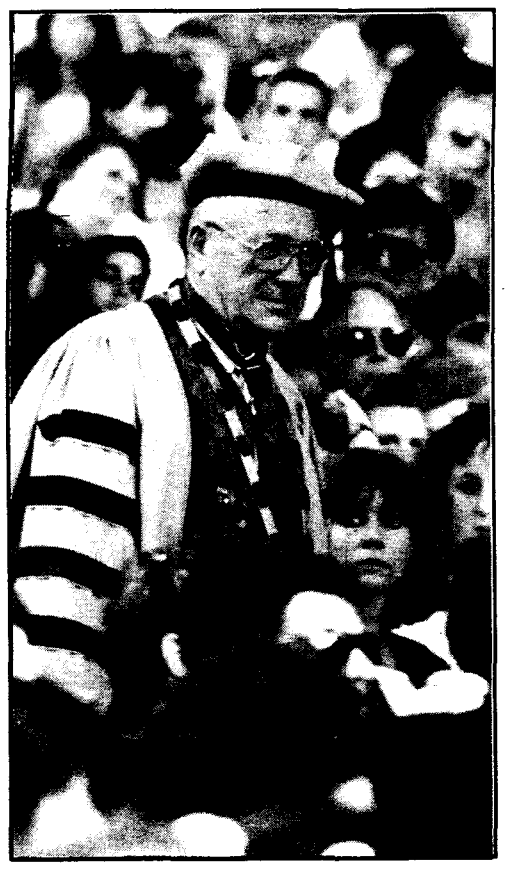
SEMESTER IN REVIE



Tufts Chancellor and 16-year President Jean Mayer died of a heart attack New Year's Day at the age of 72.

Mayer had been vacationing in Florida at the time. He was traveling to the Sarasota airport to return to Boston from Florida when he suffered the heart attack.

Mayer was a world renowned nutritionist, food stamp advocate, and advisor to three US presidents. He served as Tufts president from 1976 to 1992 before being appointed Chancellor of the University last September.

As chancellor, he was coordinating major development projects including the Tufts International Research Center and the Biotechnology Research Park on the Grafton campus.

In 1969, Mayer organized the White House Conference on Food, Nutrition and Health for President Richard Nixon. This conference led to the introduction of food stamps in 307 countries as well as the expansion of the federal school lunch program for poverty-stricken children.

Mayer participated in the French Resistance during World War II and was captured by the Germans. He later escaped by shooting a guard.

After the war, Mayer studied physiological chemistry at Yale before serving as an advisor for the United Nations Economic and Social Council and Food and Agricultural Organization.

Citing the University's recently-revised controversial speaker policy, the Administration, led by Dean of Students Bobbie Knable and Associate Dean of Students Bruce Reitman, canceled a May 2 forum which was to address the issue of gays in the military.

The policy, amended last year after the visit of Khallid Abdul Muhammed, dictates that the University not sponsor speakers deemed controversial within two weeks of final exams. The forum would have brought together an array of panelists including Vietnam veteran Chuck Magness, now an openly gay man; Terry Jeffrey, the policy director for 1992 US presidential candidate Pat Buchanan; and Massachusetts Congressman (D-Newton) Barney Frank, an openly gay man. The forum represented several months of work, according to Chairman of the Lecture Series Ken Archer.

In addition to the panel discussion, the forum was to include opportunities for campus dialogue on the issue, including an advertisement in the Daily providing space for readers to write their opinions and a large sheet of paper in the Campus Center serving the same purpose. Archer said the sentiments raised would be compiled into booklets and distributed to administrators, resident assistants, and student leaders.

The Administration's decision caused an uproar on campus, with many students decrying the Administration's "paternalism" as questions were raised about free speech and the exchange of ideas on campus. Although the Administration offered to reschedule the forum for the fall, Lecture Series declined, indicating the timeliness of the issue.

Film director Spike Lee spoke to the Tufts community on Feb. 24, describing how he created Malcolm X and fielding questions about his thoughts on a variety of issues, on Feb. 24.

Although the evening's topic was "Racism in America," Lee spoke solely about the problems and joys of making the movie before providing a summary of his professional career. He discussed the withdrawal of the original director, Norman Jewison, and why Lee himself took on the role. He explained that the movie required a black director, just as The Godfather trilogy, Raging Bull, and Goodfellas had Italian-American directors.

Lee described how he argued with Warner Brothers, the film's production studio, over the operating budget as well as the filming location.

In a press conference following the speech, Lee urged for greater diversity at Tufts. He stressed the need for increased recruitment for minorities and pressed for the students, alumni, and parents to push the Administration forward.

Lee told students that the Administration should earmark financial aid money for African American and other minority students. Lee implied that it is possible that the Administration wishes to keep the numbers as they are.

Currently on vacation from film making after spending two years creating Malcolm X, Lee is currently teaching two courses at Harvard University, Screenwriting and Contemporary African American Cinema.

Lee is also known for his other films Do the Right Thing, Jungle Fever, Mo' Better Blues, and School Daze.

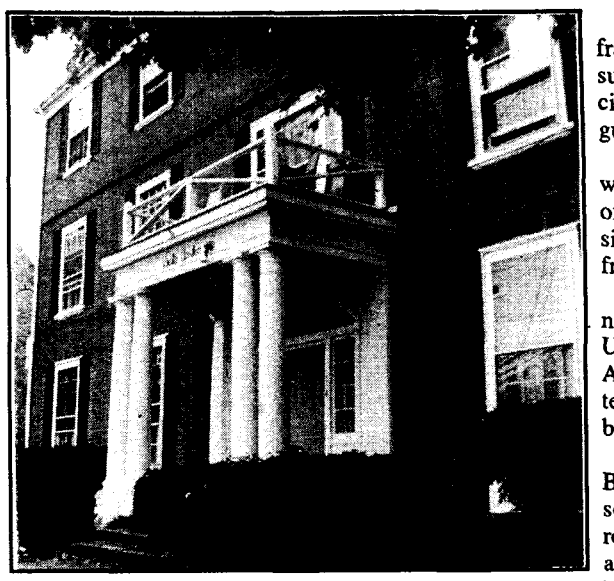
This speech was the inaugural event of the new Presidential Lecture Series. Programming Board President Ken Jackman and Tufts Community Union Senator Ken Archer arranged for Lee to appear while the Office of the President provided the financial support.



On April 12, the Delta Upsilon fraternity was placed on a one-year suspension by the Inter-Greek Council Judiciary. The fraternity was found guilty of violating hazing regulations.

The issue arose when a complaint was submitted to the Dean of Students office. Delta Upsilon pled responsible to the charges raised against the fraternity.

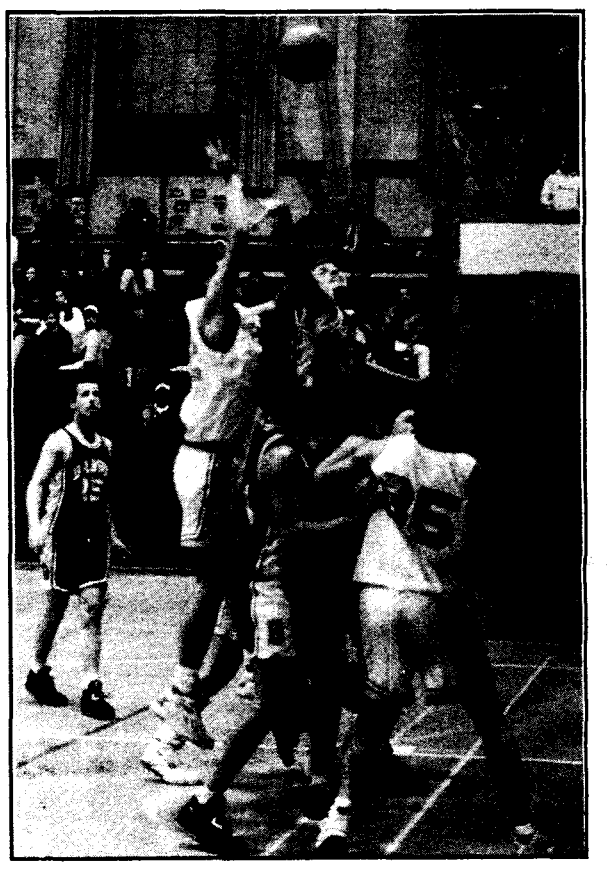
While on suspension, the fraternity brothers cannot live in the Delta Upsilon house at 114 Professors Row. After the suspension is over, the fraternity will operate under official probationary status for one year.

According to IGC President Elise Blinderman, the sanctions reflect a serious infraction of the Greek system regulations and the fraternity was given a penalty that matched its actions.

The sanctions were based on three actions taken by the fraternity. According to Blinderman, pledges were required to show up at the house at 5 a.m. and stand at attention for four hours. Also, they were "coerced" into drinking pitchers of beer until everyone was sick as well as playing quarters and requiring the losers to drink pitchers of beer.

Delta Upsilon brother Kevin Conroy was president of the IGC before the fraternity was brought up on charges. After the IGCJ placed Delta Upsilon on suspension, he resigned from his position.

Blinderman had been vice president and chair of the judicial board before becoming president.



1993 was supposed to be a rebuilding year for the men's basketball team. After all, lost to 1992 graduation were major contributors Pat Skerry, Bill Slackman, Joe McMann and Bruce Bligh, as well as Larry Norman, who transferred to Clark.

