

SYSTEM & POLITICS ESSAY

My essay is on the system & how messed up it truly is. I look at books and magazines of law & I realize that sometimes they have legal materials for naught, why do I say this! well lets realize this for starters the things that we supposed to study on to help us get back in court dont really help us cause its telling us one thing & the judges in court are telling us another. For example I have 30 yrs but my guidelines say that Im supposed to have 14 1/2 they offer 10 yrs cause my lawyer says we can win (we lose) there's no physical evidence other than somebody saying I did it and yet I get found guilty of a crime I didnt commit where is the justice in that. I got convicted off of somebody saying I did it. now do I feel race had something to do with ^{it} of course I do it always does whether we acknowledge it or not he was a white dude me a black one. The system is as flawed as the correctional officers of MDCC where race dominates & rules everything. I just wish that the people who are supposed to care & love what they do actually cared about someone getting convicted or not instead of just caring about their paycheck & until they do we will always have inmates like me wondering whether he has a reason to go one anymore or just ~~to~~ say the hell with it. But I learned to adapt to my situation and convert it into experience & lessons learned.

This is not a place to rehabilitate but to reflect on everything that has been done to me unjustly & even some unwanted cause in not perfect. But the main thing I've come to be grateful for is the understanding & even for some C/O's cause not all of them are a-holes some actually care and that bit of gratitude they show lets you know that you still a human being. And like the system I've come to realize where all imperfect its just how you represent yourself thats going to be the judge of your character.
Well thats all I got for now I've been up since 7:00 pm it's now 6:15 am what can I say this is prison.
