Police and fraternities tentatively implement a revised social policy

by JOHN O'KEEFE
Daily Editorial Board

According to Inter-Greek Council President Ken Goldman, a new university social policy was temporarily implemented over this past weekend and may become permanent, pending the approval of the Committee on Student Life.

The final version of social policy protocol was passed on Friday by a committee made up of students and administrators who have been examining the issue of improving campus social life for a number of months. According to Bruce Reitman, Associate Dean of Students, the purpose of changing the policy was to make regulations more flexible for party hosts and more conducive to a higher quality of campus social life.

The primary changes in the policy involve the number of guests in attendance at fraternity parties, a clearer definition of what constitutes a public or private function, and new standards for requiring a police detail at an event.

The old policy, which was passed in Sept. 1992, specified that any event at which more than 100 individuals were in attendance must be registered with the Office of Student Activities. Under the new policy, there are no set numbers regarding registration requirements and attendance levels. Instead, he said the new policy stipulates what conditions would war-rrent the necessity of a police detail.

According to the policy, "an officer will usually be necessary at functions where alcohol is served and/or where 150 or more people will be in attendance." This represents a change from the old policy which required all functions where alcohol is being served to be registered with the university.

Secondly, the new policy allows more flexibility in terms of the numbers of people which may attend a fraternity house party at any given time. According to Goldman, under the new policy, "as long as there is a police detail, see POLICY, page 2

DiBiaggio appointed to service committee

by JOHN O'KEEFE
Daily Editorial Board

Tufts University President John DiBiaggio was appointed to the Massachusetts National and Community Service Commission last week by Governor William Weld. The 24 commission appointees were announced at a swearing-in ceremony held at Northeastern University on Wednesday.

According to a press release from Governor Weld's office, the commission will coordinate Massachusetts' participation in volunteer programs, including programs that will allow college students to repay their loans by performing community service.

The Massachusetts National and Community Service Commission, created by an Executive Order signed by Weld at the swearing-in ceremony, was created in response to President Clinton's signing of the National and Community Service Trust Act of 1993, which provides federal dollars to expand community service initiatives.

Clinton's signing of the trust act was an effort to follow up on his campaign promise to create a "domestic peace corps." Weld's newly formed state commission was designed to put the state in line for increased federal funding for community service projects.

"The opportunity to serve is the opportunity to do something that is meaningful. Some kids will help with community policing or clean-up efforts; others will work to make schools safer. With lots of [students] participating in com-

Rush period disputed after fraternity event

by CAROLINE SCHAEFER
Daily Editorial Board

Dealing with the introduction of a new social policy, the fraternity system was forced to consider yet another complication this past weekend, after confusion arose over the legal time frame for fraternity rush period.

The Sigma Nu fraternity hosted a mixer last Thursday evening, which was broken up after many questioned whether or not the party constituted a violation in the Inter-Greek Council's "dry rush policy," which concerns alcohol consumption. According to the Greek system's Relationship Statement with the University, "no alcoholic beverages may be served or made available to anyone in the house, resident or visitor, during rush period, regardless of age.

The Pachyderm states that "rush is a series of events leading up to being asked to pledge or join a Greek letter organization." The fraternity rush period is introduced with a fraternity fair on Jan. 29, and rush period then begins on Jan. 31, according to the Inter-Fraternity Council's policy. This period culminates when the fraternities submit a list of pledges, or prospective members, to the Student Activities Office after 5 p.m. on Thursday.

Under IFC specifications, fraternities are not permitted to host an event with alcohol until they have submitted a second list of pledges who have accepted their invitations to pledge the fraternity; the second list was due last Friday at 5 p.m., in time for fraternities who wished to serve alcohol at their parties on Friday night.

Yet Sigma Nu's party occurred on the eve of this deadline, despite the fact that their "second list" had allegedly been accepted at the Student Activities Office on Thursday evening at 8 p.m. Student Activities Director Bill Stackman was unsure of when the fraternity submitted its list. According to partygoers, Sigma Nu's party began around 9:30 p.m. and was closed by fraternity members before midnight, when members of the fraternity spoke with IFC members. Despite the confusion, neither IGC nor IFC representatives would comment on the matter, stating that no charges against Sigma Nu had been filed yet.

Sigma Nu President Stephen Ritchie said last night that the situation seems to be best described as a "misunderstanding."

"There is a discrepancy between Sigma Nu's interpretation of the rush rules and the IFC's interpretation of the rush rules. We will cooperate with the IFC in every way possible to resolve this misunderstanding," Ritchie said.

He added that Sigma Nu "acted on [their] interpretation of the rules."

Serbs agree to surrender arms in ravaged country of '84 Olympics

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) -- Bosnian Serbs besieging Sarajevo resumed turning in their big guns on Sunday after the United Nations accepted a compromise plan.

The Muslim-dominated Bosnian government expressed concern that the Serbs were just buying time to prevent NATO air strikes that could begin Feb. 21 if the guns ringing Sarajevo are not pulled back.

Bosnian leaders also called for U.N. action help against Serb attacks on another besieged Muslim enclave, Bihac in northwestern Bosnia, one of six U.N.-designated "safe areas."

The United Nations reported intense fighting over the weekend between Serbs and Bosnian army troops around Bihac.

"They (the Serbs) currently want to take it over, to run over Bihac," Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic told CNN. "... And we hope that the United Nations will act as quickly as they did in Sarajevo after the massacre in Sarajevo," he said, referring to the Feb. 5 shelling of the city's market that killed 68 people.

In Sarajevo, the weapons compromise allows Serbs to turn in their heavy weapons at U.N.-monitored Serb bases, rather than at Sarajevo airport as originally planned, said Maj. Jose Labandeira, a U.N. spokesman.

