

THE FLETCHER FORUM OF WORLD AFFAIRS

VOLUME 23:2

FALL 1999

3 From the Editors

GEOGRAPHY AND THE BOUNDARIES OF CONFIDENCE

5 WILLIAM B. WOOD Geography: A Lesson for Diplomats

The growing complexity of today's global environment requires that diplomats develop sophisticated means of evaluating the world. Multidisciplinary geography, and its new technologically enhanced tools, can help diplomats do so.

21 MARK DUFFIELD Globalization and War Economies: Promoting Order or the Return of History?

Globalization, rather than promoting prosperity and political stability, has helped fuel war economies. For conflict resolution and social reconstruction measures to be effective, the emerging development-security complex must be understood and addressed.

39 GILBERT KHADIAGALA Reflections on the Ethiopia-Eritrea Border Conflict

A border dispute between Ethiopia and Eritrea erupted in violence in 1998, not only because the border itself is ambiguous but because deeper sources of conflict could not be contained by regional institutions.

59 LUCA RENDA Ending Civil Wars: The Case of Liberia

The length and brutality of the seven-year civil war in Liberia can be ascribed, in part, to the role played by the conflict's multinational peacekeeping mission, ECOMOG. The consequences of ECOMOG's partisan role in the conflict call into question the role of regional organizations in national conflicts.

77 PAUL J. SMITH Military Responses to the Global Migration Crisis: A Glimpse of Things to Come?

Governments are increasingly treating mass migration as a national security threat. While the military has addressed migration problems effectively, the question remains whether it is the institution best suited for this role.

97 NEIL HUGHES Cities Without Walls

China's cities have always been protected by walls—some physical, others bureaucratic. For China to overcome its current problems with pollution and unemployment and for its cities to become livable again, the bureaucratic walls that the government built to divide its citizenry must fall.

119 ANKA FELDHUSEN
The "Russian Factor" in Ukrainian Foreign Policy

Four factors are helping Ukraine reassess its relationship with Russia and develop a more independent and assertive role in the international arena.

ISSUES & POLICY

139 ALFRED P. RUBIN
A Critical View of the Proposed International Criminal Court

The International Criminal Court statute, drafted in Rome in July 1998, is based on a flawed understanding of the international legal order and thus will not serve the purpose that its supporters seek to achieve.

151 ROBIN BROAD & JOHN CAVANAGH
The Corporate Accountability Movement:
Lessons and Opportunities

The diverse array of campaigns organized to mitigate the negative effects of corporate activity form part of a wider corporate accountability movement. Examples of successful campaigns provide lessons that can guide the movement as a whole.

171 IHSAN DOGRAMACI
Science and Civilization: Tasks for the Next Millennium

While modern scientific inquiry has led to tremendous technological advances in the past century, the pursuit of scientific knowledge has become so specialized that it is in danger of becoming irrelevant to the daily social problems humanity faces. In the next millennium, scientists must reincorporate human concerns into their investigations.

REVIEWS & COMMENTARY

183 W. SCOTT THOMPSON
Homme Serieux: Playing for Keeps
The Singapore Story: Memoirs of Lee Kuan Yew

191 RYAN C. HENDRICKSON
To End a War by Richard Holbrooke

193 J. ALEXANDER THIER
Between Iraq and a Hard Place: Paradoxes of U.S. Iraq Policy

201 DOV WAXMAN
Terrorism: The War of the Future

209 Books Received by *The Fletcher Forum
211 Publications by the Fletcher Community