But something happened on the way to a mediocre season. Sparked by an infusion of youth, the Jumbos stunned even their most diehard fans by finishing 16-8 and earning a trip to the ECAC tournament. Although Tufts dropped an overtime thriller to Western Connecticut State by one point, nothing could temper what the Jumbos accomplished during the regular season.

Leading the way for the young Jumbos were sophomore Chris McMahon, junior Khari Brown, and freshmen Chad Onofrio and Eric Emmert. McMahon, the returning ECAC freshman of the year, showed no signs of experiencing the dreaded sophomore slump, leading the Jumbos in scoring. Complementing him on the inside was Brown, a shot-blocking menace, and Emmert, the 6'6" behemoth who proved to be one of the team's most solid players down the stretch. And junior Mike Wolf opened up the middle with his long-distance shooting.

The real surprise of the season, though, was Onofrio. The freshman assumed the point guard role from the graduated Skerry, and performed well enough to earn ECAC Rookie of the Year honors. He played with the poise of a veteran, evenly distributing the ball to the team's scorers, while at the same time scoring when he had to.

Not to be forgotten amongst the success of the young players is the leadership provided by seniors Chris Braga, Scott Dunlap and the injured Donovan Beckel. These players helped guide the youngsters through the rigors of the regular season, while providing them with the focus to reach the postseason. So much for rebuilding. Now the pressure's on for next year.

After the Ad Hoc Committee on Health Services completed its study of the University Health Service, the University decided to close the inpatient unit next year.

The inpatient unit will close on May 23, following Commencement. Next year, students will be unable to stay at Health Services overnight but arrangements have been made with Lawrence Memorial Hospital to handle the hospitalization of Tufts students.

Students who do not require hospitalization will be provided with reserved spaces in the residence halls. Those people with a contagious or infectious sickness will be given a room, meals, and follow-up medical care.

The purpose of closing the inpatient unit is to reallocate funding to the areas that require more money. Hours for the outpatient service will be extended into the evening, and there will be changes in the outpatient staff to allow for same-day appointments.

V — SPRING 1993

"This year there have been the most reported incidents of vandalism and anti-Semitism ever reported on the Tufts campus," according to Hillel Vice President and Tufts Israel Network Co-Chair Nanette Loebenberg.

This February, anti-Semitic graffiti was found scrawled on the mirror of a suite's bathroom in Haskell Hall. Also in that dormitory, in October anti-Semitic and sexist graffiti was discovered on a number of residents' doors.

The campus was recently stunned by the anti-Semitic and racist graffiti found near East and Eaton Halls. It is widely believed that much of the graffiti was against African Americans, but especially the swastikas, were meant to coincide with Yom Hashoah, Holocaust Remembrance day.

"I find acts of this kind to be totally abhorrent," said University President John DiBiaggio, "and WE WILL NOT TOLERATE THEM AT TUFTS." DiBiaggio and Dean of Students Bobbie Knable wrote letters expressing their displeasure with the graffiti.

Although the police have been continuing their investigation, no one has yet been found responsible for the vandalism.

The Beelzebubs and Jackson Jills, Tufts' a capella singing groups, both won the first national competition for collegiate singing groups at Carnegie Hall.

The all-male Beelzebubs defeated the Harvard University Krokodiloes and the University of California at Berkeley's Men's Octet, while the all-female Jills beat the Radcliffe Pitches of Harvard and Duke University's Out of the Blue.

The Tufts and Harvard teams represented the Eastern Region after advancing through the semi-final round held at Wellesley College.

The Jills performed five songs during the competition: Annie Lennox's "Walking on Broken Glass," Stevie Wonder's "I Wish," Kate Bush's "This Woman's Work," Sister Souljah's "We Are Family," and "Sweet Thing" from Xanadu. In their encore victory appearance, the Jills performed "Red Light," also from Xanadu.

The Bubs sang Simon and Garfunkel's "Cecilia," U2's "Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For," "Chatanooga Choo-Choo," "Do I Love You?" and the Rolling Stone's "Sympathy For the Devil." In their encore performance, the Bubs sang Tom Cochrane's "Life is a Highway."

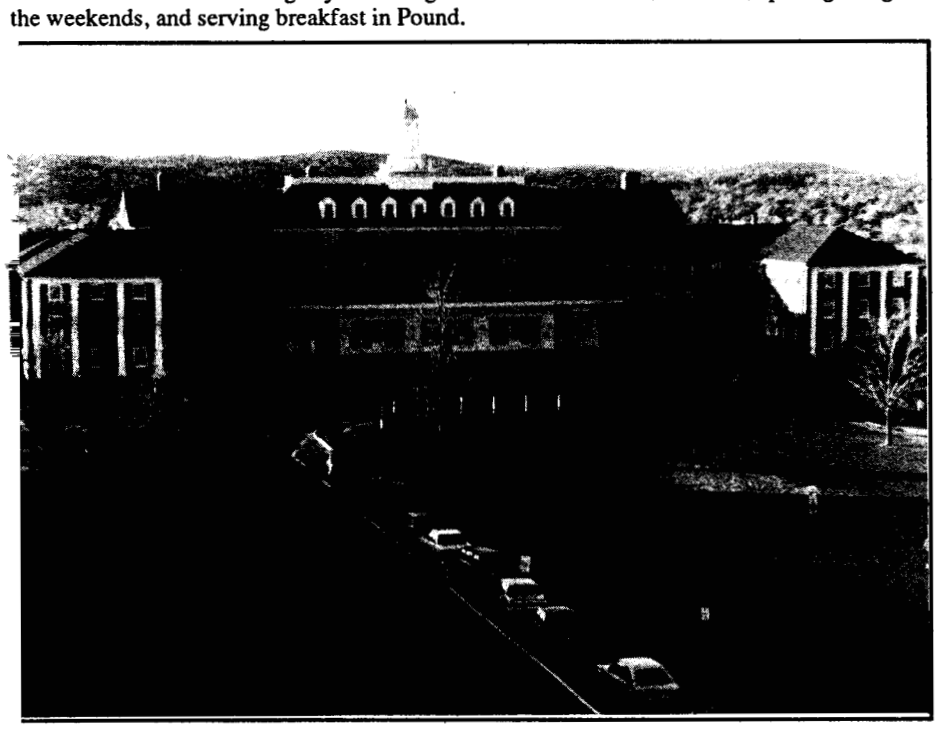
Each group received a $2000 prize for their performance in the competition, entitled "The Road to New York: Collegiate A Capella."

The discovery of asbestos in Carmichael forced the closure of the dining hall nearly a month ahead schedule. The dining hall had been scheduled to close on May 24 for renovations.

"[The asbestos] wasn't found to be an horrendous problem but we have to do something about ' said Director of Dining Services Patricia Lee. Exposure to asbestos, a fibrous substance which nains in the lungs once inhaled, can cause lung cancer, asbestosis, digestive system cancer, and sothelioma. These diseases are rarely curable.

Lee said removal of the asbestos would take between three and four weeks and before completing project the workers must test the air for remaining residue. To eliminate the asbestos workers l off the work area and connect it to clean areas by a decontamination chamber. The waste is nsported from the affected site in proper containers and discarded at a designated landfill.

Although the shutting down of Carmichael was somewhat inconvenient to uphill diners, Dining rvices accommodated the surge by extending meal hours in Dewick/MacPhie, opening Hodgdon the weekends, and serving breakfast in Pound.

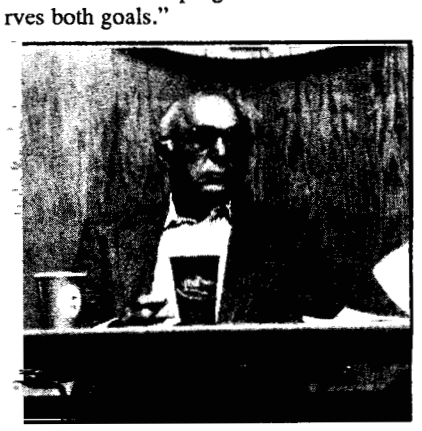


The presidents of the New England Small llege Athletic Conference (NESCAC) ted in April to allow league teams to par- ıpate in NCAA Division III tournaments a three-year trial period, beginning next l

The decision, which does not include otball, overturned a seemingly inconsistent gue policy of allowing only individual iletes to compete in national champion- ips while prohibiting teams, including re- s, from doing so.

In the past, NESCAC athletes were al- wed to compete in NCAA tournaments only individuals, while teams could not ad- nce beyond the regional level, usually par- ıpating in tournaments sponsored by the stern Collegiate Athletic Conference CAC).

Wesleyan President William Chace, who rves as chairman of the NESCAC Presi- nts' Group, said, "We aim to treat all our ident-athletes and their teams consistently d equitably. We also want to preserve our ditional emphasis on athletics as part of r total academic program. This decision rves both goals."

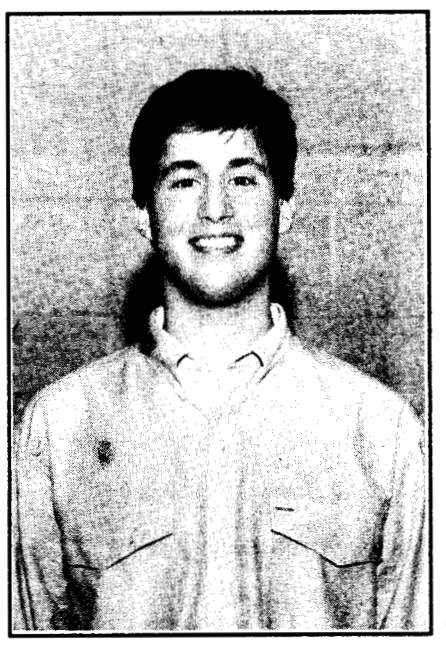


The Tufts Community Union Senate passed a bylaw by a 22-2-1 vote calling for University club sports teams to be funded using the interest earned from the Student Activities Fee, an amount anticipated to be in the vicinity of $15,000.

