Late Filing Will Delay Some Students' Graduation

by ANNA GEORGE
Daily Editorial Board

Thirty eligible graduate students may not receive their diplomas on May 21 because of "bureaucratic technicalities," according to a student flier posted Saturday.

Elizabeth D. Lee, a candidate for an advanced degree in child study, said that she had been informed a few weeks ago that she would not be allowed to graduate in May because she had not turned in a "grading form" on time.

Lee said yesterday that she had circulated the flier along with a friend who asked not to be identified, in order to contact other students in a similar predicament in the hope that they might work together to appeal the decision.

Lee said she had learned from her advisor that there were thirty other students who would not graduate for similar reasons. As of yesterday afternoon, Lee had gotten no response to the flier. "This has nothing to do with the work that we've done... It's absurd," Lee said.

Lee's advisor, Child Study Lecturer David Alexander, said yesterday that he had spoken to the graduate students office and the head of the Child Study Department Fred Rothbaum on her behalf, but the appeals were unsuccessful.

"The response was that every option possible to the chair had been exercised," he said.

Alexander said yesterday that although he had helped Lee to appeal the decision to her department head, he felt that the University policy had been clear and just.

"I don't for a minute believe that it was unfair," he said. Alexander explained that the long-standing policy requires all graduate school seniors to fill out and see GRADUATE, page 2

Bromfield-Pearson Renovations Underway

by J.A. GIANNONE
Daily Staff Writer

The renovation of Bromfield Pearson, which began at the end of March, is expected to be completed in October in time to house math classes again for spring semester 1990, according to Director of Physical Plant John Roberto.

Before the renovations, Bromfield Pearson housed most math classes. Since the work began, offices and classrooms have been moved to other campus buildings, mainly Sweet Hall, where many classes are currently being held.

Mathematics Department Chair Richard Weiss said that the move, which was done over the course of Parent's Day weekend, caused minimal disruption to classes.

Roberto said that the project, which will cost approximately $2.1 million, is being funded primarily by a long-term, low-interest federal loan from the Department of Education. He said that Tufts applied for the loan over a year ago.

Weiss was excited with the prospects of moving into a modernized facility, saying that past renovations had been done "on the cheap."

"We [the math department] were as surprised as anybody that the University had applied for the loan," Weiss said.

The renovation will include the installation of new electrical and mechanical systems, air conditioning and energy efficient windows. A new set of interior stairs will be added as an emer-

NIH to Probe Tufts Researcher's Findings

by BILL LABOVITZ
Senior Staff Writer

A Tufts researcher, whose work on a study while employed at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology was first called into question three years ago, faces new allegations that her scientific notebooks were altered, according to a published report.

The Boston Globe reported Saturday that new evidence developed by the U.S. Secret Service has prompted the National Institutes of Health to reopen its investigation into a controversial research paper, written by a group of scientists that included Thereza Imanishi-Kari, an assistant professor of pathology at the Tufts School of Medicine; and Nobel laureate David Baltimore.

The Secret Service found evidence of alterations in Imanishi-Kari's laboratory notebooks that could be interpreted as an attempt to make it appear that there was more evidence for the paper's conclusions than existed at the time of publication, the newspaper said.

Only two months ago, an NIH panel cleared the scientists of major wrongdoing -- involving fraud, misconduct, manipulation of data and serious conceptual errors, but found they had committed "significant errors of misstatement and omission," The Globe reported.

An investigation by a group of Tufts scientists prior to the hiring of Imanishi-Kari in 1986 concluded that there was no evidence of fraud. The investigators said allegations by a former MIT post-doctoral student who studied under Imanishi-Kari were based on a misunderstanding.

Tufts' findings matched those of an independent MIT committee.

Last April, officials from the Tufts School of Medicine met privately with members of the Health Sciences community to defend Imanishi-Kari and restate the investigators' findings after allegations of fraud were made before a congressional committee.

A former MIT researcher testified that Imanishi-Kari had published findings based on data she knew was fraudulent. The post-doctoral student, Margot O'Toole, testified that the professor had admitted that some of her experiments had not been performed in the way they were presented in the paper.

U.S. Rep. John Dingell of Michigan, who conducted last year's hearings, plans to hold new hearings on the issue Thursday and Friday. He has maintained that the NIH review and investi-

Somerville Aldermen Endorse Bill on Toxic Waste

by DAVID SPIELMAN
Daily Editorial Board

The Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group received support from the Somerville Board of Aldermen Thursday night when the aldermen voted to endorse the Toxic Use Reduction Bill.

The bill, which is aimed at reducing the use of toxic and hazardous substances in Massachusetts, has been part an ongoing MASSPIRG lobbying effort. Tufts sophomore Meg Staines and freshman Dara Lehman have been working with the aldermen for the past few months in order to gather support for the bill.

Staines and freshmen Lisa Fabish and Andy Page, also from the Tufts chapter of MASSPIRG, have been working with the local governments of Cambridge, Arlington, Chelsea, Lexington, Malden and Somerville throughout the spring semester to gain support for the bill. The governments of Cambridge, Malden and Lexington have also voted to support the bill.

Staines said that the more endorsements the bill received from other towns, the more support the bill would gain before the Massachusetts Legislature. "We're not worried that it will pass the House because it did before. But when it goes to the Senate, if a Senator sees that two or three towns from his district support the bill, it will help the vote."

The resolution for endorsement in Somerville was introduced by Alderman John Buon-omo, the chief sponsor, and was co-sponsored by all of the other ten aldermen.

The bill has been in the Massachusetts Legislature for the past three years. Last year, the bill passed through the House, but was stalled in the Senate. In Massachusetts, a bill must pass through both houses of the legislature in one legislative year, and last year's session closed before the bill passed the Senate.

Staines said State Representative Vincent Ciampa, a Somerville Democrat, is the co-sponsor of the bill in the State House of Representatives.

The provisions of the bill provide a detailed and compre-

Senate Backs Full-Time TLGBC Coordinator

At last night's Tufts Community Union Senate meeting, senators unanimously passed a motion urging the Administration to hire a full-time administrator to work with the Tufts Lesbian, Gay, and Bisexual Community and selected Trustee and Peter-Paul representatives.

