New Objections Raised Regarding BayBank

by Tara M. Kalagher

Baybank Middlesex at Hillside has begun its 1980 fiscal/banking year at Tufts. Their former $200. checking and $1 savings account has expanded to include a $400. checking and $1 savings account for those who wish interest on their banked monies.

Of course, for those who drop below the minimum a charge of $1 per month and 20 cents per transaction, including using the machine, is still enforced.

Incoming freshmen have been previously informed as to the benefits of "bay-banking" by the extensive literature included in their freshmen packets. In addition to Baybank, literature on Hillside-Cambridge Co-operative Bank included to give students a choice. Hillside Co-operative has the same checking account as Baybank's $200 checking account with the exception that the charge per transaction, when dropping below the minimum, is only 15 cents.

"The reason those two banks were included is because they are the ones most accessible for incoming students," said Ted Tye, head of Student Activities Office.

"In defense of Baybank," Tye continued, "I have to say that they are very cooperative and helpful with us. They have all the student organization accounts and they won't accept any transaction without our approval."

Tye cited as an example the helpfulness of the bank when they had to audit dorm accounts to trace the sifting of funds. Their charges are exorbitant but they are helpful," Tye concluded

All Tufts student payroll checks are still located at Baybank and most of the university's money is banked there. "Even though students have voiced a desire to boycott Baybank they have never done anything about it," said Bruce Reitman, Asst. Dean of Students. "The convenience that Baybank furnishes for the students has obviously made banking there worthwhile for the majority of the Tufts students."

REMINDER: The first dorm government seminar will be held tonight in the Coolidge Room of Ballou Hall at 7 p.m. (Sponsored by the Student Activities Office.)

Senate Begins Session, Swain Outlines Goals

by Anthony Everett

The TCU Senate began its fall session Sunday night with a review of summer developments and an overview of potential areas of Senate involvement in upcoming months.

The issue of funding options for a Tufts chapter of MassPIRG was also raised.

Despite last year's support from the students, the Senate and the CSL concerning the PIRG's mandatory refundable $6 earmarked for MassPIRG from the Student Activities Fee, the trustees and the administration seems reluctant to accept such a funding program.

Rich Hannigan, a spokesman for PIRG, stated that PIRG would be in favor of an alternative method of financing providing such a system was accountable to the students. PIRG would support such a system, Hannigan added, as long as it did not place PIRG in competition with any other student organization.

'KEEP OUR GOALS LOW KEY'

In other matters, the Senate quickly passed a motion to have senators conduct office hours during the week in hopes of making the Senate a more accessible.

Senate Chairman Phil Swain, in outlining Senate objectives for the year, again called for moderation. The Senate would be most effective, Swain added, if they were to "keep our goals and profiles low key." Vice-chairman Mara Glickman urged a strengthening of student-faculty relations. She added that she would like to see the influence of students on the various student-faculty committees to increase.

At the start of the meeting Swain revealed the summer hiring of Michael Hoffman as executive vice-president of administration, the Cousens Gymnasium renovations that are scheduled to be completed by the end of September and the decision to begin construction this year of the new hillside dorm.

BayBank Doesn't Balance Student Interest

Baybank Middlesex at Hillside has become the object of most Tufts' students scorn over the past couple of years as the list of charges has escalated.

Baybank checking accounts have risen from a $100 minimum in checking (plus at least $1 in savings) three years ago to $200 (and $1 in savings) presently, $1 per month charge and a twenty cent charge per transaction when the balance drops below the minimum.

In short, because a good many students cannot afford to maintain an adequate balance, Baybank reaps lucrative results.

Adding insult to injury, the Freshman packet, prepared by the Student Activities Office, has in the past limited its banking literature exclusively to Baybank. This year they did, however, include a second bank, Hillside-Cambridge Cooperative, the only other bank on Hillside. However, Hillside-Coop has the same deal with the exception of a fifteen cent charge per transaction.

In addition to the fact that freshmen are led blindly to Baybank upon arriving at Tufts, all students on University payroll not only receive their checks from Baybank, but are forced to go down to the bank, wait in long lines and cash their checks there, even if they don't have an account.