The Bosnian army objected. "Those weapons can be returned to combat positions very fast," said Bosnian army Gen. Fikret Muslimovic.

"I am afraid that such an approach and an attempt to appease the aggression further would bring a hardening of the Serbian position," Silajdzic said.

The Serbs earlier insisted they would surrender their guns only if the Bosnian infantry abandoned its front-line positions. But after heavy lobbying by U.N. officials the Serbs turned over 13 heavy weapons on Sunday, bringing the total to 36 guns: 26 Serbian and 10 Bosnian.

Late Sunday, Silajdzic told CNN the Bosnian army turned in about 20 more weapons Sunday, including mortars and anti-tank guns. He said the Bosnian army would turn in all its weapons by the NATO deadline.

The Bosnian Serbs are estimated to have at least 500 heavy weapons. The Bosnian army has perhaps a tenth of that.

With the four-day Sarajevo truce still shaky, the U.S. Embassy packed the families of 35 diplomats out of Belgrade, Yugoslavia. Dutch, British and German officials also have urged their citizens to leave Yugoslavia.

The pullout of dependents was a precaution against Serb reprisals in the event of air strikes. Many in

The Daily is located at the back entrance of Curtis Hall at Tufts University. Our phone number is (617) 627-3090, our fax number is (617) 627-3910, and our e-mail address is TDAILY@PEARL.TUFTS.EDU. Business hours are 9:00 a.m. - 6:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 1:00 p.m. - 6:00 p.m. on Sunday.

The policies of The Tufts Daily are established by the editorial board. Editorials appear on this page, unsigned. Individual editors are not necessarily responsible for, or in agreement with, the policies and editorials of The Tufts Daily.

Letters to the Editor Policy

The Tufts Daily welcomes letters from the readers. The letters page is an open forum for campus issues and comments about the Daily's coverage.

Letters must include the writer's name and a phone number where the writer can be reached. All letters must be verified with the writer before they can be published.

The deadline for letters to be considered for publication in the following day's issue is 4:00 p.m.

Due to space limitations, letters should be no longer than 350 words. Any submissions over this length may be edited by the Daily to be consistent with the limit. Letters should be accompanied by no more than eight signatures.

The editors reserve the right to edit letters for clarity. Publication of letters is not guaranteed, but subject to the discretion of the editors.

Letters should be typed or printed from an IBM or IBM-compatible computer in letter-quality or near-letter-quality mode. Letters written on Macintosh computers should be brought in on disk — files should be saved in "text-only" format, and disks should be brought in with a copy of the letter. Disks can be picked up in the Daily business office the following day. Letters can also be sent via electronic mail to TDAILY@PEARL.TUFTS.EDU, with all stated regulations regarding Letters to the Editor still applying.

Letters should address the editor and not a particular individual. While letters can be critical of an individual's actions, they should not attack someone's personality traits.

The Daily will not accept anonymous letters or pen names except in extreme circumstances if the Executive Board determines that there is a clear and present danger to the author. The Daily will not accept letters regarding the coverage of other publications, unless their coverage itself has become a newsworthy issue that has appeared in the Daily. The Daily will accept letters of thanks, if space permits, but will not run letters whose sole purpose is to advertise an event.

When writers have group affiliations or hold titles or positions related to the topic of their letter, the Daily will note that following the letter. This is to provide additional information and is not intended to detract from the letter.

Students deserve the facts of parking situation

The resident student parking situation at Tufts is unacceptable. Over the past few years, the circumstances for students who pay to park their cars in the spaces provided by the University has become not only a hassle, but an act of deception.

Currently, Tufts students who reside on campus have two choices when they want to obtain parking privileges: they can purchase a $100 decal which permits them to park their cars in the Cousens or Stearns lots across from the gym, or they can purchase a $200 sticker which permits them to park in the spaces in front of Latin Way, Hillside, and in the Cohen Auditorium lot in addition to Cousens and Stearns.

When students go to the police station to purchase their stickers, they are offered this choice, which to many seems like an easy one: many consider it a fair trade to pay extra to park closer to their residence halls, especially when considering cold weather and safety conditions. So, students buy the $200 decal, only to find that they have paid an extra $100 for the false sense of security that they will be able to park in the general vicinity of their rooms. What many students don't realize is that, in the eyes of the Tufts police, there are no guarantees, even after paying $200. "Buying a parking decal does not guarantee a parking space. What it does offer is the opportunity to park in a space if it is available," says John King, Director of Tufts Safety. This offers students little assurance.

Tufts police will gladly take the extra $100, while remaining silent about the fact that there may be four times as many $200 stickers as there are spaces for these students to use. But that's no problem for the police, for as King says, "Students make a decision to pay a higher price so they can at least hunt for a space." If students were aware of this, fewer would opt to spend the extra money. It appears that the police are deceiving students: students are offered little information and no indication of how many other students they will be competing with for spaces.

The problem is complicated by the safety aspect of the dilemma. If a student who has paid $200 to "hunt" returns to campus at 1 a.m. and finds that there are no spaces in the lots nearby, he or she is forced either to risk getting a ticket by parking in one of the many spaces designated for commuters and faculty, or to park in the Cousens and Stearns lots and walk almost one mile back to his or her residence hall.

According to King, the Cousens and Stearns lots always have empty spaces. However, Tufts police is sending a mixed message: it will post notices about taking safety precautions and suggest that students walk together (especially at night); yet, it will disregard these sentiments if there are no "legal" spaces in which to park, thereby forcing students to walk alone in the dark.