Newly elected sophomore Senator Wally Pansing sponsored the resolution which called upon the Administration to hire an "identifiable gay, lesbian or bisexual person" to coordinate TLGBC student activities, institutional policies and academic pursuits. The resolution also asked that members of the TLGBC serve on the selection committee for the administrator.

Currently, the Senate pays a salary to Donna Penn, who operates as a part-time coordinator for the group. Last month the faculty passed a motion supporting the creation of a full-time position. The motion passed by the faculty did not specify the sexual orientation of the administrator.

Selected to become Trustee representatives were Heather Adriance, who will be the academic affairs representative for the second year in a row; former senator Myra Frazier as development representative and former Senate Treasurer Ian Balfour as administration and finance representative.

Bill Freund, this year's Tufts Center Board president and current Peter-Paul member, was named to Peter-Paul for next year. Former Trustee representative Mike Yudell and ExCollege Board member Melissa Krinzman were also selected.

Also at the meeting, Senator Vik Akula was elected to be the Senate's representative to the Committee on Fraternities and Sororities.

Treasurer Ross Ginsberg announced that Senator Matt Sands had been elected to the position of assistant treasurer at the Allocations Board meeting held on Thursday.

Thanks For Support of Asian-American Work

To the Editor:

On Friday evening, the Asian-American students celebrated with me my 20 years at Tufts University. I was so moved and touched by the honors bestowed on me that I was unable to appropriately thank all those people who helped us reach some important goals. Former Provost Al Ullman was instrumental in hiring me and encouraging me in my first research paper with Professor Zella Luria on the impact of coed housing on black students. Althea Ullman, conscious of my being a single parent, chauffeured my son to school for years and masterfully supervised the interior furnishing of the dorms, thereby easing my responsibilities as the dean in charge of housing. Provost Sol Gittleman and Associate Dean Robyn Gittleman, who is the midwife of Asian-American courses as they were first introduced in the Experimental College, have continued to support Asian-American needs on campus.

Then there is the stable of deans (Howard Solomon, David Maxwell, Marion Connor, Lillian Broderick, Jeanne Dillon, Bobbie Knable, Bruce Reitman) who gave me the freedom and support to explore and develop ideas to improve the diversity on campus.

Dan Coleman, leader of the black students in the early seventies, taught me the importance of centers -- shelters, a resource, a recourse -- and the politics of confrontation, the need to reach out and support minority students.

And Professor Jesper Rosenmeier, the jolly green giant of American Studies -- an immigrant from a different shore -- understood fully and compassionately, the issues of crossing cultural barriers, the need to affirm differences, and that reclaiming one's origins is part of the process of Americanization. Without his support, Asian-American courses would not have been offered at Tufts. And we are the first East Coast college to include these courses in the regular curriculum, ahead of Brown, Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Wellesley, and others.

Linell Yugawa, as the first fulltime director of Asian American Center, brought showcases of Asian-American culture on campus. She developed orientation and outreach programs for Asian-American students, all on a meager budget. She was able to do this with the help of a small, supportive Asian-American faculty.

A final salute to the Asian-American students and alumni who work so hard giving voice to their internal dialogue, to authenticate and validate themselves not as Asians and not as Americans but as Asian-Americans. Past leaders have had to struggle with their respect for authority and their need to express the needs of their constituents -- to establish an Asian American Center and courses in the Japanese language. The Hawaiian students have always held a special place at Tufts, for they come from a diverse multicultural society, and they have been instrumental in sharing and expanding their experiences here. And a special bouquet to Anita for her unique insights into the needs of a dean.

I have been fortunate to be able to work with so many wonderful students, faculty and administrators and to know that they shared the same vision. The honors and citations bestowed on me belong to all of us. Thanks for an unforgettable evening. Aloha.

Senate Unfairly Denied SWE Appeal

To the Editor:

"We don't have one [a resume book], why should you?" This was the attitude of the senators present at the Society of Women Engineers budget appeal. SWE is a professional organization, consisting of men and women members that informs its members of opportunities available to them in the engineering field. Our largest project each year is the engineering resume book; it is sent to over 200 companies and contains submitted resumes from the entire Engineering College. Not only do the engineers involved benefit, but the entire Tufts community receives good exposure from this publication. In previous years SWE has been allocated approximately $1,000 for the resume book.

This year, after an appeal, SWE received zero funding for the project.

The senators occupied the majority of the allotted appeal time with a one-sided debate among themselves. They continually upheld their opinion that the engineers were a "select few". Are they going to support the interests of the student body which they are elected to represent, or just the Liberal Arts School?

The senators also maintained that finding a career was not a student activity. After a senior member of SWE explained that searching for a job was his most important school-related activity, the senators replied with, "Why should you get an unfair head start... you're going to be making so much money anyway." Not only did this epitomize their "us and them" attitude, but it showed an outright, negative bias.

At this point, we advise next year's senators to better consider all disciplines, including those which are sparsely represented.

In Defense of the Animal Rights Movements

To the Editor:

Perhaps Daniel Goodwin (letter to the editor, April 27, "Human Lives Come Before the Lives of Animals,") should question the sources of his own information before accusing his fellow students of ignorance. He perceives the debate for and against animal experimentation as being one of statistics. He misses the point completely in attempting to prove that animal rights groups wrong by citing "facts" from the National Institute of Health. Why would groups advocating animal experimentation be any less biased or more accurate than groups opposing it? Non-human animals do not have birth certificates, and for this reason, it would be impossible to obtain an actual body count. Therefore, the issue is not one of numbers of animals, but of the degree of suffering involved.

We could go on now to dispute the inaccuracies in Goodwin's letter, but instead we would like to offer a few points for people to reflect upon this summer.

What gives human animals the right to enslave, cut, burn, electrocute, shock, force-feed and otherwise mistreat non-human animals for our own benefit? Is it because of our "superior intellect" and reasoning capabilities?

How is it that we are alike enough to other animals for the purpose of extrapolating information from tests but different enough that we can justify their exploitation?