The bylaw, which was co-sponsored by TCU President Randy Ravitz, TCU Treasurer John Fee and TCU Assistant Treasurer David Brinker, was revised after Fee met with representatives from the Athletic Department to discuss concerns over liability and recognition of teams.

Under the proposed arrangement, club sports teams will have to be recognized by the Athletic Department and must submit a budget to Athletics before applying for funding from the Senate. The Athletic Department will continue to provide coaches, transportation and facilities for the teams on an availability basis.

At various times in the past, club sports teams were funded completely, partially and not at all by both the Athletic Department and TCU Senate and have been completely self-subsidizing for the past two years, after severe budget cuts forced the Athletic Department to discontinue funding them.



In a ceremony on April 25, 1993, Dr. John DiBiaggio was inaugurated as the 11th president of Tufts University. The ceremony took place on Ellis Oval and the guests numbered over 4,000, including over 140 delegates from other colleges and universities. DiBiaggio, who before coming to Tufts in September served as president of Michigan State University, replaced Jean Mayer as Tufts president.

Mayer, a world-renowned nutritionist, held the post of Tufts president for 16 years before stepping up to the office of University chancellor in 1992. Mayer passed away in January at the age of 72.

US Secretary of Health and Human Services Donna Shalala delivered the keynote address at DiBiaggio's inauguration. Shalala, a personal friend of DiBiaggio's and former chancellor of the University of Wisconsin, is involved in the Clinton Administration's planning of a massive reform of the US health care system. While she briefly discussed her opinions on the reform in a press conference preceding the inauguration ceremony, her speech focused on the value of national service.

In his inaugural speech, after enumerating the virtues of Tufts, DiBiaggio recognized that in light of the current fiscal difficulties for private higher education, it is necessary to make sacrifices. However, he expressed the opinion that Tufts can improve without making sacrifices. Like Shalala, he emphasized public service and alluded to the recent institution of a public service task force at Tufts.

Poll finds that, for some reason, Bostonians like it here

BOSTON (AP) -- Housing is expensive, the streets are jammed and the economy is still in the doldrums, but Boston is, by and large, a great place to live, a poll of city residents found.

Seventy-eight percent of residents are happy with the way their lives are going, and 76 percent believe it's worth the high cost of living to remain in Beantown, according to a poll published in the Boston Sunday Herald.

Large majorities of residents, ranging from 73 to 91 percent, think the local sports, restaurants, media, medical care, colleges and culture are better than anywhere else in the country.

"I wouldn't want to live anywhere else. Certain times of the day, certain times of the year -- it's just a joy to be in Boston then," said Patricia Strimple, who moved to Boston from New York.

But there are worries, chiefly about crime and the state of the economy. One out of three residents polled fear walking outside after dark. One out of three worries about losing a job, and four out of five say household income doesn't go as far as it used to.

The poll also found that 65 percent of those surveyed think Boston is racist; 72 percent believe it is controlled by a few powerful politicians; and 80 percent believe it is filled with bad drivers.

Sixty-four percent of blacks said they feared walking the streets after dark, compared to 46 percent of Hispanics and Asians and 42 percent of women.

"Violence happens all too often," said Eunice Turner, 61, of the city's Roxbury section. "People just go down the street shooting -- about a month ago, somebody shot the windows out of my car."

The survey was conducted by Opinion Dynamics Corp. of Cambridge among a representative sample of 500 adults living inside the Interstate 495 belt. The survey included two 100-person oversamples, one of minorities and one of college students.

The main sample carried a margin of error of 4.4 percent, while the minority and student oversamples carried 9.8-percent margins of error.

"People are very proud of the area, and very understanding -- but they're willing to be very honest about it," said Ernest Paicopolos, partner in Opinion Dynamics.

"They're able to separate the economic situation from the other factors, and kind of hold it aside," he added. "But at the same time, their considerable concern about it comes through very clearly."

Gang summit ends with symbolic hugs

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) -- Snapping pictures for souvenirs and exchanging hugs, current and former gang members wound up a three-day summit Sunday with a show of unity and a call for jobs.

The National Urban Peace and Justice Summit, conducted behind the closed doors of an inner-city Baptist church, advocated "the immediate establishment of 500,000 jobs for at-risk youth" by public and private employers.

Other recommendations, released at a news conference Sunday, called for the government to make public the status of 15,000 police brutality cases, and for President Clinton to appoint an independent commission "comprised of people of color to oversee and monitor police brutality."

Carl Upchurch, the summit organizer, declined to provide details about how the group suggested creating jobs for urban youth. He referred, however, to Clinton's jobs package that was recently defeated in the Senate.

"I'm no economist, so I'll leave that up to the smart people to figure out how to get the jobs started," Upchurch said. "But, did I say, `stimulus package'?"

Summit participants, mostly current or former members of black and Latino street gangs, spoke of a spirit of unity.

"What I'll take home from the summit is what other brothers and sisters are doing all over the country," said Gilberto Leal, a 37-year-old former gang member from Toledo, Ohio. "This is a springboard to a national coalition."

Leal, who now runs education programs for young people, said he had become friends with Alberto Burgos, 20, a former leader of the Gangster Disciples in Chicago. Burgos said the two would stay in touch and support each other's efforts to promote gang peace.

"We've got enough peace lovers," said Burgos. "What we need is more peacemakers."

The concluding statement had several other recommendations, including:

--Repeal of anti-gang legislation, including the federal program called "Weed and Seed" that attempts to reduce crime and drug use in urban areas.

--Establishment of community-based citizen patrols to protect people from police abuse "through videotaping and more assertive action."

--Stopping the use of police dogs against minorities.

The statement did not elaborate on the recommendations, and organizers declined to provide more information.

The summit, scheduled for the first anniversary of the Los Angeles riots, emphasized symbolism. A church service and march Sunday included traditional Indian drums, black spiritual songs, and speeches in Spanish.

A service at the host church, St. Stephen Baptist Church, included elderly women with Sunday bonnets and teen-agers wearing baseball hats cocked sideways in the manner favored by street gangs.

Call now. Or get stuck in the rush to disconnect your phone.

Now there's an easy way to disconnect your phone service. It's automated, and you can do it from a touch-tone phone anywhere in the New England Telephone area. To place an order to disconnect your service just call 1 800 244-3737 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. weekdays, and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturdays.

Here's how it works. After you call, you'll be asked to enter your telephone number and customer code. This code is the three-digit number that appears after your telephone number on the Summary of Account page of your bill. Without this code the transaction can't be completed.

If you use this system, your final bill will be sent to your existing billing address. So remember to file a change of address card with the post office.

Call 1 800 244-3737. We'll be happy to disconnect you.

Brace yourself! It'll be the worst mosquito season ever

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) -- The mosquitos are just around the corner in New Hampshire.

Their eggs are hiding in ditches, tire tracks, bird baths, swamps and tree trunks, and shortly they will grow to cover the state.

According to mosquito and weather specialists, their numbers are legion and this summer may be the worst mosquito season in a long time, especially along New Hampshire's marshy seacoast.

A combination of melted snow masses, continuous rainfall and warmer weather all point specialists in the same direction -- this year's bugs will be a healthy and wholesome crop, even more than last summer's.

Paul Johnson, University of New Hampshire entomology chair and associate professor, predicts a mosquito-infested summer. He said this spring is warmer than the last and there's been more rainfall, ingrediends for a hefty and healthy mosquito population.

Although many people considered last year's mosquito population atrocious, most of it was due to excessive rainfall in June and July, he said.

"They are already out there. It looks like a bad year," Johnson said of the mosquitos who not only torment with their stings but also can carry diseases that infect people and pets.

One of the state's communities with the hardiest mosquito population is Rye. Sarah McGregor of Dragon Mosquito Control Inc., of Rye, hired to control Rye mosquitos, predicts the season will be the most mosquito-ridden since 1970.

McGregor, who has worked with Rye for over a decade, has sampled marshes and found as many as 100 salt marsh mosquito larvae in a cup-full of water.

"We are bound to get a tremendous hatch in mid-May," McGregor said.

New Hampshire communities use various means to fight the mosquitos, ranging from bacteria deadly to mosquitos to chemical sprays or depending on birds to eat them.

Discussion this year centers around developing natural methods of mosquito control, out of concern that current programs contaminate water and air. Some Newington and Rye residents have argued in favor of planting bird houses and bat houses, which in turn would attract swallows and bats to eat the bugs.

Michael Morrison, of Municipal Pest Management Services, said his company uses a combination of bacteria to kill larvae in the marshes, and highly tested chemicals to spray along the roads.

At Seacoast town meetings, residents have voted to reinstate the mosquito control program. Rye installed more than 100 bird houses to test the effectiveness of swallows.

In Newington residents last year felt an especially strong onslaught when last the former Pease Air Force Wildlife Refuge abandoned by the military remained unsprayed.