In response to these sentiments, King says that students do not have to risk walking alone; they can use the telephone in the Cousens and Stearns lots to call the Safety Shuttle, which runs until 3 a.m., or get a police escort at any time. But this offers little in the way of comfort, for the Safety Shuttle, especially in the wintertime, is famous for excruciatingly long waits; some would rather risk their lives than wait for 45 minutes in sub-zero temperatures.

The other option, taking a police escort, is also implausible, for many who have requested these escorts have reported how "unhappy" the officers appear to be while performing the favor. This dilemma leaves students cold, in possible danger, and frustrated that they have spent an extra $100 for a false sense of security that the police seem to have no problem instilling.

In King's eyes, this is the proper way to manage a parking program, though he admits that the Tufts Police parking committee, which meets on a monthly basis, is "very concerned about the situation." Still, he argues that limiting the number of $200 spaces would be foolish: since not everyone with these stickers is on campus at the same time, it would be an "ineffective use of parking supply."

What seems most foolish of all, however, is that students are given a false impression of how the parking program at Tufts operates: when purchasing a decal, students believe they have the right to park; the police, however, see parking, even for those who have paid their dues, as a privilege. For the benefit of students it is imperative that the parking situation improve. Tufts Police should tell students the truth about the parking situation.

Condom Week a time to obtain information

To the Editor:

We would like to inform the Tufts community about National Condom Week. The week occurs on every US college campus during the week of Valentine's Day. National Condom Week promotes awareness of condoms and the surrounding issues such as pregnancy, sexually transmitted diseases (STDs), and HIV/AIDS. The events are sponsored by Tufts Sex Talk, which is a peer health education group sponsored by the Health Education Department under the direction of Armond Mickune-Santos. The members are undergraduate students well-trained and knowledgeable in sexual health, safer sex practices, HIV/AIDS and other STDs, and contraceptive technology. We are not, by any means, a group that promotes sex; rather the organization stresses safety, choices, and education. Our group is very concerned with the exponential growth rate of HIV. The center for disease control (CDC) states that if college sexual behavior does not change, 40 percent of the student population will be HIV positive by the year 2000.

We ask for everyone's support in this week and urge people to come to the different events, as well as to think about the different issues surrounding National Condom Week.

Restructured social policy now applies to fraternity and other parties

[the fraternity house] can go to as many as two-third of the occupancy limits determined by the university fire marshal.

Goldman said that "this is definitely an increase over the old limits. Before, anything could get broken up if there were more than 100 people."

Goldman added that this two-thirds policy will likely be expanded in the future.

"The Tufts Fire Marshall went around to all of the parties this weekend and reassessed the numbers based on an actual party situation. For example, I know that [Delta Tau Delta] can now host up to 250 people [which is 50 more than the old number]," Goldman said.

According to Goldman's figures, the new safe occupancy levels range from a high of 250 at DTD to a low of 125 at Sigma Phi Epsilon, but Goldman added that these numbers will probably increase.

Other changes in the policy include a delay in the mandatory closing time of a party; now parties may continue until 2:30 a.m., which applies to all public and private functions with an officer present. The policy further states that in all cases, any alcohol distribution must cease one hour before the end of the event and any band must stop performing one half hour before the end of the event.

The new policy contains no significant changes in the requirements for the closing of a party by university police, with the exception of an addendum which notes that hosts cannot be held responsible for people outside of their facility if they are not guests of the event or if they had been refused entrance to the function.

Finally, there is a clear distinction made in the new policy regarding the difference between a public and a private event. According to this policy, "an event is public rather than private, if it is advertised, on or off campus...A private function is not open to the public, even if they are Tufts students. Only residents and their invited guests may attend. In the case of social fraternities, national fraternity regulations require that only members and their guests whose names appear on a pre-established guest list may attend."

Although this plan was tentatively in place over the weekend, it will not be finalized until the Committee on Student Life (CSL) gives its vote of approval. However, neither Reitman nor Goldman said that they expected the CSL to react negatively.

An interview with Cupid

Are there no lengths to which I will not go for you, the Tufts community, my adoring public? Rhetorical question. Of course there are. (I won't even bother making my opening sentence comprehensible, let alone put myself in danger.)

JL McHenry

Capitol Letters

But you may have noticed that today's Daily is the Valentine's Day issue. (Please, if you're going to vomit over the full-color insert of mushy squishy personals, use a different page.) So in order to interview the most appropriate authority, I traveled to the ends of the earth. Or at least to Cousens Gym, which is pretty much the same thing.

In case you're going to be picky about it, no, this week's column doesn't have anything to do with politics. Those who are exceptionally upset about this are welcome to rescind any previous donations to the Keep the Column Alive Fund. Deal.

The room was smoky, darkened, and it smelled faintly of jasmine incense mixed with Cuban cigars. I strained my eyes through the stale haze. I thought I saw a shape. Could it be...? I squinted. Nah, that couldn't be him...

"Cupid?" I ventured.

He lumbered out from the other side of the cavernous space, the beaded curtain swaying and swishing behind him. Not much taller than I was, he was dressed entirely in black leather. He sported not only dark Ray-Bans, but a gleaming greased-up pompadour of inky hair. He also reeked of Obsession.

"Eh, whaddya want?" He tossed a dusky voice vaguely in my direction. "Ya that tooth chick?"

"Ummm, no..."

"Ain't late enough in the yea-h for them little green dudes, or that rabbit dude neitha ... so you muss be," he placed a meaty fist under his chin like a Rodin sculpture, "ah, I give up. Who ah ya?"

"I'm JL. From the Daily," I said.

"That's whud?"

"The daily newspaper of Tufts University, where you read it ... I began to recite, but he interrupted me.

"Whudda buncha losahs."

"Please, sir, if you've got a spare moment, I'm here for the Cupid interview."

"Whud?"

