Peter:

I have a cost estimate of $10,000-$12,000 in out of pockets to revise the labor Gray video for a corporate audience.

That would include redoing the graphics to liven them up a bit, some reshooting of Gray, and a new opening either with a narrator or an Oliver Carr type outlining the issue.

We'd also delete the overemphasis on employers sacrificing worker health in the interest of a dollar.

Although corporate Gray is not a line item in my public smoking budget, I've some money available for a restaurant video that I don't anticipate making this year.

Let me know if you'd like me to proceed on this one.
