

I dig some graves

Anthony
Ehlers

Is this where you ran when they came to hunt you down?
I've lost in the ether

stumbling in the haze

I can't go back again

buried my heart

burnt it all away

entombed my love

buried,

so deep, so dark, so true,
it's a part of me and dust to you.

Winters coming back again

I'm doing all I can

There's a grave on the hill where your body lies sometimes I hear your voice in the rustle of the leaves

I watched

as they poured out your freedom and covered it with dirt.

I dig some graves.

I'm running around confused and it always looks like rain

I'm still searching for my way to be free

I can't go back again

I only ever saw myself

reflected in your eyes and I know there's truth that lives, and truth that dies

Arthur
Eliot

now when I stare at the mirror
the eyes I see are dead

I dig some graves
and now I'm on a journey to lose myself in pain

I don't remember what I said, or even what I meant sometimes I don't even know my own name I can't remember anything it doesn't even matter

I dig some graves
buried all I thought I was but I still have my scars I wander through these empty rooms

I don't care about wandering

but I don't want to lose It all seems like a dream like life is passing through I haven't myself

because I can't find peace
buried myself

I'm just a ghost
I think I'm coming home but I don't know if I belong I'm sure I died,

I was alive,

Perhaps it's all just lies.

I dig some graves