"I'm supposed to interview Cupid, you know, for the February 14th issue? That's you, right?"

He lowered his shades with a sausage-like finger and gave me a blank stare over the frames.

"Ac-shally, they's two of us now."

"Who?"

"Me an' th' othuh guy."

"And where's he?"

"Oh, for heaven's sake, I can hardly bear the destruction and havoc you wreak whenever I depart from this residential location for even a moment's absence," came a puny little voice, punctuated by frequent coughing.

I turned around to see a short, thin, pale guy stepping gingerly across the pink shag carpet.

"You've been made fully aware that smoke sets off an allergic reaction in my pulmonary facilities. In what location has my inhaler been misplaced?"

As the pocket-protector wearer dissolved into a repetitive pattern of wheezing, I asked, "So you're Cupid too?"

"Eh! Whud I tellya, girlie? A' course he is!"

"Affirmative," the nerd wheezed, blinking watery eyes behind his Buddy Holly glasses. I sighed.

So then I sat down on the leopard-spotted futon with Andrew Dice Cupid and Nerdy Cupid, set my microcassette recorder on the floor, and started the interview.

Daily: Where are you from?

ADC: Mef-fud.

NC: Fort Wayne, Indiana.

D: How did you come to be employed in the Cupid capacity?

ADC: Like, all the jobs at the Body Shop was taken, NC: After considering a pursuit of a graduate degree in electrical engineering, I carefully weighed my options and decided to shoulder the burden of a career in community service. This was my placement through the Peace Corps.

D: Now, we all have this picture in our heads of a tiny naked little baby Cupid with a bow and arrow. How do you differ from this picture? What's your weapon of choice?

ADC: I sometimes got clothes on. And I like girlie mags.

NC: The preconceived notion of a cherubic Cupid is derived from the ancient Greek god of love, Eros, the son of Aphrodite. As for my preferred method of inculcating the romantic impulse, in my chemical laboratory I have devised several formulae appropriate for different metabolic rates that result in varied levels of intensity: adoration, infatuation, obsession, worship, and so forth. I find them quite effective and appropriate.

D: I've been having some problems with this one, and maybe you guys will be able to help me out. What do men really want for Valentine's Day?

ADC: Ya know, same's whud they always want! Badda-bing, badda-boom! Yeah!

NC: It is my experience that the males of the species would rather be cared for and appreciated every day of the year instead of being singled out for special treatment on one isolated occasion.

D: What do women want?

ADC: Who cares what the chicks want? I know what I want -- yo! Badda-bing, badda-boom, you hurd whad I said, girlie! Hey!

NC: I would just like to register my extreme dissatisfaction with the misogynistic and highly offensive nature of the opinion just imparted by my co-worker. That is all I have to say on the subject.

D: Okay, one last question. How do you think this year's Valentine's Day festivities are going? Are you both satisfied with the work you've performed?

ADC: Eh, like, would I screw up? I don't think so, babe. I got lots of people to get it on, didn't I? Yeah, it was a real good yea-h.

NC: To be perfectly frank, I am unhappy with the current status of romance in today's cultural pantheon. While, as my partner so aptly and concisely described, there is an increase in the sum total of physical activity, the affection of which such pursuits should be a tangible representation is on the wane.

D: So ... what the world needs now is love, sweet love?

NC: Exactly.

Kiss me, sweetheart

10. Wessell Library Roof: Cold, windy, and awfully predictable. Besides, it's bound to be a wee bit crowded tonight -- most folks will still be willing to brave the chill night air in favor of the stars above and a view that won't quit.

9. Goddard Chapel: If the Bubs-slash-Jills-slash-Mates can do it, why can't the rest of us? Get up there and sing "To All the Girls I've Loved Before", to your S.O. (For all the cynics out there wearing black today, give it up for Ugly Kid Joe's "Hate Everything About You.")

8. The Cannon: Grab a can of paint and some brushes, and declare your undying affection. (Note: this method is rather temporary, as your message will soon be covered with "ZBT Pledges '94" or "Zamboni Prints Again.")

7. Cousens Gym: Hey, these are the 90s, right? Get out there and burn some calories together (in the printable fashion). Suggestions: Spot each other for some heavy lifting. Walk the treadmills side by side, wearing headphones attached to a double-jack Walkman that's playing your favorite romantic mix. Head down to the B-ball courts for a little one-on-one. For afterwards, see number six.

6. Jumbo Scoops: Have the oh-so-accommodating person behind the counter whip up a pair of chocolate-cherry (fat free, sugar free) malteds. Better yet, order one (super deluxe size) and share -- use those pink and white striped straws and make eyes at each other over the top of the cup. Sit and sip at the table next to the big window so the campus at large can bear witness to your mutual devotion.

5. President's Lawn: Take a long, quiet stroll through the rolling hills behind Johnny D's mansion. Stop when necessary to remove a leaf from your loved one's tangled tresses. Ignore the occasional wayward workman, and look out for flying cement trucks.

4. Campus Center Commons: Y'know those tables next to the wall? The ones that are one foot wide and five feet long? Take your S.O. to dinner (pay with points -- this one applies to number six as well), sit there, and shout at each other across the table. It's the only way you'll hear each other. Make eyes at each other from a distance. Stay until the dining service employees begin to put the empty chairs up on the tables and sweep the floor around your feet in the hopes that the two of you will, to coin a phrase, "get a room."

3. The Wessell Elephant Fountain: Yes, folks, it is a fountain -- or was, anyway. Stand near it with your objet d'amour, toss in a few shiny Abe Lincolns, and make a wish. Things to wish for: True love, world peace, an A on your bio exam...