 NEW MINOR IN ITALIAN ***

The Italian Minor has been approved by the LA&J Committee on Curricula. If you meet the following requirements, come to the Department of Romance Languages on the second floor of the Olin Center and fill out a checklist for the Minor.

Five Courses distributed as follows:

Four courses in the language and literature above the intermediate level (Italian 003-004). These courses must be taught in Italian.

One course chosen from among the following: (a) a course on Italian literature or civilization, taught in English translation (e.g. IT 41, 42, 51, 55, 75, 91); (b) one of the Italian Culture courses listed in the appendix of the Bulletin; (c) one further course in Italian literature, taught in Italian on the Medford Campus; or (d) an upper-level course, completed in Italy, in one of a variety of disciplines.

Seniors graduating this May can be certified in the Italian minor as of this date. Other students interested in the possibility of minoring in Italian should stop by the Department of Romance Languages to fill out a checklist.

Advisor for the Italian Minor: Professor Vincent Pollina

Man sets self on fire

SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) -- Police on Sunday continued looking into the death of a Dudley man, who investigators say set himself ablaze on a downtown street.

Andrew Vitoritto was sitting on a bench alongside Maine Street when he noticed a fire had broken out on the sidewalk about 100 feet away. Then he realized what had happened.

"At first I thought it was the trash can," Vitoritto said. "Then these people took rugs from a store and tried to put out the flames."

The flames had engulfed Alan Stegenga, 48, of nearby Dudley who had doused himself with a flammable liquid and set himself ablaze shortly before 5 p.m. Saturday, police said. Stegenga was pronounced dead at Harrington Memorial Hospital.

On Sunday, police still were uncertain why Stegenga took the action. Stegenga's family refused to comment.

Glancing down at charred bits of clothing left on the sidewalk shortly after the incident, Vitoritto told the Telegram & Gazette of Worcester, "I never thought anything like this would happen in this town."

Another witness to the burning, Jennifer Anneken, said, "Everybody was just freaking out. I left because I was crying to hard. I was shocked. I had never seen anything like it."

Southbridge Police Officer Robert Berry said that after Stegenga ignited his clothes, his body was quickly engulfed in flames.

Police and firefighters, whose stations are less than a block away from where the incident occurred, arrived at the scene after receiving the first of many calls at 4:55 p.m.

Besides Southbridge police, the state police Crime Prevention and Control Unit from Worcester County District Attorney John Conte's office are investigating.

New York man drives murdered wife to cops

CLAVERACK, N.Y. (AP) -- Police were taken aback when a man walked into their station and confessed to killing his wife, whose dead body was found in a pickup truck parked outside.

"He said, `I killed my wife,' and I said, `Excuse me?'" said Trooper David Sirani, who was working the early shift Saturday when Thomas Lyons walked in shortly after 5 a.m.

Lyons, appearing disoriented, repeated that he had killed his wife, the trooper said.

"I asked him where she was and he said, `Outside in my truck,'" Sirani said.

Sirani found Geraldine Lyons on the passenger seat of the blood-spattered pickup parked in front of the state police barracks in Claverack, 30 miles south of Albany.

"There she was, slumped over and dead," Sirani told the Albany Times Union.

Autopsy results showed Mrs. Lyons, 41, died of stab wounds to the chest, troopers said.

Lyons, 39, was immediately arrested and arraigned before Town of Claverack Justice Thomas Schindler on a charge of second-degree murder, said state Trooper Harold Haire. He was ordered sent to the Columbia County Jail without bail.

Capt. Thomas Fazio, commander of the Claverack barracks, said investigators were trying to determine whether Mrs. Lyons had been killed in the truck or elsewhere. The couple lived in an annex of the Kenver Ltd. Ski Shop, about 20 miles away in the tiny town of South Egremont, Mass.

"I can't tell you any more because we're putting the case together to take to a grand jury," Fazio said.

New York and Massachusetts police conducting a search along 18 miles of state Route 23 between South Egremont and Claverack later discovered a knife believed to be the murder weapon, troopers said Saturday night.

Police also seized evidence at the Lyons' home, the Times Union reported Sunday.

Authorities still don't know why the woman was killed or why her husband drove to the Columbia County station from his home, Haire said.

The ski shop is closed for the season.

Celtics' Lewis sidelined for rest of playoffs with heart problems

BOSTON (AP) -- Reggie Lewis, the leading scorer for the Boston Celtics, will miss the rest of playoffs because of heart problems.

Lewis, 27, collapsed Thursday during the playoff opener with the Charlotte Hornets and was admitted to New England Baptist Hospital on Friday. He underwent tests during the weekend.

"Cardiac abnormalities have been identified that are likely to have contributed to his loss of consciousness," hospital spokesman Jim Rattray said Sunday.

Rattray was unable to elaborate on the abnormalities but said Lewis will be sidelined for the playoffs. He did not know if the condition will threaten his career.

"It's very important to remember we're still in an evaluation mode here," he said.

Dave Gavitt, the team's senior executive vice president, said Lewis is resting comfortably.

"His spirits are as good as you could expect they would be," he said. "I'm sure he wants to get out of the hospital, but he now knows he's got to go through this, and obviously, he will not play basketball until this is resolved and that means clearly, he won't play this week."

Rattray said he expected Lewis to remain in the hospital at least for this week and further tests will be required over the next several weeks to determine treatment.

Celtics team doctor Dr. Arnold Scheller is managing Lewis' care. Along with Dr. Thomas Nessa, a cardiologist at the hospital, Scheller has formed an advisory committee of 12 specialists to monitor Lewis. The team is to report to Scheller, Nessa and Gavitt.

Lewis, a 6-foot-7 swingman and five-year veteran, was the Celtics' leading scorer this season, averaging 20.8 points a game.

"Obviously, we're stunned by it, a little hurt, a little worried as to what's going to happen to him," Celtics forward Alaa Abdelnaby said.

The Celtics and Hornets are tied 1-1 in their best-of-5 first-round series. Game 3 is Monday night in Charlotte.

"I think our thoughts and prayers are with him to recover as an individual, not as a basketball player," Abdelnaby said. "We don't worry about him right now shooting baskets and running up and down the floor. We're worried about him just being able to function as a human an enjoy a healthy life."

Lewis, the Celtics' captain, collapsed with 6:36 left in the first period of Game 1 and was replaced 10 seconds later.

Personals

All Daily folks
I never did care much for those end-of-the-year personals, but I wanted to let all of you know that I've valued being able to work with you, and that I hope future semesters prove at least as worthwhile as this one has been for me. Good luck -- and never forget the significance of the NY Mets, Bruce Springsteen, and Clint Eastwood. Love, Paul

To the Daily:
As my record-breaking 10th semester comes to a close, I would like to offer some advice to those of you who are staying on board: You have such amazing potential, both as individuals and as a group, and you need to realize just how much you can do in order to be truly great. Stay focused, set lofty goals and then achieve them. I eagerly look forward to receiving my complimentary subscription next year. Keep up the good work. Daily love, Larry

To the new Dailyites
Rules to follow: Keep your arms and legs inside the car at all times. Stay seated until the ride has come to a complete stop. Pregnant women and those with weak hearts should not go on this ride. You must be partially insane to go on this ride. Enjoy it while it lasts, because it doesn't get any better than this. Daily love, Larry are for those of you who didn't make it into my column last Wednesday. Enjoy.

The following personals

Paul
I must admit you did a mighty fine job, although the Mets still suck. LAST PLACE! Doc who? Here's hoping you follow the ball all the way into the glove next week... Daily love, Larry

Elizabeth
Ditto for you, except the part about the Mets. Good luck in grad school and I wish you nothing but happiness and success in the future. Daily love, Larry

Elin and Caroline
You two are the future of the Daily and I know you're both up to the challenge. You can do great things and I have the utmost confidence that you will. Daily love, Larry

Steve
Don't let the bastards keep you down. Page Two is one of the most important parts of the paper and I know you will make it strong once again. "Bob Dylan? Yesssss...." Daily love, Larry

Mikey and Jamie
The young are now the old, or something like that. Keep the faith and don't stop nagging people to meet deadlines, because I won't be around anymore to fill in on those nights when you break down (that means you, Jamie). Good luck and all that jazz. Daily love, Larry

Meyers
The blossoming young stud of the Daily. Don't burn out, kid, because they'll be calling for you soon in high places, where you really belong. Daily love, Larry

Rob
It's all over, huh? Keep playing basketball, writing silly articles and doing whatever else it is that you do. Daily love, Larry

Rachel and Jessica
The only page in the paper with absolutely no guidelines whatsoever. Roll with it and see what happens. One thing: TuftSpeak must return. Daily love, Larry

Nadya
Congrats on moving up, but even more congrats for resurrecting Weekender and turning it into one of the strongest parts of the paper. Keep it up. Daily love, Larry

Production folks
So many people, so many votes. You are one of the biggest voting blocs in the paper; you should change the Constitution or something. Or at least whip the writers into shape. Daily love, Larry

Patrick
I've managed pretty well to wean myself off this drug. How about you? Tell the redhead I said "hi." Good luck in the real world. Daily love, Larry

Arts folks
I don't know what I would do without my weekly Fox updates. The three Mighty M's or something like that... Daily love, Larry

Sports guys
I was glad to be a part of yet another semester in sports. You are my first and only love (journalistically speaking, of course) and I hope you become strong once again. Daily love, Larry

Photo
Who are you? Where are you? Oh well, see you later. Daily love, Larry

Stephanie
Tomorrow is the fourth. And I am not brusk. Or is it brusque? Oh well, I guess I'm stupid, too. Daily love, Larry