Keep in mind that historically and currently, sociobiology has been used to justify humans' oppression of other humans.

Rape Education Ad Directed at Assumptions

To the Editor:

I was surprised by the comments about the ad directed at Tufts men about rape in the letter to The Daily by Richard Wing and Chris Dali in last Thursday's edition and would like to clear up some misconceptions. I chaired the committee called Actively Working for Acquaintance Rape Education in which this and other educational materials were developed. Many different campus groups and constituencies were represented, including student services staff, Inter-Greek Council representatives, members of the Women's Collective and other student groups. The members of the Inter-Greek Council (Julie Jones, Brett Ingerman, and Natalie DiNatalie) took on the specific project of developing this series of ads. They did a lot of work, were very committed to this educational campaign, and sensitive to criticism. I was very impressed and appreciate their work a lot.

The goals of the committee are to raise awareness that rape and sexual harassment exist, are serious crimes, and warrant our attention. The ads beginning "Attention Tufts Men" are a series designed to get both men and women to look at the assumptions being made about women based on their dress or behavior and to state that these assumptions are often incorrect.

Given that most men that rape women do not identify their behavior as rape, we have had to assume that our campaign will need to cover many topics from the seemingly obvious to the sophisticated. The material is meant to be short and to the point, which does not allow for elaboration. We hope that the more in-depth discussions will be among students in trying to sort out sexual communication between men and women.

This committee will be continuing its work next year and I would appreciate any ideas and help on how to improve our materials.

submit a grade form in February in order to officially apply for graduation. The form contains information about all the classes that a student completed as well as dates when those classes took place and grades received.

Lee said that she intends to appeal the decision to Graduate Dean of the Arts and Sciences Robert Guertin today.

Alexander said that he had learned from the graduate student office that students not graduating, but who had fulfilled all requirements, could receive a "letter of certification" to show to prospective employers. The certificates are signed by the graduate school dean and attest to completion of requirements.

Alexander added that in the future he intended to be "very cautious" in reminding students intending to graduate to fill out the form.

Lee said that she had since submitted the form and would graduate in December, but that she was very upset because all of her relatives had already bought plane tickets to attend her graduation this month.

Shower of Meteorites Killed Off Dinosaurs, Scientist Says

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) -- A huge asteroid skipping off Earth at a low angle may have kicked thousands of giant boulders into orbit, creating a shower of meteorites that gradually killed off the dinosaurs, a scientist says.

Brown University geologist Peter Schultz's research seeks to answer a key objection to the theory that dinosaurs and many other species 66 million years ago died out because a large object struck the planet, raising a dust cloud that blocked sunlight and wiped out food sources.

Advocates of the theory responded by suggesting that a series of asteroids, comets or meteorites hit the planet. The new theory by Schultz and colleague Donald Gault of the Murphys Center of Planetology in Murphys, Calif., explains how that might have happened.

In experiments using BB pellets and dry ice, the pair observed that a projectile hitting a surface at an angle breaks into as many as a dozen major pieces and thousands of smaller ones, which then continue along the same trajectory at roughly half the original velocity.

Schultz suggests an object hit Earth, then "literally skipped off the surface" and fragmented. "They would continue to go perhaps halfway around the Earth, (causing) thousands of other devastating impacts," he said in an interview last week.

The Who Plans Reunion Tour

PHILADELPHIA (AP) -- Tickets for The Who's 25th anniversary concert July 9 sold out within two hours and a second concert was added for the next day, concert promoters said.

All 46,000 tickets for the July 9 show were sold by noon Saturday, said Julie Hittner of Electric Factory Concerts, co-promoter.

Members of the British rock band, known for their rock opera "Tommy," and hits such as "I Can See For Miles," said last week that they were reuniting for the tour.

Middle School Lifts Ban On Rock T-Shirts

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) -- Middle school students can go back to wearing their rock band T-shirts Monday, but their principal says lifting a prohibition on the shirts isn't a victory for those who protested the ban.

The school last week banned students from wearing T-shirts with the insignias of the rock bands Guns 'N Roses and Black Sabbath because the two bands' music was tied to recent cult murders in Matamoros, Mexico.

"It is not a matter of winning or losing, it's a matter of educating youngsters so that we have caring and understanding and educated young people," said J.T. Landes, principal at Washington Middle School.

The ban was enacted because of concerns raised by parents, he said.

About 150 students protested Thursday, saying the ban violated their constitutional right to free speech. About 60 pupils served one-day suspensions Friday for defying the ban.

Gunman Kills One, Injures 14 in Shooting Spree

WHITLEY BAY, England (AP) -- A man dressed all in black and armed with a shotgun went on a 15-minute shooting spree Sunday in a northeastern coastal town, killing one man and injuring 14 people before being arrested, officials said.

Police were questioning the man to determine the motive for his rampage in Monkseaton, about a mile from the Whitley Bay seaside resort and 250 miles northeast of London.

The gunman, who was not identified, roamed the streets shooting at anyone he saw, including one person in a car, another on a bicycle, one in a garden and one outside a church, said a spokesman for a local ambulance service.

"There must have been about 12 different locations given where this man had gone round," said Ken Heads, superintendent of the Northumbria ambulance service. "He was having a go at any person he met."

Witnesses said the gunman was dressed all in black, with dark sunglasses and his hair in a pony tail. They said he wore an ammunition belt around his waist and prowled the streets for 15 minutes, pausing only to shoot.

Ten-year-old Ryan Boyd told the British Broadcasting Corp. TV News:

"Across there on the corner there was this man ... all dressed in black from head to foot. He started walking around here with the gun. He was all sturdy, rigid. He wasn't frightened or anything, he was just running around with his gun from side to side shooting people."

U.S. Experts Complete MIA Investigation

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) -- Six U.S. military experts returned to Bangkok on Sunday after working with Vietnamese officials to resolve the fates of missing American soldiers; a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

The spokesman, Ross Petzing, said the experts divided into two teams and searched areas of southern Vietnam, but he had no details of the findings.

Petzing said they had arrived in Vietnam on April 12 with a four-man forensic team.