2. Bowen Gate: Hell, why not? 1. Beneath Jumbo II: (Please, folks, leave the paint brushes at home.) Take a sleeping bag 'cuz the ground is cold, lean against an elephant paw, and just bond. Sing happy songs. Share. Eat chocolate. Smooch a little. And have a happy Valentine's Day.

TDK offers the chance to decrease phone bills

Program geared toward long-distance

by HAYNEE KANG
Daily Staff Writer

Calling home to ask your parents for money can be tiresome for both you and your parents. Wouldn't it be great if -- just once -- you didn't have to call collect or send a ten-page phone bill home to your parents?

Between now and May 30, TDK Electronics Corporation will give customers 40 minutes of free long distance calling time to anywhere in the continental United States with the purchase of select TDK audio cassettes, video cassettes and micro-floppy disks.

The deal is called "TDK Talk 10 Mail-in Promotion" and is fairly straightforward. When you shop for blank tapes and disks, look for a TDK promotion advertisement, pick up a mail-in form, and save your receipts. Then, mail the form and your receipts to TDK and they will send you a calling card which will give you ten free minutes of long-distance calling time.

The TDK Talk 10 calling card can then be used to call anywhere in the continental US from anywhere else in the continental US. Just dial the 800 number found on the back of the Talk 10 card, listen for the access prompt, and follow the simple recorded instructions.

You'll hear a message telling you how many minutes of free calling you have left on your card, and then you'll be asked to enter the number you wish to dial. You will be instantly connected. However, when you have saturated your free ten minutes, the rest of your call will automatically be billed to your regular long distance company.

Julie Shapiro of TDK notes that TDK is running this promotion with college students in mind because "we know the shame of having to call collect and we want to give you guys a break. We understand what it's like to send home phone bills with calls that cost fifty dollars a minute."

Although Shapiro was vague about exactly how much we have to purchase, she did estimate that about $10 dollars worth of purchases will earn the consumer ten free minutes of long distance calling -- a pretty good deal, according to Shapiro.

"Because we'll fulfill up to four requests per student, customers can obtain a total of 40 minutes of free long-distance calling time," Tim Sullivan, TDK National Promotions Manager, said.

Happy Valentine's Day

Hey, it's February 14, the only day whose success for you depends on whether or not you have someone to snuggle with, get flowers from, share chocolate with... In other words, if you've got someone, please be discreetly happy. You know, take off somewhere with your honey... like Siberia maybe. It may be cold there, but body heat can be a good remedy. Or how 'bout the North Pole... you can kiss Eskimo-style! Just please take into account the other 1.2 million of us who haven't found that special someone to share memories, massage, and milk & Mallomars with. Be happy. But good gracious, be SUBTLE!

"Our interpretation was that as soon as we submitted our finalized list of pledges to the Student Activities Office, we were no longer involved in fraternity rush," Ritchie said, adding that Sigma Nu's pledge list consists of eight prospective members.

IGC President Ken Goldman said that the jurisdiction of the occurrence will be placed in the hands of the IFC, who will investigate the matter later this week. If the matter needs to go before the IGC Judicial board, there will be a delay because the board has not yet been selected.

IFC President Jason Ser said last night that within the next week the IFC will be "looking into exactly what took place, and what that relation is to the current rules and regulations that the IFC has for rush." He added that the body will also take into account the fact that Sigma Nu is "a relatively young chapter who may be unfamiliar with past laws," in addition to the fact that fraternity-related "rules are changing."

"There may or may not be any kinds of charges brought up at all," Ser said.

Associate Dean of Students Bruce Reitman could not be reached for comment.

"We need the diversity and cooperation that is fostered by service. Anyone who has done volunteer work will tell you that through common purpose comes common understanding," Weld said.

Others serving on the commission with President DiBiaggio include: former Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives George Keeverian; Mary Claire Kennedy, Mayor of the city of Lawrence; Environmental Affairs Secretary Trudy Coxe; Secretary of Education Piedad Robertson; as well as a student from Harvard University and a senior at University High School in South Boston.

President DiBiaggio was unavailable for comment on his appointment since he was out of town for the week on university business.

the Serb-dominated Yugoslav government and army support the Bosnian Serbs.

NATO has threatened to start air strikes against the Serb guns if they are not withdrawn at least 12 miles from downtown Sarajevo by midnight Feb. 20.

But the U.N. commander for Bosnia, Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, seems to be pursuing whatever strategy will work to get control over the guns and enforce peace in the capital.

Gen. Jean Cot, Rose's boss, met Saturday with Gen. Ratko Mladic, the Bosnian Serb commander, in northwest Bosnia near the besieged Muslim enclave of Bihac.

Cot said later that Mladic, the most powerful military man on the Bosnian Serb side, seemed to understand the necessity for the Serbs to take an initiative for peace in Sarajevo.

Vitaly Churkin, the Russian envoy for former Yugoslavia, said after meeting Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic in Belgrade that the powerful Serbian politician also supported peace moves.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

For fun-filled laughs, opt for 'Blank Check'
Disney's newest surprises with cheer

by JAY RUTTENBERG
Senior Staff Writer

There have been a million bad movies released about people unsuspectingly finding their way into major money, so it is a surprise that Disney's latest effort, Blank Check, is any good. Although it is a completely unrealistic, brainless, and unoriginal film, Blank Check accomplishes its goal of providing fun, relaxing entertainment for the whole family.

The movie stars Brian Bonsell (who played Alex P. Keaton's little brother, Andrew, on Family Ties) as Preston Waters. He is a blond suburban kid who gets dumped on by his cruel classmates and older brothers, and ignored by his cheap father. Just as Tom Hanks' character in Big wishes to be mature, Preston wishes for money and power so he can stop being pushed around.