The rest of News
Good job this semester, as usual. Christi, you will be sorely missed. Daily love, Larry

Cheryl
Horton the Who. One last time, I couldn't resist. Sorry. Daily love, Larry

Giz
I officially give you the keys to the car of the most powerful student organizations on campus. If you ever need a hand, you know where to find me. Do great things, okay? Daily love, Larry

Alyssa
Thanks for everything over the last few years. I never got the video of my surgery, but I'm sure someday you'll be doing it yourself. Good luck in Med School and do keep in touch. Daily love, Larry

Lyle and JL
In the business department, I am the ghost of Daily past and Giz is the ghost of Daily present, but you two are the ghosts of Daily future. I hope you stick with it and do the great things I know you are both capable of doing. Daily love, Larry

Daily Office Workers
As always, without you folks I would have nothing to do. You are the backbone of the department and don't let anyone tell you otherwise. Keep up the good work. Daily love, Larry

Jules
First of all, thanks for all of your academic help. I wouldn't be graduating without it. As for everything else, I never know what to say that won't make one or both of us a little goofy, but that's life, I guess. Thanks for four years of great memories and I'm sure I'll be seeing you sometime soon. I wish you nothing but happiness and success in the future, not to mention one more softball victory. Love, Larry

Paul
You know that our late nights were my favorites. Now that it's all said and done, I must admit I had a ball. You know I love ya even with all the shit you make me put up with. Have a great summer and if you're ever in town, give me jingle. Love, Jules

Cakes
Well, ya know, whatever. Give my love to Thelma and Louise, okay? There's too much to even begin to mention any of it, so, whatever. See ya around this summer. Don't forget how much you owe me... computer science is the bane of your existence, I know. Love, Jules

Snapple
What can I say? You're my favorite news editor in years. Finally, someone who understands deadlines! I hope you have a wonderful summer -- come visit me and my graduated self often! I'm looking forward to seeing the Yankees lose BIG TIME senior week! Love, Jules

Matt
Sorry -- I didn't mean to talk so loudly. You are one of the most unique (!) people I have ever known, you WASP with the most excellent yo-yo and long-billed cap. You make the best margueritas, though. Best of luck in your final year at our esteemed university. Love, Jules

Alyssa
We'll do dinner, really. Have a great summer and best of luck next year. Come visit me if you get a chance. (Did you remember to pay me LOTS?) You're the best office manager ever! Love ya, Jules

Dave and Harold
These four years have been an experience -- I couldn't have asked for better freshman hallmates. I'll miss you both -- best of luck with whatever you do. Love, Jules

Splay
I'll give you a picture and a business card soon, I promise. I hope your baseball games are great, really. Have a great summer, and you know I'll be seeing you next fall. Love, Jules

The Smartest Man in the World
Thanks for the best four weeks, no three weeks, well, you know what I mean. I'm looking forward to the BEST summer ever (we Cambridge workers have got to stick together). Can't wait for Gala -- I hear you look great in a tux! Love, Jules

Scott Fisher
Say... fella. Fella. 'Night. You know I'm shutting you out... I can't wait to have you as my slave for a day. (We'd better be playing at Fletcher.) We're going to have an awesome summer, I can just feel it. Love, Jules

Heather Jean
This summer will be more fun than you ever imagined -- Peter Gabriel will rock the house. And you know what...you have nice legs, too. Love, Julie Christine

Mikey
I'm leaving the department in capable hands... don't have too much fun (those weather graphics are the best). Don't ever change, okay? I'll be around in the fall if you need a hand. Or something. Love, Jules

Parsnips
Sorry I held onto the vest for so long -- it looks much better on you anyway. Have a great summer living on your own (hopefully). I'll see you next fall to be sure (you know I'm sticking around). Love, Jules

Beth
You know you're the best friend I've got... who else can I talk about nothing with for hours! You know I'll always love you no matter what you do. Love, Jules

Paul
Where do I start? Well, I guess I'll skip the nostalgia (quite uncharacteristic, huh?) and just say thank you -- for listening, advising and not letting me take myself or anything too seriously. The meal offer still holds; you'd better not forget. Love, the psycho

Pat
When I arrived here as a freshman I never knew how much influence you'd have on me -- getting me into News, interested in creative writing and under the influence (at 10 a.m., I might add) Thanks for all of your help; I'm really going to miss you. Love, Scout

Elizabeth
I've had so much fun with you at the paper this semester. I'm glad we got to work together, and I'm glad there was someone else down here who took schoolwork seriously! Good luck at Michigan -- they're lucky to have you. Love, Caroline

Phil
I'm very sorry about missing the game. But you still owe us a round of bowling, remember? Thanks for always making me smile down here; your friendship and support mean more to me than you'll ever know. I'm looking forward to many Paw Sox games this summer. Love, Caroline

To the M+M+M's of the A&E page
Madhu--it's a safe bet that we're the paper's biggest lightweights. And if cannibalism struck, we'd be in the clear. Pat, on the other hand...Matt--I hope you've recovered from Fling. I wouldn't want any of your movie trivia to suffer at all. Meg--Did anyone ever tell you your future is in News -- all your gung-ho is the best. Love, Caroline

Doug
You 2 do look cute together, no matter what. Love, Caroline

Marc
Even though I'm not the best trainer, I know you'll be a great addition to the Exec. Board. Have a wonderful summer, and where have you gone, jeff who? --Caroline

Mikey
How awesome were Tues. late nights? Thank you for the therapy: listening to me, making me laugh, and letting me wax things and use the exacto knife. I'll miss you this summer. Love, Caroline

Nadya
Kudos for all of your success with Weekender. All of you dedication and energy is truly admirable. I can't wait to work more with you next year. Have a great summer. Love, Caroline

Rachel and Ruzz
To the two Features goddesses: good job this semester. I hope those aggressive guys on line at Venus didn't rain on your parade. You guys are awesome -- Caroline

Christi
I'm very sorry to see you leave the ed. board. We'll really miss you. Have a great summer, and remember the best music is from the early '80s. Love, Caroline

Kerri
I can't believe you'll be away ALL NEXT YEAR, you jerk. I'm really glad I got to know you and your awesome sense of humor this year, and I'm going to miss you a lot. I think we should start planning our lunches for senior year NOW, knowing your schedule (joke). Have a great summer, and keep in touch. Love, Caroline

John
It's too bad we didn't see more of you at the paper this semester--the life of an actor, I guess. Actually, it's probably that I don't see enough of the world outside these walls! Good luck with your play, and have a wonderful summer. Love, Caroline

Steve
You've done a great job with pg. 2 this semester; I really admire your dedication, and I'm looking forward to an AMAZING exec. board next semester. Love, Caroline

Jamie
Do you have any gum? I am so glad you're coming back to the paper. Have a great summer. Love, Caroline

You definitely are the Daily fun guy. You should hang out in Haskell more often. Come visit the cool people. Seriously though, you've done an amazing job with News. Have a relaxing summer; coming from an ex-News ed., I know you deserve it. Love, Caroline

Elin
Though I vehemently object to you labelling me "Spaz," I am so excited for next semester. Between revamping the Daily office and work, we should definitely hang out this summer. Love, Bee (a much better nickname)

M,D,D
A thousand thank you's, I love you's and remember when's could never add up to all I owe you or want to say. I am just so excited that we'll all be together in one city this summer. Stay tuned...xoxox, sophia

PCW
I have a BIG secret, but you know how good I am at keeping those. I can't stop wondering when my luck is going to run out. I guess I'll just keep on reading palms...they seem to make me happy. Hey, don't walk away! xoxox, skippy

Steve
Great showing at Spring Fling! Try not to be so pig-headed about your editorials next year. Thanks for getting me started in news. David

Production legend. I'll have to call you every Thursday to discuss Seinfeld and THEM. I may be up visiting people over the summer so we'll have to make plans. Enjoy the concert! Snapple

Elin
So have I been designated as the new Fun Guy for next year? I know Rob claims he can't be replaced but someone has to try. DFG

Marc
You make a great tour guide, now let's see how you do on the exec board. How about a Phillies-Yankees World Series? Say hello to Florida and the Marlins for me. My-yaz

Rabbi Katz
Next year in Jerusalem! Geology was...well, geology. Maybe we should combine our departments and double our staffs. Save some of your articles from this summer. David

Rob
I'm glad to see that some seniors can get a job. Good luck in whatever it is you've been hired to do after graduation. Buy a new basketball! David

Paul
Probably the worst case of senioritis ever. Time to get the drive back and find a job. When you're home from traveling, don't forget to stop by the YMCA for your free lunch. David

Pat
So who do I go to now if I have a question? When can we expect to see your book published? I would really like to read it. Good luck! David

Caroline
Moving up quickly through the Daily ladder, aren't we? Congratulations! Thanks for helping me get started with the Daily. David

News People
Thanks to you all for being there with me this semester. By working together, I think we did a great job. To those of you staying on, see you next semester! David

LARRY
Congratulations! You're finally graduating. As you venture out into the great wide world please remember to SMILE! I'll miss you, but I'm sure I'll see you during the summer or in the fall. Love, Jamie

JULES
I wouldn't be where I am today were it not for you. You've taught me all I know. Thanks for introducing me to the wonderful world of production. Now that you are leaving can I claim the title of "She Who Must Be Obeyed"? Good luck at the new job. Love, Jamie

ELIZABETH
Country music or Joseph and the Technicolor Dreamcoat in Hungarian? You decide. I know how you can't resist hearing Billy Ray and Garth! Congrats on graduation. Good luck in your future. Love, Jamie

PATRICK
I don't know how I'm ever going to fill your shoes. It certainly won't be easy. Thank you for the calming effect you seem to have on me when I get a little nutty. You're the best and I am definitely going to miss you. Hope to see you in the fall. Love, Jamie

MIKE, RYAN and LEAH
Good luck production managers! If you need any help at all feel free to give me a call. Love, Jamie

DIRK
It's been oh so much fun working with you on Monday nights. Thanks for all your jokes that kept my spirits high, even during my nervous breakdown. Good luck in life. Love, Jamie

CAROLINE
Too bad we didn't have a late night together this semester. As I'm sure you know, late night's with me are quite eventful. Maybe you'll work Wednesday nights next semester? Have a great summer. Love, Jamie. PS--Thanks for always making sure I get a diet coke!