Oxfam Snackbar Robbed

by SCOTT DAMELIN
Daily Editorial Board

Approximately $200 to $250 was stolen from a locked cash box in the Oxfam Snack Bar sometime between Thursday afternoon and Friday morning, according to snack bar co-manager Tim DiLiberti.

DiLiberti said the money was locked up when the snack bar was closed at 1 p.m. on Thursday and was discovered missing when the snack bar opened the next morning.

The snack bar is normally open Monday through Friday from 11:30 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. Oxfam shares the same space with the Eaton Cafe, which operates at different times.

DiLiberti said the keys are hidden inside a combination locked shelf, but that "a lot of people knew the combination and knew where the keys where and could've gotten to the keys." He said he believed that someone had access to the keys because it was not a forcible break-in.

He said that the theft was reported to the Tufts Police on Friday afternoon, but wasn't sure what type of investigation would be conducted.

"All our above cost money -- our profits -- go towards Oxfam America. It's a volunteer organization. People volunteer their time to run the snack bar and no one get's paid," DiLiberti said. He said that about 25 volunteers help run the snack bar, which has been in operation for over eight years.

Carlisle Named Talloires Director

Susan Carlisle, curriculum coordinator for the Decision Making Center and English lecturer, has been appointed director of the Tufts-in-Talloires Program and will join Program Coordinator Caren Black in Talloires on May 14.

Carlisle will be responsible for coordinating faculty and student activities for the program, as well conferences held at the center. The Tufts European Center offers a six-week academic program each summer lasting from mid-May until the last week in June. Carlisle will remain in France through early August.

Staff appointments for the European Center include graduating Tufts seniors P.J. Simmons and Stephen Callahan, and Nanci Barker, a 1985 Connecticut College graduate, and Judy Romey, a graduate of Cornell University and the Culinary Institute of America.

gations by Tufts and MIT have been inadequate, the Globe said.

The study by the team of scientists focuses on how the immune system is altered when foreign genes are added to a test animal. It was published in April 1986 in Cell, a Cambridge-based scientific journal.

Tufts President Jean Mayer yesterday said that the University continues to stand by the findings of the informal Tufts committee that there was no fraud. "As far as I know that is the position now," he said.

Mayer said he has no intention of reviewing the disputed data himself. "This is really an MIT issue," he said.

Tufts spokesperson Rosemarie Van Camp said yesterday: "The matter under discussion either occurred or did not occur before she came to Tufts, and Tufts has no comment."

Imanishi-Kari could not be reached yesterday for comment.

Louis Lasagna, dean of the Sackler School of Biomedical Sciences, was en route from California and was unavailable for comment yesterday. Henry Banks, dean of the Tufts School of Medicine, could not be reached.

Included in the new evidence from the Secret Service, according to The Globe, is a letter written by Baltimore less than six months after the paper was published, suggesting that he himself doubted portions of the paper. Baltimore is an MIT professor of biology and the director of the Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research in Cambridge.

In that letter, written to MIT Professor Dr. Herman N. Eisen, who investigated the case for MIT, Baltimore acknowledged that a certain test for an antibody discussed in the paper "doesn't do as described in the paper... Thereza's statement to you that she knew it all the time is a remarkable admission to guilt."

Baltimore told The Globe, however, that what he wrote in the letter he "only believed to be true for about two days... as a consequence of a straightforward misunderstanding."

Asked about evidence the Secret Service is expected to provide at this week's hearings about the doctoring of scientific notebooks, Baltimore said: "As far as I know there is no evidence of forgery... The Secret Service will not testify the documents were forged. They will only testify as to how the notebooks were put together..."

He added in The Globe interview that scientists change entries in their notebooks all the time and that he knows of no evidence that Imanishi-Kari altered any data.

Storm Whaley, an NIH spokesperson, said yesterday that the agency reopened its investigation after O'Toole raised new "specific points" that calls Imanishi-Kari's research into question.

O'Toole found data used in a portion of the study to be incomplete, Whaley said. In response to an inquiry, Imanishi-Kari told the NIH that the raw data for that portion was obtained the next day and entered directly in the study, Whaley said.

"This finding has prompted us to ask additional questions about the entire Cell paper," he said. "Therefore we are reopening the case and planning to re-examine all data points that were used to generate figures, tables and text."

Whaley declined to comment on whether the Secret Service findings prompted the NIH action.

The Globe, quoting congressional sources, reported that the NIH director, Dr. James Wyngaarden, ordered the agency to reopen the investigation after seeing the new evidence from the Secret Service and Dingell's staff.

Mayer, in yesterday's interview, and Lasagna, interviewed following last year's meeting, criticized two NIH scientists who brought the allegations to the attention of the congressional committee.

"The two are building up a reputation by attacking a well-known scientist," Mayer said.

The two seek to eliminate what they consider sloppy and deceptive practices in the country's laboratories, according to a New York Times article published last year.

Most members of the scientific community believe that fraudulent activity by its members is "a relatively rare phenomenon" and that "science depends on the ability of data to be reproduced independently," The Times also reported.

hensive strategy by which the Commonwealth can make toxic use reduction a focus of the state's toxics-related programs, according to a MASSPIRG fact sheet.

One section of the bill proposes that toxic users be required to report the amounts, types and destinations of the hazardous chemicals which they use in their production process. Furthermore, the bill calls for the commissioner of the Department of Public Health to be given the responsibility of phasing out the use of "a handful of particularly harmful toxics."

Another part of the bill focuses on the integration and coordination of state agencies, citizens and workers in enforcing the bill. Citizens and workers would be empowered by the bill "to review inventories and use reduction plans, to request and attend facility inspections, and to sue for enforcement of this act," according to the fact sheet.

An additional provision of the bill calls for the establishment of a toxic use reductions institute at the University of Lowell which would be supported by a $2 million appropriation from the Commonwealth and a $10 million bond to establish a revolving loan fund.

On November 21, 1988, MASSPIRG released a report which provided data on "the dumping and shipping of hazardous chemicals in 1987 by large users and producers of chemicals across the state," according to an article in The Boston Globe from November 21.

