Aidekman Art Center, 40 Talbot Ave
"Marvelous Extinctions: Melville on Animal Suffering"

Branka Arsic

In this public lecture, Branka Arsic examines the understanding of rational and irrational life forms in 19th century biology and literature, beginning with Melville's Encantadas concerning the Galapagos tortoises, and the scientific and historical archives to which he had recourse, from Cuvier and Broderip to Porter and Delano.

specializes in 19th-century literatures of the Americas and their scientific, philosophical, and religious contexts.

Humanities Reading Group with Branka Arsic

The Humanities Reading Group will hold a seminar with visiting scholar Branka Arsic on February 14, 12:00-1:30 in Laminan Lounge (Olin 206). This discussion is open, and all participants should read in advance for discussion "The Science of Life" (pp.117-248) from her recent book, Bird Relics: Grief and Vitalism in Thoreau, winner of the MLA's James Russell Lowell Prize for outstanding literary or linguistic study. A pdf of the excerpt is available from Lisa.Lowe@tufts.edu

February 21 | 4:30-6:30 | Rabb Room
"Public Amnesias"

Aditi Mehta, Kendra Field, Kerri Greenidge, and James Rice

Panelists discuss the ways that identifying "amnesias" – as dynamic omissions in the narratives of experience – can operationalize critique and activism. Panelists will discuss "forgetting" in sites that include the histories of African-descended and Native families and communities, environmental catastrophes, and as borders of academic disciplines. These inquiries and their implications have a considerable trajectory, extending from the Tufts campus and Boston area to broader regional and transnational locations.