To the most INCOMPETENT guy I know
I'm just kidding. You know that I know that you are more than competent. These last few weeks have been a blast. Have a great time biking across America. I'm really going to miss you. Don't forget to write (somehow I don't think you will!). Love, Jamie

ELIN
Well, chief, I've saved the best for last. I'm going to miss seeing you in the bin. Hopefully you'll keep the tradition going next semester. Don't forget to give me your number so we can hang out over the summer. Love, Jamie

Paul
From the friendly guy at the sports desk to the Chief, from the girl who transferred the calls to the Business Manager. We came a long way! Thanks for all the help along the way. Good luck with everything. I'll truly miss you! Love, Gizem

Elizabeth
There will be no more "You are here"s or nonsense comments on my side! Good luck with the PhD! Auf wiedersehen! Love, Gizem

Duke
Finally, it's all ours! We have to prove to the whole world that the Daily will be an even better place with women in charge. Good luck, I'll be by your side! Love, Gizem

Nadya and Caroline
Other exec women, the best Daily issues are yet to be published. Caroline- I hope you'll be able to keep your enthusiasm. Nadya- Thanks for the friendship. It means a lot! Love, Gizem

Jules
Goodbye and good luck! Love, Gizem

Mike and Jamie
Here's to a year with great communications between Business and Production and meeting deadlines! Jamie- enjoy the Weekender. Mike, please stretch to fit... Love, Gizem

Dave
Next year, we're recycling newspapers every day from 5:30 to 6:00. Is that O.K? Good luck next year! Love, Gizem

ROB
The nicest lobster I know! I'll never forget the enthusiasm you had for making this place better. I'll make sure that the old Daily generation will be appropriately remembered in the future. Good Luck! Love, Gizem

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT
Aren't you delighted that I finally made your sign. Now it's your turn to do something nice for me! You guys are the most fun dept! Keep it up! Love, Gizem

Pat & Tab
Definitely my oldest and most favorite friends down in the office! Best of luck in everything you do! Pat- when do I meet my parents? Tab- you've gotta send me picture of yours with no hair! Love, Gizem

SPORTS
Phil- All I can say is- I am very excited about next year; if you know what I mean! Doug- your next map quiz on the Middle East is Sept 3, start studying! Marc- Good luck up there, Mr. ZBT! Love, Gizem

PHOTO
I'll se you guys at lunch or this weekend! Love, Giz

ELANA
All that has to be said has been said over and over in different situations. I won't repeat them, in the fear that their real meanings might not be not appreciated. I love you! Love, ex-roommate

LARRY
Wow! I can't believe you are going. I just wanted to tell you that despite all the bumps along the way, I really enjoyed being your business manager. The Daily will truly miss a professional like you! Best of luck in everything. I'll try to carry on the flag as successfully as I can. Love, Giz

Alyssa
We started out together, now you're leaving me! Good luck in Med School. And please pay me an extra $50 for just being a nice person, OK? Love, Gizem

Lyle, Monika, Dean, Melissa
Believe it or not, it's now up to us to make this thing work! So, let's take a deep breath, cross our fingers and ... Love, Gizem

Eric, JL and Kerri
Thanks for a great year! Love, Gizem

ALL OTHER DAILY PEOPLE
Thanks for being who you are and wish me luck! Love, the new EBD.

Kerri
I'm so so so sorry I didn't mention you in my last column. Big 'ol apologies, JL. PS. See you in 1994!

Thank you for everything you've done for the paper during the last eternity. Happy graduation (finally!) Obnoxious, anal, rhyming office worker #1

All the office workers:
I'm going to really miss you guys while I'm in Washington. Take good care of the place while I'm gone, and I look forward to seeing all your smiling faces in January. The Signmaker

Pat
Have a good time in Europe, you goof. (Hey, if you can call me a wench, then...) Happy Commencement. You know, the Daily just won't be the same without you turning up your nose in disgust at reheated Pizza Ring. JL

Rachel
We never did have that Columnist's Party. Darn shame. Please please please talk everyone into running the column long-distance? Please? Say Hi to Artie for me. Fellow Features-ette and Email adherent

All Daily people
I've had a wonderful year with you all. Sorry I won't make the Brunch, but I'd better see everyone at the last Daily dinner to say a proper goodbye! I'll miss you in the fall and see you in the spring! Have a great 8 1/2 months! JL

If you know JL...
write me or something during the fall! Washington is oh-so-far away!

Steve
we should join the army's special mission enter and party task force. Have a good summer...'cause you're a good egg. -- John

Pat
I've always admired your talent. Give me a job when you're famous. — John

Caroline
You're a terrific person and everyone knows it, especially me. Good luck next semester! Bye bye.

Elizabeth
Thanks for being there to help me with my innumerable computer troubles. --John

Doug
It's cool having someone to keep everyone's spirit up. See you this summer!?

Mr. Mirman
Judging from your resume it looks like your headed for great things. Have a good summer. -- John

Christi
You've done an awesome job this semester. Good luck in trying to change those things that you and I know just might need a little changing. Make a pledge never to stop going out, either. Love, John

David
An impressive job you've done with news this semester by anyone's standards! No kidding! It's really good to see that kind of devotion. Maybe we'll see more of each other next semester. -- John

Matt Carson
I've already cut out a lot of your articles and am preserving them in dried ice for future generations. Take it easy. -- John

Phil
I really feel bad about you not being with us next year, but you will always be with us in spirit. Write a column or something. Just come to hang out. The place won't be as good without you. -- Marc

Stevie-A
Just keep doing what you're doing, cutting up on the Greeks and Brinker and the Senate and everyone else you hate. It makes for good copy, if nothing else. -- Marc

Dave
I'm all too happy to take credit for "My-yaz." I hope you don't collapse and die over in news, and that you have a good summer contemplating a Phillies-Yankees World Series. Hang in there, and e-mail me when you get back. -- Marc

Hammer
Those 300 mile trips to New Jersey with Arrested Development and David Sanborn are what make life so much fun. And by the way, you know a shitload about movies. Just thought I'd let you know. -- Marky Marc

Caroline
Boy, were you hammered at Fling. That was cute. Next year, when we're in charge, we'll get drunk every night and be out by 10:30. You'll see. I can't wait for the New Generation to take over. -- Marc

Pat
Thanks for your e-mail advice and your general confidence in me. I do really think that I can make things happen but it won't be easy without the old fogies. This place will miss you. -- Marc

Duke
I hope you're feeling better, especially since you missed the ZBT formal for this. Next year you should stop by the house, reminisce about Jamaica with Todd and Morte, and talk shop with me. It's going to be great having you in charge. -- Marky Marc

Doug E. Fresh
Sorry to abandon the sports department, but it is surely in capable hands. This is the unofficial breakup of Ween, but I'll still come by to read NHL and remind you that the Flyers are AWESOME! -- Shiny

Jules
It's those damn Jewish ZBT sports editors from Cherry Hill, huh? I can't say that it wasn't interesting, and it had its moments. I hope you come by the house next year to make fun of my dancing, even if you are old and graduated. -- Splay

ZBT

The A&E page will be an unstoppable juggernaut next fall, and it will eventually take control over the free world. We will rule with an iron fist. I can just picture it: vulgar words like "penis" will appear in every article. I get chills just thinking about it. --Matt

Steph
See you a lot this summer, I hope. You'll be missed down here next semester, but I guess you planned it that way, not leaving behind anyone to replace you. Here's to many fine events this summer...Love, Mikey

Caroline
We kick. And just think of the all late nights still ahead. You're wonderful. Love, Mikey

Marc and Nadya
I know you're going to great. Get psyched for a great semester of jollies and headaches, can't wait to see what's in store...Love, Mikey

Jules and Jamie
Production will miss you; but I have an overwhelming feeling that we certainly haven't seen the last of either of you. So, see you both around...Love, Mikey

Leah and Ryan
You are to be my saving graces. Go home and relax A LOT for the summer, can't wait to get you back here and put you to work... and to having a great time. Love, Mikey

To My residents:
Thank you so much for a truly enjoyable and hassle-free (well almost) year. You guys have been great, keep in touch next year. Love, Mikey

Come take a study break and see the "Briery Gap," in the Cousen's Dance Space. Today at 5PM.