MASSPIRG's report said that over 100 million pounds of toxic waste are produced annually, one-third of which is directly released into the environment.

Fire Escape

The sky was blue black, glowing on top of the hill. All those fluorescent bulbs cast a glow on the night sky like Fenway Park in July. We sat on the fire escape, outside my bedroom window. It was small, only enough room for two. Through the fire escape bars, our legs dangled from the third floor. You were afraid your shoes were going to fall off, right through that crack between the porch roof and the garage. We drank Coca-Colas. My radio was on inside.

It was late. How late, I don't remember, but people were coming back from parties, yelling, singing, holding hands. Then we looked over to the dorms and didn't see a single light on. Everyone seemed to have gone to bed. Or at least had shut their lights.

You swung your legs back and forth, stared at the sky.

"Let's tell stories, Tom."

"You go first," you said and then you opened another can of Coke.

I played with the tab of my soda for a while, trying to think of a story. I didn't have a particular story in mind. "Ready?"

"Yup."

"Hm... We lived on the fifty-first floor of an apartment on 93rd Street when I was about fourteen. I don't remember how many stories were in the building, but I think that it must have been very tall since the button for our floor was in the middle of the elevator panel. Mr. Grubman used to push the buttons. Mr. Grubman was our elevator man.

"My best friend Lucy Nelson lived on the fifty-second floor. Everyone said that she had been sick for a while. No one had seen her for weeks. We all assumed that it was serious. My mom made some kispie treats and asked me to bring them upstairs, to the Nelson's.

"So I went upstairs. Mr. Grubman was working inside the elevator, pushing the buttons with a smile. After a very short ride, I walked over to Lucy's apartment, number 52B, rang the bell. And rang it again.

"Mrs. Nelson opened the door, slowly, like in scary movies, but, she wasn't scary. She stood there, in the door, smiling, and she let me inside. She said, Lucy's over there. Just through the dining room.

"I went through the dining room, around the Persian rug. It's not for walking on, it's for show, Mrs. Nelson always said. I saw Lucy. She was sitting outside on the fire escape. It's so windy up there on the fifty-second floor. Air-conditioners, car exhaust and ocean breezes rushed between the buildings, faster than commuters at six. Her hair blew in the wind, kind of like those red streamers at the carnival; she kept it off her face with a yard of pink ribbon.

"I went over to the window and knocked on the glass. She looked over at me and smiled, just like her mother. And then she went back to staring out at the buildings, though it looked like she was staring out at something else.

"I opened the window. It was just like this one, the one right behind us. It was the kind that opens towards you, like French doors. Wasn't much room out there, only enough room for two. My hair was lashing against the side of the building. Lucy just kept on staring out into the city. We sat on the fire escape for a long time, into the dark time. Taxis crawled around the streets from customer to customer. The city's lights switched on, and then, one by one, switched off until the only lights left were from the taxis and the street lamps.

"I was staring down, through the grate of the fire escape when the hem of Lucy's dress brushed my hair. She was standing on the rail, rocking back and forth in her new white keds, just rocking, humming to herself. She turned round and smiled at me, her streaming hair like wings. She held out her hand and motioned me to join her. I was shaking, terrified, so confused. I didn't say a word. I took her hand and climbed the rail, took a deep breath and tried to look up.

"All of a sudden, Lucy jumped. And I was yanked after her, holding her hand. I shut my eyes, my mouth, I didn't want to see our falling speed. But I felt Lucy's hand run over my face, my eyes. I looked down. We were spinning, floating like sky divers in cotton dresses. Everyone we knew was standing in their apartment windows, everyone in the entire building. The ground was coming up on us, faster and faster. It didn't look like we were going to stop and I gripped Lucy's hand tighter, looked at her and she was smiling.

"The yellow street lines opened up like a mouth. We slid right through and the lines closed right after us. Then we were in the subway, racing along the track beside the cars, caught in a current of air. The train people saw us and waved and smiled. They acted like they knew who we were. Then we broke through the tunnel and were caught in an under-current that pulled us through the harbor water with the boxes and shoes, clothing brown and reeking.

"Next thing I knew we were lying on the beach, further south. It was sunny, a gorgeous day. Lucy and I got up, went for a walk. We bought taffy on the board walk. We took off our shoes and walked on the beach, right next to the water.

"A group of sunflowers grew at the bottom of a dune with some cat-tails, heather. We went over and they asked us to pick them. We did and shook their roots clean. They gave us seeds. The air was so dry, we had to re-plant the flowers, close to the water's edge.

"Then Lucy and I decided to collect shells, some broken pieces of glass. We came across a huge field of shells a few miles down. All different kinds, shapes and colors and we filled our pockets with them, strung them into necklaces, bracelets. We put sea-weed in our hair.

"Then my pocket started talking to me. I was really scared, a talking pocket? I stuck my hand in and saw it was a talking shell. It was a clam shell, I think. It was angry at us for collecting his friends. He, see CLIP, page 22

Former Burlington Mayor Blasts U.S. Political System

by JENA GERSTEL
Daily Editorial Board

"We have become a nation of McDonald's hamburger-makers," boomed the excited and defiant voice of Bernard Sanders, 47, former mayor of Burlington, Vermont, Thursday night in Barnum 104. "With wealth goes power," said Sanders "and when one-half of one percent of the population of the country owns the 45 percent of the wealth, you end up with a shrinking middle class, and a large, poor, underclass." A Brooklyn native, Sanders is certainly not the run-of-the-mill, 'don't rock the boat,' small-town New England mayor.

His ideology is not aligned with those of the Democratic or Republican parties. Sanders is a self-described socialist with fiery and dynamic left-wing politics in an increasing conservative political arena. He is very outspoken concerning ideas about the future of our political system.