So far, Tufts hasn't seemed able to convince another bank to open a branch on or near campus. "Old Colony Bank," Tye said "was asked over the summer if they would open a bank but they felt they were too small to undertake all these students."

Old Colony Bank at Ball Square is reminiscent of old banking procedures: unlimited checking, 5% interest on all money unless you drop below $20, free standard checks, and no charges even if you drop below $20.

Why don't more students walk the extra distance to get such deals? Granted it is not as convenient as Baybank. However, neither is taking a major financial loss. Until students are ready to pull their money out, until they are ready to boycott the exploitation which is a way of life at Baybank, they will continue to lose and the guilt will lie in themselves for not having the strength to say "NO."

DOONESBURY

Latin Living

by Jill Schachter

"What a blessing, it's carpeted!" exclaimed a pleasantly surprised student. Sometimes it's the little things like comfort, wooden furniture, sofas, and cleanliness that count in the frequently hectic world of dorm life. Different "little things" like missing closet doors are, in light of the overall plushness, liveable circumstances to the residents of Latin-Way Dormitory.

One content senior relented, "I'd rather have a door, but you can't have everything!"

In spite of all the elegance, however, there are drawbacks to living in a suite set-up. Socializing is made all the more difficult as only small individual living rooms exist. "While the living rooms are great for small get-togethers, no public lounge exists," lamented a resident, "unless you count the laundry and mailrooms. In fact, I know freshmen who take a friend and go to lounges in other dorms just to try to meet people.

Because of the individual entrances and the isolational quality of the suites, residents have difficulty even meeting other residents. "People just don't drop in."

The six locked front doors provide students "with a real sense of security in Somerville." It nonetheless prevents visitors from entering as there are no guards posted.

The atmosphere is friendly but the isolation is a prevalent issue. There are little quibbles like "it's a shame the towers go up instead of across."

The IDC obviously fore-saw some of the drawbacks of this dorm set-up because they have organized a series of coffeehouses sponsored by individual suites. This will, hopefully, encourage more interaction between suites.

Since Latin Way is still establishing a reputation commented one resident, "You know, like West Hall is known for parties," we are feeling a real need for a community within the dorm. However, another student, an ex-Hodgdonite (need we say more) exclaimed, "It's about time I lived in a nice dorm!"

Letter to the Editor

Where's Daily Dining?

To the Editor:

We, two hungry off-campus Tufts students, were disappointed to find this year's Tufts Daily does not give the day's menu. We recall with fond memories waking up to our Tufts Dailies and planning our days accordingly. We would appreciate warnings about Beef Chow Yuk and Mid East Braised Beef once again. Please humor us in our last year at Tufts. We really would appreciate the menu.

Cathy Lipton, J'81

Editor's Note: Here it is. Breakfast: O.J., Fried eggs bagels, etc.

Lunch: vegetable soup, Italian pizza (assorted) German Knockwurst with saurkraut, butterscotch brownies

Dinner: baked Virginia ham with raisin sauce, chicken pot pie, deep dish vegetable pie, strawberry cream layer cake.

Editor's Choice: try the German Knockwurst

Sports DailyOn Campus*Women's Tennis Nets Season Opener

by Mike Rosen

In a flurry of drop shots and slices, the women's tennis team fought their way to a 5-4 victory over arch-rival Williams college in the season opener on Saturday afternoon. The Jumbettes displayed tenacity in winning the first five of six matches though many of the matches went the distance of three sets.

Led by senior captain Wendy Shahon (7-5, 6-2), the netters showed why they are a nationally recognized team (8-1 record last year). All of the Tufts victories were in straight sets, while three of the four defeats went to a final thirdset showdowns.

Head Coach Richard Shapiro was "very satisfied" with the victory. "Sure, there's a lot of work to be done, room for improvement," said the coach, "but hell, we won."

With only seven lettermen returning, and five new faces, including four freshmen, the team has a new look this year. Another new look is a new team strategy, described by Coach Shapiro as "patient, conservative and aggressive." Today the team travels to play the minute-men of UMASS, and will return to Medford next Tuesday to take-on Wheaton College.