Paul
If I wanted to be cruel, I could try to get you back for all the mean things you said to me this year, but then again, I may just start a rumor about you and Mike getting you-know-what. It would probably be much sweeter revenge. He he. This year has been a lot of fun with you, both in and out of the office, and I wish you much luck in your ? future and many miles on your bike. Love, Nadya

Tab
I think I'm actually going to miss you. Thanks for all the Weekender pictures you took. I realized throughout the semester that you and I are quite alike, even though you're a guy and I'm not. Funny how that works, huh? Washington will always remind me of you, and so will music. I'm at a loss to say something to someone I won't see for another few years. Take care. Much love, Nadya

Pat, Toto, Grand PM
We're not in Kansas anymore, Toto. Thanks for all your help, which has been more than grandiose, with Weekender, my life (ya know what I mean), and all escapades. You are the king of warm fuzzy teddy bears. You have truly been the greatest inspiration to me this year. Here's to drunk production days and lots of worthless clip art (hic)! We'll see you on the front page of some paper yet. But whether it's your byline or your mug shot, only time will tell. It's been a hell of a year, so you better come back and visit. Love, Dorothy
P.S. I still can't believe you believed that silly rumor.

Elephant, elfin, whatever
I knew you when you were a lowly Arts editor. Next year is going to be more than fun, what with a woman-dominated exec board...we could take over the world!! Think of the possibilities...beer every night, men everywhere (oops) and smoking signs in every corner. Who knows? I may even start calling you Duke. Maybe. You're a pal--look forward to seeing you a lot this summer. Don't forget the daily beach trips... Noddy

Madhu, Matt and Megan
What a team you are! I can't tell you how much fun I had with you three this year; I'm actually quite upset to be leaving the corner. Madhu: We ARE going clubbing if it kills us. You've been a really good friend to me, from my days as a shy, retiring arts person, to now. Here's to all of Edelman's lectures that offended you. Matt: Keep up the awesome writing, and sport the earring, because you are a very neat person in disguise as a quiet, sarcastic type. Meg: You've joined the ranks of the short-haired women at the Daily. Stick around kid. Love, the ex-arts gal.

Larry
You know what? You oughta smile more often. I can't imagine being here for 5 years, so all I can say is that I hope that someday I have your stamina and endurance. Thanks a lot for helping to make the paper what it is today and for making for some really interesting discussions. Take care and good luck. Nadya

Rob
There once was a girl from Kuwait,
Who wanted to but couldn't see straight. A guy she met with glee,
Just had no memory. But they sure do make swell mates.
Together they are like in heaven;
And some of that's due to 57. But although its uncanny, And quite often funny. In the end they both come out even. Ana bahibbak, habeeby.

Elizabeth
O great teacher of new exec boarder, thou hast humbled me! Seriously, I am so glad to have worked with you this whole year and also known you a little personally, you're really an amazing person and Dailyite as well! Good luck in Michigan and come back and visit soon. Love, Nadya

Phil
I swear, you have thrown more parties this year (semester alone) than anyone else I know! They were truly an integral (hey, big word for me) part of The Daily Experience this year for me. You have this knack for having a couple things be associated with you for the rest of someone's life, and your music and ties will be my links. It was fun having a class with you, even if it was that class. I hope you are down at the paper next year like you were this year; it wouldn't be the same without you at all. Love, Nadya

Giz
I have faith in you next year, habeebty, even if I am the only one. Just kidding! I'm glad we got to be better friends this semester, even if the Ottomans were your ancestors. Thanks for lending me your shoulder sometimes. Take care and have a great summer! Love, Nadya

Caroline
I am very much looking forward to working with you next year. Not to say this year hasn't been a lot of fun with you! I could always count on you being sometimes the only smiling face in the room; your cheer was always awesome. Here's to lots of late nights next year, and a beginning of the second half of our Tufts careers. Love, Nadya

Maria and Cati
Maria: As the two years of sleeping with you come to a solid close, tears come to my eyes, and I am at a loss for words. Remember Amir, Houston (yuk), toilet seats and toothpaste, ghosts in the dark, late night noises, freak out sessions. Most of all I'll remember how you were always there for me, no matter what. Here's to a great friendship, may it continue until we turn grey.
Cati: Your red/purple hair will remain with me always. You could inflame a bull, I swear. Thanks for being such a pal, in so many ways, a true blue friend. Forget cowardly exes, and look to a new year that is sure to be full of new, and absolutely exciting experiences. Love always, Nerd

The first half of your prophesy has come true, so lets hope you still prove to be at least a somewhat lousy seer. If the whole prophesy comes true and I lose my job, can I crawl inside your ribcage on rainy nights? -- Rob

If the sound of crunching potato chips reminds you of someone, "Oh, What a Night" will always scream your name.

Elin "the Duke" Dugan
What you must remember is your lowly begins as an arts editor, hyper fits that cheered you up (forget the annoying fits that got you down), Washington DC, social event idea lady ("Let's do something") and organization man, wing night, a private room in Jillian's, and who really dubbed you the Duke. -- your only friend with a job

It's been a great year and you've been a terrific roomie! Thanks for putting up with me; I know it wasn't easy. Keep on talking - the world will love what you have to say! Enjoy Colorado! -Jess

KATHRYN "DORKUS" BROOKS
You're weird. Thanks for EVERYTHING! We'll have to get Leon & Jake together for a seminar. Have fun Down Under - don't do anyone I wouldn't do! VILE! -Geekus

LAURA (OR THE COOL
chick down the hall) I'll miss you - $400 for Paris in the spring? Monsieur Tres-Tray is a rougeneck, but Scarf #1 is wanting you! As for Scarf #2, qui sait? Hey Neanderthal, OOGA-OOGA!! Excusemewhat? - Me

IRIS
You? Me? Same room? Lord help Hodgdon. I'm gonna steal your duck! Let's get drunk and speak French on the T again! You have blond hair, but you're not a Blond!!! Good thing... - Jess

SHARON JEDEL
I'm so psyched to work with you (and live in the same dorm, too) next semester! Sorry I mispronounced your name; it's a Features tradition. Welcome aboard! -Jess

TODD WITTE
I still owe you dinner, don't I?! Thanks for making Physics (almost) bearable. If you're VERY nice to me, I'll get you a file photo. And if you see my cousins, RUN!! -Your fearless lab partner

Politically polarized as our ideologies might be, we are still the undisputed champs of rhetoric. Enjoy the UK (hey, I might join you there). - SWA

Exec Board people
Paul, declare major, will ya! Caroline, hey rivals forever. Liz (sorry) get out of the college setting, go back to Paris. The Duke, what can I say -- next year will be fun!! - Steve

Everyone else
Due to space limitations... everyone have a great summer. We all need a well deserved break -- so we can come back in September and keep trouncing our upstairs neighbors (without breaking a sweat)! - Steve

Daily Seniors
All of you, Jules, Larry, Paul, Rob, Pat, Elizabeth, Tab (enjoy Singapore) -- good luck. You're all good people with wonderful futures. I wish you only happiness and good luck. Madhu

Arts
It's been an interesting semester. Matt, I look forward to working with you next year (honest) (and I promise to drink real coffee and talk normal English, yeah whatever). Megan, thanks for assigning, and thanks for always making me laugh. Madhu

Elin
From arts to empress. Enough said. Not only that, but she has great clothes and great bone structure too. Gee, some people have all the luck. Madhu

Pat
You'll leave a void that really can't be filled. I wish you the best of luck and all the happiness in the world. And there's nothing wrong with Jackie Collins. Truly, Madhu

Nadya
Speak to me of b's and bogs. Madhu

Doug
My partner in lung cancer and emphysema. I'll take you up on that offer of crabs and brick lined streets. Madhu

Elizabeth
One last foreign film before you head off to Michigan? Good luck, and congratulations. Madhu

K. Costello
Only now can I see how you and the whole mad bunch made me who I am. Thanks. To youth, beauty, and hope, which I fear are slowly dying in us. Madhu

Daily folks
It's been a good year. Enjoy summer (don't wear beige shoes to clubs, Rachel) and soon enough, we'll be back here. Truly, Madhu

Jules
I didn't know you before the Daily, or what you were like then -- but as we enter the next stage of life, don't disappear. You're still a bandit, old girl -- take it easy. Love, Pat

Elizabeth
Expect me to show up in Ann Arbor someday -- we'll do the bookstore 'n cafe thang. We came in together, we now leave together -- and as we step out of path, good luck out there, my dear. Love, Pat

Paul
As the first consecutive e-in-c's who actually liked each other, we had a good year, and the future'll be okay, partner. Whatever else that needs to be said will come over rented films + substances. Until then: You Are The Best. Pat

Elin
I started writing this four times. I have nothing but purely self-indulgent, sappy things to say -- and hopefully you know what they are. For now I'll say good luck with the Daily, and you've got my love and friendship forever. See you today, Pat

Madhu
You've savaged the Arts Department, and brought Fox hell on us, but I love you, Dudes. Do you know you were one of the first people I met here? How fitting we've become great friends -- here's to more roadtrips and people-watching. Love, Pat

Steph
You ARE one of the first folks I met, and I'm forever grateful to leave this place with you as A Friend For Life. Radcliffe doesn't know what it's (maybe) missing -- you're a great friend and woman, Steph, and that's from a normal man. Love, Pat

Caroline
The mantle of News gets heavy, and so does the Exec Board torch -- but you'll carry it with grace, I'm sure. I'll see you post-Europe, and we will talk of only things non-Daily. Keep your chin up, and smile (or at least pretend). Love, Pat

King
Big Daddy, redesign this old paper like a madman. And keep writing -- we'll read each others work until we're dead. But while we're alive, I'm lucky to have a friend like you. I'll miss you at this place, Mikey. Love, Pat