As the mayor of Burlington for eight years, Sanders implemented what he calls "progressive politics." His aggressive program encompasses community involvement, economic development, and affordable housing, combined with repeated attacks on big business, banks, corporate greed, and the current political system of the United States. "We are the only three-party city in the country, and the only one with its own foreign policy," Sanders boasted proudly. Sanders recently stepped down after four two-year terms in office as the mayor of Vermont's largest city. The Peace and Justice Studies Program invited Sanders to deliver a lecture about community empowerment and economic development entitled "Progressive Politics and Community Development: What Can Be Done?" Throughout his presentation, Sanders evoked snickers from the audience as he biting criticized the national media's role in elections, as well

Lodge Discusses South African Liberation Movements

by CHRIS PARKS
Daily Editorial Board

Last Tuesday, Tom Lodge spoke about the roles and history of two major organizations in South African politics, the African National Congress and the United Democratic Front. Lodge is a researcher of South African politics and well-known for his book, Black Politics in South Africa Since 1945.

The African National Congress (ANC) and the United Democratic Front (UDF) are two of the most popular movements in black politics in South Africa today. Although there are numerous other movements which also deserve attention, Lodge focused exclusively on these two, given the time constraints.

The ANC today is "a tightly constructed bureaucracy." According to Lodge, the ANC is a body that has been shaped by exile, living in secrecy and surviving underground in well-policed South Africa. Founded in 1912, the ANC is one of the senior liberation movements on the African continent. In its early years, the organization followed a program of negotiation, appealing to the United Nations for assistance in its liberation struggle, but the attempt to obtain support from the UN was unsuccessful. The South African government consistently refused to talk with the ANC. When the National Party came to office in 1948, the ANC realized that peaceful change was not effective and the military wing, Umkhonto We Sizwe, was established to begin the campaign of armed resistance. This campaign is a supplementary force to the many peaceful programs that the ANC runs.

According to Lodge, the ANC resembles a nation more than it does an organization. It has schools, hospitals, a judicial system, its own military, farms, and many other facilities which give it a certain amount of self-sufficiency.

Lodge said that the ANC claims not to espouse one philosophy, but to reflect the beliefs of the people of South Africa. There are a variety of political beliefs among its members: democracy, socialism, communism, and Marxism, to name a few. In response to a question about whether he felt that the ANC was significantly altering its beliefs to attract foreign support, Lodge replied that the ANC was not making such a sacrifice, and in fact, it was more in touch with the people in the townships than ever before.

However, in presenting its program to the Western nations, in search of support and financial assistance, the ANC often modi-

Tufts to Celebrate French Revolution

by JILL DESAUELLE
Contributing Writer

Tufts students will have something to look forward to next fall as an entire weekend will be devoted to the celebration of the French Revolution. During these three days, members of the Tufts community will be shown several views of how historians feel about the Revolution through symposiums and lectures featuring distinguished speakers.

In France, the Revolution is still a controversial event. Many think that the Revolution twists French history, destroying traditions and abolishing the monarchy. Others favor the Revolution because it began the notion of republics in Europe.

The celebration will be coordinated by Professor Seymour Simches of the Department of Romance Languages and Professor Pierre Laurent, chair of the Department of History. They have planned programs from September 14 to 16, as well as weekly events throughout the fall term.

The celebration will officially commence on September 15 with a welcome given by Jean Mayer, opening remarks from the Consul General of France in Boston, as well as the first symposium on the Revolution, given by Laurent. On September 16, there will be a special seminar for Tufts students, followed by a slide presentation, entitled "Haiti's Tragic Overture: Black Jacobins in World Theatre," by Professor Veve Clark of the Department of Romance Languages. John Rocher of the Fletcher School will speak in the afternoon and there will be dramatic readings delivered by Simches and others that night.

The final day will open with a presentation of the art of the Revolution era. The remainder of the day will be dedicated to a unique symposium entitled "Women and the French Revolution." Violinists Roman Totenberg and Ceasar Frank, along with pianist Yvette Schleifer, will conclude the seminar with a recital.

In addition to the many intriguing events concentrated into these three days, there will be

KNOW THE DIFFERENCE!

Many men seem to believe that having sexual intercourse with a woman who is semi-conscious, unconscious, or severely intoxicated is sex rather than rape because she is not fighting back.

Don't and don't let other men take advantage of women unable to give consent regarding sexual activity because of alcohol or any other condition. Obviously, if a woman is intoxicated and passed out, she cannot give her consent. To take advantage of a woman in this condition is RAPE!

Spring Fling Bands Worth the Wait

by DAVE GOLD
Contributing Writer

At this year's Spring Fling, with one of the biggest turnouts in recent history, the Tufts community was treated to dynamic music. Saturday's show featured The Robert Cray Band with The Memphis Horns, Ivan Neville and The Room, and Tufts Battle of the Bands winner Plan B.

Hordes of six-pack toting students and alumni filtered onto the President's Lawn, anxious to hear live music and forget about working. For a short time, clouds loomed threateningly overhead, and the sound men pulled out rolls of plastic to keep their mixing boards from getting wet. Not a drop fell during the show, however, and each act performed with excellence.

The show began almost two hours behind schedule due to the late arrival of equipment for the main act. While tickets claimed a show would run from 11:00 to 4:00, Plan B's first downbeat was struck at 12:50.

Plan B played a tight twenty-minute set comprised of four original songs. Charismatic lead singer/guitarist Charlie Carrozo exuded great stage presence as he greeted the huge crowd. The band played "Changes" and "What The Hell" to open the set. Then came Plan B's staple tune "Ganjaman," which featured vocal harmony by bassist Wylie Van Hide, frantic guitar licks by Bill Filler, and an intricate reggae groove by drummer Adam Liebner and percussionist Matt Cobey. Plan B ended their set with "Further On Up The Line."

The ubiquitous Ivan Neville and his band The Room then took the stage, and their talent was soon evident. The group opened with a gripping bass line in "It's Up To You." Neville switched from guitar to keyboards to play "Sun" and "Never Should Have Told Me," which were flavored by New Orleans-style three-part harmony. Neville's voice resembles Huey Lewis', but it has a less saccharine sound. He has two hit singles, which came next in his repertoire, "Not Just Another Girl" and "Falling Out of Love." Neville had already traded his keyboard for a bass as the band played "Money Talks," but on

"Out in the Streets," he took a blues keyboard solo. The final two songs, "Primitive Man" and "If My Ancestors Could See Me Now," were very powerful and left the crowd ready to hear more.