His wish comes true when an escaped convict (Miguel Ferrer) runs over Preston's bicycle with his Jaguar. The S&L crook gives Preston a signed check to compensate for his smashed bike, but abruptly leaves without filling in a dollar amount. Preston (who, like all movie kids, is a computer wizard) used his Macintosh to fill in the check for one million dollars. Due to a series of lucky coincidences, he is soon able to cash the check and buy an enormous house.

Predictably, the next part of the movie follows Preston on his grand shopping spree. Like all "poor-to-rich" movies, it is great fun for the audience to watch him spend his newfound money. Along with his new best friend/limousine driver, Preston stuffs his castle with lavish toys. Turning his backyard into an amusement park, he has a miniature race track, boxing ring, battling cage, swimming pool, waterslide, virtual reality machine, and much, much more. Basically, Preston fulfills every middle-class child's fantasy, and it is a joy watching him do so.

Trouble ensues when the evil crook realizes what has happened, and Preston is forced to evade him, as well as a thug Juice (Tone Loc), and a banker (Michael Lerner). In the process, he falls in love with a knockout FBI agent, turns the tables on his older brothers by hiring them to work for him, and pulls some Home Alone-type moves on the three bad guys.

Many parts of the movie are copied directly from other films. Preston's relationship with the FBI agent, along with the lesson he eventually learns from her, are straight out of Big, as is a scene where Preston pokes his head out of his limousine's sunroof. Preston even tosses money on his bed and jumps about in it, although Demi Moore is not by his side, as in Indecent Proposal.

Blank Check is a whole lot better than its commercials make it out to be, and tops many of the films which it has stolen material from. The script does not overstep its bounds, and does not speak down to children. Bonsell, who has obviously taken some serious acting lessons since his work on Family Ties, is great as Preston; it is refreshing to see a child actor other than Macaulay Culkin in a good role. James Redborn also shines as Preston's childish limo driver, and Tone Loc is surprisingly funny as Juice. Despite its banality, predictability and corny life lessons, Blank Check is a difficult movie not to like.

James plays pleasers at Avalon Band's 'Get Laid' tour opens, presenting album favorites

by DAN ZINNER
Contributing Writer

Having kicked off their "Get Laid" tour last week, the English band James played to a sold-out crowd at Avalon this past Thursday. Unlike the more stereotypical audiences at some alternative shows, the crowd at Avalon consisted of groupies, yuppies, a couple of suits, and a mélange of 20 year-olds from all different walks of life (there were even a few mall chicks spotted). The pre-show gossip did not consist of the usual trivial knowledge about the drummer's second girlfriend's dog; instead, the sole topic of conversation concerned the band's talent. And the same excited people were equally as satisfied after the show.

Opening performer Priya Thomas came straight out of Harvard Square. She was a typical street performer with a guitar, sad songs and falsetto voice. The set only lasted half an hour, and she was joined on stage for the last song with James' violinist, Saul Davies.

After much anticipation, James entered the stage, and opened with their latest release, "Sometimes," which was definitely a crowd-pleaser. It seemed as though everybody knew the words and there was a joyous feeling in the air.

The second song played, "Heavens," was lesser known, but it kept up the good feeling in the crowd and incited moderate moshing. As evident by the general moshing level of the crowd, the concert was mild when compared to other alternative bands like Rage Against the Machine. However, an occasional person was tossed around.

The whole band played with emotion, and it seemed as though lead singer Tim Booth received some cathartic release from the songs that he sang. During slower songs like, "P.S.," "Five-O," "Heavens," and "Skindiving," Booth sang like the son of Michael Stipe and Flipper. He kept his eyes closed, seeming to slip into the music. The words appeared to have come from within him and were filled with emotion.

However, when the band played a faster song and there was a pause in the vocals, Booth spastically moved every muscle in his body. After about an hour and 15 minutes, the band left the stage.

Booth, following ex-member Andy Diagram, came out in a dress for their five-song encore. He said, "This is the first place I've worn a dress," but the cover of their latest album features the entire band in drag. The crowd cheered enthusiastically.

Most of the songs played at the concert were from Laid, and all 17 songs were performed beautifully by the band and sung masterfully by Booth.

Though this was the first time James has toured by themselves in the United States, the band has been the opening act for headliners as diverse as Neil Young and the Smiths. Just last month they opened a string of venues for Duran Duran, but they have proven to be a band strong enough to stand on their own. Be sure to catch them the next time they come to Beantown.

Morphine casts a spellbinding glow
Paradise concert showcases talent and spirit of members

by MELISSA J. BUD
Daily Staff Writer

If the language of sexiness has a musical translation, then Morphine has achieved complete fluency. The sound of this local band is indescribably sultry, smoky, and murky with the exact amount of smooth jazz and spicy snare to appeal to both body and mind.

Morphine achieves this mix through its most original three-piece combo: Mark Sandman on the two-string sliding bass, Dana Colley on baritone and/or tenor saxophone, and Billy Conway on the drums. This instrumental combination, along with the sexy purr of Sandman's voice, creates a sound completely unique to the music scene as we know it.

To be sure, this band already has a large following. The concert this past Saturday night at The Paradise was completely sold out by mid-week. And why not? All three band members are oozing talent.

Colley, with his big brown eyes, plays both baritone and tenor saxophone with a calm demeanor and a smooth sound. To the delight of the audience, towards the end of the concert Colley did a solo, playing both saxophones at once.

Each song was a demonstration of Morphine's talent, with finely crafted lyrics and an ever-more exciting musical style. More than half the songs were new, and the others were from their album, Cure for Pain, (Rykodisc, 1993). Whether the songs had deep romantic meaning or were merely a response to the difficulty of driving in L.A., the seductive beat kept the atmosphere of the concert smooth and sensual.