Rob + Nadya
Don't get pissy that I lopped you two together -- you're a good match, actually. And good late-night Daily people. Rob, my prophecy is coming true: at Homecoming, I'll be unemployed and you'll be rich. Nadya, Weekender was never this good -- and remember our talk re the Exec Board -- do great things with this paper, Dorothy. Love, Pat

Meg
I better see you this summer! Always stay a beauty and a funny gal -- but you could dis me a little less. Keep Mahduddy in his place, and if and when you think of me hack a butt, -- please, thought, no flemballs. Love, Pat

Phil
You're the only person whose called me luscious and meant it -- you don't know how much that means to a guy like me. Take care, Phil, and good luck with the $$$. Love, Pat

Jamie + John McG
Weekender is in your hands -- make it awesome. Jamie, I'm so relieved you're staying; you're too fun and talented to leave. John, I'll see you in June and we'll have many drinks and, err, SOME. Love, Pat

David + News
It's a pleasure to see the department under such firm leadership -- continue to do great things. David, I'm sorry I didn't get to know you better -- you're the kind of person the Daily is unbelievably lucky to get. Love, Pat

Marc + Doug
Good luck on the Exec Board, Marc -- start thinking of ways to improve the paper, cause they exist. Doug, thanks for being a worthy connection -- see you at the Raves. Love, Pat

Tab
Good luck in coming years, Bert -- I know I'll see you before then, but I don't want to keep wishing you luck. Take faith -- that Weekender photo will run in Commencement, I swear! Love, Pat

Giz
LIBERATION! Take care, sister -- good luck in the big world 'o business. Love, Pat

Larry
You're sitting here sounding grouchy and surly. It's only fitting. Good luck outside of the Lazerium. Love, Pat

Stephen
More Editorials! More Editorial Cartoons! Tons of Recruitment! Prepped Story Assignments! Deadlines! Actually, I have a top ten list, but I won't put you through it here. Love, Pat

Neil, Allison, Jan + Kris
Good luck in the world sans Tufts. It's got to be better, I know -- or a place where heads are clearer (mine, at least, I hope). Love, Pat

Michelle, Tish, Laura + Lauren
Hi! Love, Pat

Anna
I tried to follow your guide, but I should've known -- you're one of a kind: The Best -- the Daily never had it so good. Love, Pat

Edgers
Okay, here I go -- treading softly into the real world. Yours is a good path to follow, my friend, so I'm not so worried. Love, Pat

Julio
I left a mangled rabbit drenched in cognac on H.H.'s desk, with a love note from you. Screen your calls. Love, Pat

Introducing Jefe....
Come Back!!! Love, Pat

And The Grand Old Man
Graduation. You better god damned be here for graduation. Got it? Have I made myself.... CLEAR? The alternative is me swooping down to Palo Alto, stealing your woman, and taking your job. On second thought -- that sounds.... Love, Pat

Everyone Else
The Daily's the greatest, and the Daily is all of you. Take care. Love, Pat

Pat
Well, three years and now what? Am I ever going to get to read this book of yours? Maybe it doesn't really exist - just a ploy to get everyone else to feel like underachievers. Normal, huh? All I can say is you may THINK you're normal but I KNOW that I'm the nicest person you've ever met. Keep in touch with me so I can gloat when you finally realize it.-Steph

Mikey
I wish you were graduating but I'm psyched to have a concert buddy this summer. As soon as we figure out where we're getting the money, we're there. Where? Wherever. Anyway, I feel I must gush since these are my last free personals. So let me tell you that I really respect you for standing up and being counted as a fan of Pooh and Rowlf and somehow still managing to become an RA.-Steph

Jules
Too bad I haven't seen you much this semester. I assume you are as suave as always.-Steph

NAT
My favorite graduating senior who isn't graduating. How ah ya? (While we're typing in dialect - Don't go een there Rose. Eet's a bahd place). Insert your own Dernish quote here. Ready to live dangerously? Here goes, for the second time in print and the first time not being torn down: "To the person whose P.M. was swiped..." Nah. The masses aren't ready for this kind of true confession yet. There will be raging snits left and right. I'm running out of room. Everything important to say you already know.-Duff

Nine
Are you going to put the rest of us to shame by being offered work right out of college? Let's hope. Well, Nine, we're almost at the end. I really think you should reconsider staying in Boston. Have I mentioned that all the really cool people will be here? Just think - we could wander through the T putting "This insults women" stickers on the foreheads of all the creepy folk. What more could you hope for in a summer?-Steph

Wes
One more year, huh? Well, Film Series needs you. Just think how nice the advertising could look if someone took the time to do it on a computer. I hope you're sticking around for the summer 'cause as I told Nine, it's the happening place to be. And also, if you're here then I won't have to get involved in one of those sappy, cheesey good-bye scenes that I do so poorly.-Steph

Larry
You know I can't resist one last personal, especially now that I know it might have intimidation value. I've said it before and I'll say it again (for the last time) - I could never have become the Classifieds Goddess that I am today without you, oh Brusque One.-Steph

Paul
I feel so much more confident knowing that I'm not the only one who is still undeclared. You are a true inspiration. Well, this is short but at least it's not generic.-Steph

ANDREA HOWLEY
Thanks for the letter -- I'd love to meet you. Call me at 776-2315 to make plans if you'd like. Your faithful columnist, Larry

Trippe, Dan, & (most of all) Kevin:
"you know..."this is it guys, 3 more weeks & the clique is history. Thanks for the best 4 yrs of my life despite the hearts games. I love you all terribly. Thanks for showing me that MY faith in people & friendship will NEVER need to be restored. "And that's really sad." -Regs.

LISA HOM
Thanks for being an awesome roomie! I'm gonna miss you lots (especially 'cause you're much more fun than my roommate next year). Lots of luck next year, & come by - I'll bake you something! I take back all those times I wished you would die. -Regs

To all the gorgeous women of 89 Curtis & John "the Democrat" Fisher
Thanks for my best year at Tufts! All of you guys have been so awesome to me. You all have to come to my graduation. Most of all, DON'T BELIEVE A WORD KATHY FACE SAYS ABOUT ME! IT'S NOT TRUE! Love always, Regan

"KATTY SCARCIA"
Did I get your name right? Thanks for being my bestest friend, even though you tell Patti I'm evil & she believes you. I am going to miss you so much (how will you learn to sign swear words now?) Have fun abusing my replacement next year. Love, S__t face.

GRAHAM REED
We hate to see you leave, but we wish you all the best in the world. Remember us when you're famous...or in prison. Love, Ice Monkey & Honey Pie (Gritty...)

HEY WOMAN
Rumana Hug, this is so you don't whine that you never get a personal, but also to tell you that I'll miss you lots. Don't forget our cracking up in the 1 class we had together (we should ask him out). Keep in touch. Love, Ivy

ICE MONKEY
My astral sister, you've been an unbelievably great friend. Have a fabulous summer. Sting, stang, stung, 4am & all that. Nail those finals! Love always, Edison

SHALOM BAYIS
(a.k.a. "L") Well, your almost graduated, wow, you're getting old! I'm sure you'll do wonderful in whatever you do. You're the greatest big brother. Behatzlachah! Your sister, Roochal Elka!

IVY
Cuatro Anos-- Que puedo decir? Paso muy rapido. Pero no te preocupes porque siempre recordare mi amiga peruana de Chile. Adios, guapa. Te quiero mucho y no me olvides. -Rumana

JULIE
Hey loser, what's up? I thought I would send you a personal before we graduate (since nobody else would). Thanks for everything. Take care of yourself (& those crazy kids). Lots of love--Rumana

A O Pi
Thanks so much for being patient with me. Whether or not there's room in my schedule, there's always room in my heart. Love, Mindy

CROUTON
Well, you had your chance, but you lost it, Oh well. I guess this will be your last personal. Don't drop it, it adds character. From your salad admirer, Chick Pea

Anita, Sumon, Susie, Prapavadee, Amita, Halleem, Eugene & Harold
Thanks for a great year! How about a little get together for the last time?! I'll cook for you guys. Thurs., the 6th at South Hall Lounge. Try to be there by 6pm. Your A.A.P.A

MATTHEW CARTER
More squidlicious you...NOT POSSIBLE! Have we ever been wetter than you made us 2 weeks ago? PROBLAY! Hope your bed has dried by now! Just WOW! Love, your 2 favorite slam pigs.

Democratic Israel closes down our elementary schools for "security reasons" and our kids end up on the streets and when our kids are on the streets, "they" instill curfews and when "they" instill curfews our kids are ordered to go home, but they can't go home, you see, because Daddy's probably been deported and Mommy's probably been hospitalized for "injuries" . . . and besides, the house has probably been blown up anyway and when our houses are blown up our kids are back on the streets and when they are back on the streets, they are violating the curfews and when they violate the curfews they get shot at and when they are shot they might get wounded and if they are wounded they just might die . . . and they have been. Stop the Violence. Stop the Hate.

Here are some conveniently unadvertised facts:

Human Rights Violation by Israel against the Palestinians *	Number #
(1) Killings (murder)	1,137
(2) Injuries requiring hospitalization	121,246
(3) Expulsions	483
(4) Administrative detentions	15,320
(5) Curfews	11,151
(6) Land confiscation (acres)	87,741
(7) House demolitions	2,072
(8) Tree uprootings	130,411

STOP THE GAMES!