To satisfy their desire, Neville jokingly ordered everyone to buy his album, If My Ancestors Could See Me Now, which was released last year. The band's performance left quite an impact, both musically and visually. Guitarist Kevin Walsh and bassist Nick Daniels each displayed versatility, trading keyboards with Neville throughout the show. The two Room members also provided an interesting cosmetic contrast: Daniels' green bass matched Walsh's tattooed arms. Drummer Michael Barsimanto triggered pre-recorded rhythms throughout the show, but also exhibited a clean style.

After the show, Neville and lead guitarist Val McCallum joined the partiers on the President's see FLING, page 21

Osmosis in the Robert Cray Band

A Talk with Bassist Richard Cousins

by BOB GOODMAN
Daily Editorial Board

How did you start playing with Robert Cray?

I met Robert in 1969 at a jam session in Tacoma, Washington, where we're both from. We started a band after that.

How has the band evolved?

We started a basic rhythm and blues band in 1974 and things naturally progressed.

So you were playing for a long time before you broke through with Strong Persuader.

Many years. Many records.

What was it about that one that did it for you?

It was on a major record label. It had major push. We were at the right place at the right time. Also, we'd kind of worked at it too. We'd been around for a while. We were about due, I think.

What do you think set the stage for the popularity blues is enjoying today?

I think the public has been getting ready for a more realistic approach to music. Like a lot of us: Los Lobos, the Fabulous T-Birds, Bonnie Raitt, Stevie Vaughan, Ivan's Band, and The Neville Brothers. Lots of us, lots of bands that have always been here are starting to get recognition and are getting signed with major labels and getting played on the radio. Getting played on the radio is all-important.

The Robert Cray Band has a very crisp sound with no studio gimmicks. Is that the key to the band's success?

I don't know what the key is. I just know that's what we do naturally. I'm glad that people accept it now, but...remember that synthesizers were all the rage for a while. So why was that the key? Drum machines were all the rage.

What tradition do you see the band working in?

We're an R&B band. We try to continue in that field. We try to keep the torch going, and also help it grow.

What process do you go through to develop new songs?

There are many different songwriters in the band. We flesh out the ideas and they evolve. Relationships between men and women are what we write our songs about because we feel we have some knowledge in that. We don't know about nuclear power, but we know about boys and girls.

How do you play off the other players in the group?

That's a difficult question. It's a common language. It's like a basketball team or a football team. Teamwork... Robert and I get along very well musically. We've been together so long, it's almost like osmosis to us. I have to pay attention but -- he trusts me.

Robert Cray has said in interviews that in the newer material, he wanted to have more of an Otis Redding influence.

Well, we do now. We have the Memphis Horns in our band now, which is the greatest thing that's ever happened to us... It adds everything to us. It gives us credibility. I worship it [the sound] ...I'm in awe.

What artists have influenced you?

People from Memphis. The Stax and Otis Redding sessions. Al Jackson and Steve Cropper. People from New Orleans, Chicago. The Beatles. All music. Jazz. Robert Cray has been a major influence on me. Robert Cray taught me how to play.

Sarabande Demonstrates the Joy of Movement

by ESTHER FERZOCO
Senior Staff Writer

The on-campus dance troupe Sarabande presented "An Hour of Sarabande," which consisted of dance numbers choreographed and performed by its student members, last Thursday evening at Cohen Auditorium. The diverse pieces included dance techniques which ranged from ballet to modern to jazz. The students showcased polished numbers which reflected their collective talents.

The opening piece, "Eaten Alive," choreographed by Nicole Berlyn and Niria Leyva, was set to the spirited Diana Ross song of the same name. Attired in contrasting black and white dancewear, the energetic dancers displayed agility as they fluttered to the pulsating beat. The piece was characterized with alternating formations and clusters of dancers.

The second piece, "Come With Us," choreographed by Nicole Pierce, appealed to the audiences' senses. Set to the peculiar rhythms of Brian Eno and David Byrne, this number consisted of isometrical and syncopated movements which arrested one's attention. The unique combination of effective lighting, concise choreography, and bright costumes of orange, lime, and yellow contributed to the dances' success. The choreography enabled each dancer to focus on her individual performance while still retaining the unity of the ensemble.

In contrast to the previous modern number, the third entry, "Reverie," returned to the classical ballet format. Choreographed by Carolyn Surgent to the "Spring" movement of Vivaldi's "Four Seasons," this number demonstrated the graceful fluidity of the four dancers as they executed ballet poses such as arabesques and relevés. Although the dancers were strong in technique, the choreography lacked variation and true emotion, and the number gradually grew tedious.

The dramatic and moving presentation of "Gypsies in the Moonlight," choreographed by Claudia Rocafort, rounded out the first half of the show. This number contained everything a successful artistic piece should have, and then some. Outstanding choreography, skilled dancers, appropriate costumes, and the accompanying music all blended together to express the idea and feeling of the piece. Inspired by a song about an old legend, this dance relates the story of a Gypsy who makes a bargain with the moon; she must give up her first-born child to the moon in exchange for a husband. The Gypsy's new husband leaves for the service and returns to find that she has had a child. Believing that she has been unfaithful, he kills her and leaves the child at a mountaintop. The child is then taken by the moon, according to the agreement.

Unlike the other pieces, this dance told a story through symbolic movements and telling expressions on the dancers' faces. The audience could feel the Gypsy's intense desire to have a husband as she danced with the moon. Symbolizing the child's subsequent birth, a dancer attired in pure white emerged from the folds of the Gypsy's skirt and played the part of an innocent child through her delicate gestures and movements. The choreography which accompanied the confrontation between the Gypsy and her husband was dramatic. Stunning in a black bodysuit, bolero, hat and a red sash, the husband, portrayed by choreographer Claudia Rocafort, expressed anger through aggressive movements which culminated in the Gypsy's death. The child was then whisked away by the husband to the mountaintop where she falls under the protective care of the moon as they joyfully danced in

by MARK McLAUGHLIN
Daily Staff Writer

Jazz is the kind of music that must be seen live in order to be appreciated fully. The effort and creativity put into each song is not captured as well on vinyl, according to the members of The Sheryl Bailey Quartet, who make an appearance tonight at Hotung Cafe at 8:00. The quartet is comprised of two women and two men, and while this lineup may not seem odd in the pop/rock/folk world, it is a big step in the realm of jazz. Sure, Tracy Chapman, Michelle Shocked, Melissa Etheridge, and even the Bangles have helped blast open the doors for women, allowing them to be looked at as songwriters and musicians as well as performers; but somehow, women in jazz have not earned the respect they deserve.