Another unusual but well-integrated feature of Morphine's sound is the mandolin in the song, "In Spite of Me." The mandolin is played on the album by Jimmy Ryan from the Blood Oranges, but at the concert, it was played by a member of the opening band, Sundays Well.

After over an hour on stage, Morphine appeared as full of energy and fervor as they were in the first song. Having finished the regular set list, Sandman took a short breather and announced that they probably had time for "one more song."

Before he could begin the planned encore, a member of the audience shouted a request for "Candy." Being that the writer was no more than three feet from Sandman's microphone, the request was heard, and indulged.

But this was not the last song, by any means. After this request, Morphine continued strong and sexy through four or five more songs. When the band finally left the stage, the crowd did an obscene amount of applauding until they reappeared.

Mark Sandman announced that there was, in fact, time for "one more song." The audience was then treated to not one, but four more songs in this second and equally impressive encore.

The intensity and sexiness of Morphine is not to be missed. As well, the band's sophisticated sound hardly diminishes on CD. Be prepared to buy tickets in advance when Morphine comes back around soon!

Jumbo hockey faces dim future

by JOHN HACKER
Senior Staff Writer

Ice hockey and New England are nearly synonymous with each other. When we think of New En land in the winter time, we think of snow, skiing and hockey. Thousands of youngsters and their parents forge out into the snow on early weekend mornings and head to, of all places, a cold hockey rink. However, none of them mind having to venture from the comfort of their home into the cold because it is the love of a sport that keeps them warm.

Most New Englanders have a deep love affair with the sport of hockey and, so, with two major professional teams in the area (Boston Bruins and Hartford Whalers) and several minor league and junior teams along with high schools, the people have a lot to cheer for. New England is a veritable hotbed of hockey and if one looks deep enough into the National Hockey League (NHL), he will find many locals donning the jersey of a professional team.

Several local high schools have produced local heroes of hockey, such as Keith Tkachuk from Malden Catholic, Jeremy Roenick from Thayer Academy, Shawn McEachern from Matignon, and countless others. Hockey is a way of life for New Englanders and it is part of the subculture, much like football in Texas. However, our own Tufts University may find itself without an ice hockey program because of budget cuts that took place three years ago.

"It's a very uncomfortable situation for us all. The money just isn't there," Tufts' Athletic Director Rocco Carzo said. Carzo conveyed the Athletic department's financial woes by saying that their budget had been cut by $60,000. "There is no nice way and no easy way to solve this problem," Carzo said.

As a result of the budget cuts three years ago, the hockey team will be but a memory within the next three years.

The history of the varsity hockey team reveals its past instability. Tufts had a varsity team in the forties and fifties, but it became a club sport after the 1959-60 season. The team was officially recognized as a varsity sport in the 1986-87 season, after their eighth attempt at attaining varsity status. They posted an impressive 13-9 season that year which began the era of Tufts hockey we are most familiar with today. But now, Tufts will once again be without a varsity hockey team.

"It's a very bad mistake. It also sends a bad message to alumni and potential recruits," senior captain Jim McMahon said.

McMahon feels that hockey at Tufts is treated as a "secondary sport" compared to the basketball, football and baseball teams. He disagrees with the decision to "cut one program instead of making small cuts in other areas to save the program." However, Carzo explained that when the hockey team was taken on as a varsity squad in 86-87, the other sports programs were cut to the "bare minimum" in order for the hockey team to survive.

"I understand that the athletic department is making a business decision, but it doesn't send a good message to other schools," McMahon said. He explained that the Tufts hockey program is responsible for $25,000 of the athletic budget, which is a third of what other New England Small College Athletic Conference (NESCAC) schools are spending on their hockey teams.

"The athletic department offered no explanations to us and there hasn't really been any encouragement," McMahon said.

Carzo says that the department's main concern is with misrepresentation. "I've been in athletics for forty years doing what was right, but this isn't right. They deserve as much as any other sport at Tufts," Carzo said. He also described his concern for incoming students, saying, "We do not want to mislead the incoming freshmen who are interested in hockey. We are telling them that in three years, there may be no hockey team." Carzo also believes that the hockey players are more dedicated than ever to their sport and they would do anything to save it, even "flood the field and practice there if they had to."

The hockey team, however, is not without support. The parents of the players have formed the "Tufts Seventh Player Club" in which they will raise money to fund the hockey team. McMahon said that the parents were responsible for the new jerseys the team wears this season. As for the season, Tufts has compiled a 6-9-1 (5-3-1 in the ECAC) record so far and still has a shot at the playoffs.

It will be a sad day when hockey leaves this small New England school, but until that time, one can only hope for the best for the team and continue to support them as long as possible.

One one hand, if it so happens that the need arises for legal assistance and I am not confused by the complexity of your arguments, I will use this personal to say that you can be my lawyer any day (and I am not talking about just briefs.) On the other hand, if you write sentences that are pages long, I will limit this personal to saying Happy Valentine's Day. Love, Rache

You did a great job talking to my class last week. You need to stop being so incredibly self-critical. You're doing a great job this semester, keep it up. David

Fox Trot, Fox Trot. Where the heck are you, Fox Trot? You did a great job as a substitute cartoon writer. How does it feel to be the only example of successful Daily love, especially today? David

Hey-Hey
Chipmunk: What are we? A Seinfeld episode? A Woody Allen movie? No. The best analogy is That Obscure Object of Desire. What does that mean? I have no idea. I love you, though, that I do know (even if you don't dress up like Madame Butterfly). Reitman and Bernstein give their best, I'm sure. From Reaction to Raw. What-what.

Sportsboy
You're a very attractive young man, don't let anybody fool you. You have an admirer on the Executive Board. Watch your back.

Irish newsboy
So you're from Massachusetts. That's not your fault.

Otto
Ottomation? Ottoman Empire. Ottomatic. Ottomobile. Ottograph. Ottopilot. Ottobiography. Ottobahn. Ottoerotic. Ottomazing.

Stressed Berg-man
From one conservative to another: these liberals with their god-awful changes have absolutely no idea, do they? If you weren't a Bruins fan you'd be perfection on feet.

Productiongirl
Thanks. You smell wonderful. You're easily the most attractive of your kind. (Though that's not saying much, really, when you think about it.) Mikey says you're spiffy. I agree.

Girlfriend
I'm jealous. With Trevor out of the way, you can have what you want. But what about me? What about my feelings? I couldn't bear to see another woman in your arms. Think about me. I want to have your babies. I want to swim with you in the womb of freedom. I want you to return to that prenatal isolation. Reductio ad absurdum? Yeesh.

Chief Bronte
You and your damn fonts. If you weren't so cute...

Ruzz
Bah. Come on, admit it. The tension between us is excruciatingly sexual. I delude myself. I know. Perhaps I've employed every Freudian defense mechanism in the book. But I can repress it no longer. I want you... and your assistant.

Featuresboy
You're almost as attractive as sportsboy. Oh, I'm getting flushed.

Lee Anne Ramsey
It's nice to know that we can go on dates, even if I'm totally unattracted to you sexually. See you at Monday Lunch (Thursday) at MacPhie this time, okay? -- Sheinkin

Conservatives sure say the damndest things. But I love you and that alone should be your beacon of light to steer you through the moments at which you would like to join the Peace Corps. Happy Valentine's Day. Love, other columnist

The Economics of the Citibank Classic Visa card. How no annual fee, student discounts and Price Protection create upward growth.

A variety of factors have been suggested as contributing to the economic growth of students, including (1) more lottery winners between the ages of 18 and 22, (2) a 37% increase on earnings from bottle and can returns, (3) more students doubling earnings in the lightning round of game shows, and (4) the Citibank Classic Visa® card. It's this last one, however, that affects most students. ¶ The Citibank Classic Visa card offers immediate savings to student cardmembers. You can now receive the Citibank Classic card with No Annual Fee. You can

No known picture of Washington smiling exists. Economists believe Washington was unhappy because he felt he could have received a better deal on war supplies. If he used a Citibank Classic Visa card, he would have been assured of getting the best price and probably would have been happier. (Artist's rendering of how he would have appeared on the dollar) capitalize on a $20 Airfare Discount for domestic flights,¹ a low variable interest rate of 15.4%,² as well as savings on mail order purchases, sports equipment, music and magazines. One might even have enough savings to reinvest in a CD or two (the musical kind, of course). ¶ On the way to the record store, or any store for that matter, take stock of the 3 services concerned with purchases made on the Citibank Classic card. Citibank Price Protection assures one of the best prices. See the same item advertised in print for less, within 60 days, and Citibank will refund the difference up to $150.³ Buyers Security™ can cover these investments against accidental damage, fire or theft (ordinarily causes for Great Depressions) for 90 days from the date of purchase.³ And Citibank Lifetime Warranty™ can extend the warranty for the expected service life of eligible products up to 12 years.⁴ ¶ But perhaps the features which offer the best protection are your eyes, your nose, your mouth, etc.—all featured on The Photocard, the credit card with your photo on it. Carrying it can help prevent fraud or any hostile takeover of your card. (Insiders speculate that it makes quite a good student ID, too.) Even if one's card is stolen, or perhaps lost, The Lost Wallet™ Service can replace your card usually within 24 hours. ¶ So never panic. As we all know, panic, such as in the Great Panics of 1837, 1857 and 1929 can cause a downswing in a market. But with 24-hour Customer Service, there's no reason for it. A question about your account is only an 800 number away. (Panic of the sort experienced the night before Finals is something else again.) ¶ Needless to say, building a credit history with the support of such services can only be a boost. You're investing in futures—that future house, that future car, etc. And knowing the Citibank Classic Visa card is there in your wallet should presently give you a sense of security, rare in today's—how shall we say?—fickle market. ¶ To apply, call. Students don't need a job or a cosigner. And call if you'd simply like your photo added to your regular Citibank Classic Visa card. Here's the number: 1-800-CITIBANK, extension 19.

(1-800-248-4226). ¶ The Law of Student Supply and Demand states, "If a credit card satisfies more of a student's unlimited wants and needs, while reducing the Risk Factor in respect to limited and often scarce resources—with the greatest supply of services and savings possible—then students will demand said credit card." So, demand away—call.

Not just Visa. Citibank Visa.

Monarch Notes® Version:

The Citibank Classic Visa card will be there for you with no annual fee, a low rate and special student discounts ...so your own economy will be more like a boom than a bust. Call 1-800-CITIBANK, ext. 19 (1-800-248-4226).

¹Offer expires 6/30/94. Minimum ticket purchase price is $100. Rebates are for Citibank student cardmembers on tickets issued by ISE Flights only.
²The Annual Percentage Rate for purchases is 15.4% as of 12/93 and may vary quarterly. The Annual Percentage Rate for cash advances is 19.8%. If a finance charge is imposed, the minimum is 50 cents. There is an additional finance charge for each cash advance transaction equal to 2% of the amount of each cash advance transaction; however, it will not be less than $2.00 or greater than $10.00. Certain conditions and exclusions apply. Please refer to your Summary of Additional Program Information. Buyers Security is underwritten by The Zurich International UK Limited.
³Certain restrictions and limitations apply. Underwritten by the New Hampshire Insurance Company. Service life expectancy varies by product and is at least the minimum based on retail industry data.