The Sheryl Bailey Quartet aims to change all that. And while they are aware of the odds against them, they do not let that obstacle hinder them, according to Bailey, the quartet's founder, who has also played with the Brian King/Dennis Nelson Ensemble. Instead, they concentrate on making music to the best of their abilities and letting that music speak for itself.

The group is spearheaded by songwriters Bailey and Brian Harrington, who are both guitarists as well. The remaining rhythm section is comprised of Linda Malouf on drums and Christian Diener, also a classically trained cellist, on bass. In the four months that they have been performing together as a group, the Sheryl Bailey Quartet has received a very positive response from their audiences, and according to Harrington, playing live is even more thrilling for the band than it is for their audiences. In July, they will perform with the Leni Stern Quartet, who record on the Passport label.

The band's influences are many. John Coltrane, Cecil Taylor, Duane Allman, Wes Montgomery, Pat Metheny, and many other highly respected jazz artists have inspired the band in some way. Some of the Quartet's members are still students, but all have had significant experience in other areas of music besides jazz. This is fitting, Bailey explains, because jazz is constantly evolving, and is much more than what music most people classify as jazz. That evolution is apparent in The Sheryl Bailey Quartet.

unison to the fading music.

The piece "Ain't Gone 'N' Give Up On Love" opened the second half of the show and consisted of two dancers and two chairs. Choreographed and performed by Nicole Pierce and Stephanie Schaaf, this innovative number employed chairs which the dancers slid on and off of as they moved in perfect synchronicity to the blues-like rhythms of Stevie Ray Vaughan. This number captured the audience's attention through simplistic but highly visual choreography using the chairs as vehicles for artistic expression. Each movement followed an orderly succession as the dancers became one with their chairs.

The next piece, "Eckbert's

Femme," choreographed by Elissa Barrett, flowed smoothly. Interpretive movements and a variety of bodily groupings characterized this piece. Interesting music provided by Suzanne Vega's "Tom's Diner" and subtle lighting further enhanced its effectiveness. The dancers incorporated energy and dramatic facial expressions which resulted in a unified piece.

The closing number, "C'est Le Vent," was another visually stunning performance, choreographed by Claudia Rocafort, which successfully integrated movement, lighting, and music to create a mood and a lasting impression. The dancers, dressed in black, entered the stage bathed in green and purple lights as a smoke machine pumped out smoke from the side. The concentrated and balanced choreography was set to music from the Betty Blue soundtrack. The sleek and airy movements of the dancers flowed from careful design and formation patterns that included three chairs upon which alternating clusters of dancers maneuvered themselves.

The dance numbers performed this evening succeeded in conveying the creative intent of the choreographers to the audience, who were entertained as well as stimulated by the efforts of the ensemble. The interplay of dance and music created an enjoyable atmosphere in which everyone could relax and absorb the emotion of each piece.

On December 6, 1988, the Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity organized a mandatory workshop for brothers and pledges on the issue of sexual harassment. Two counselors from the Counseling center here at Tufts addressed the eighty members of the Tufts Sigma Phi Epsilon community about such issues as date rape and unfair stereotypes.

Fraternities are often stereotyped as bastions for sexism, homophobia, and drunken behavior. In this sexual harassment workshop, many of the brothers identified that such behavior and stereotypes have largely come about as a result of isolated incidents of the past within the Greek community. Many brothers felt that fraternities must now endure the negative stereotyping cast upon them by members of the Tuft's faculty and administration. More importantly, the workshop stressed the fact that fraternities must play an active role in educating and sensitizing their own members towards the issues of sexual harassment.

All in all, the sexual harassment workshop was a great success. The brothers addressed the issues with a directness and seriousness which is to be commended. As a result of the workshop's success, future workshops with the help of the Tuft's Counseling Center will be conducted with all fraternities on campus.

The members of the first Tufts' Greek Judicial Board have been chosen. Following the selection process, four permanent and four alternate positions were chosen. The permanent members are: Glen Levy (Sigma Nu), Matt Thomas (Psi Upsilon), Lisa Korsten (Alpha Phi), and Stacy Yolish (Alpha Omicron Pi). The alternate members are: Mike Famborne (Sigma Phi Epsilon), Jon Koch (Psi Upsilon), Jason Young (Delta Tau Delta), and Nicole Collins (Alpha Omicron Pi). Also serving as permanent members by virtue of their positions are: Steve Fox, IFC President (Sigma Phi Epsilon), Liz Bachner, Panhel President (Chi Omega), and Sarah Lowthian, Vice president IGC(Alpha Omicron Pi.).

The goal for establishing the judicial board is to make a step toward the self-government of our community, as well as to establish an acceptable level of behavior for all its members.

Congratulations to all board members and good luck in establishing a strong judicial board!

Dedication to philanthropy is a unifying trait among all the organizations at Tufts. Every house has a particular cause which they actively support. In addition to the individual philanthropies of the Greeks, they also bind together in various situations. The Tufts University Panhellenic Association, which represents three sororities on campus, has proven what a success a combination of efforts can create. The Panhellenic Association, known as TUPA, has selected Respond, a shelter for battered women and children, as the philanthropy which they support. TUPA chose to align itself with Respond because it was as a women's organization and TUPA is a coalition of women. Respond, is also privately funded thus they receive no government aid. TUPA has been able to help Respond handle its difficult financial burdens through several fund-raising events.

The primary activity which TUPA utilizes to raise money for Respond is the cause dinner held one night in all the dining halls. The women of TUPA encourage other students to eat a meatless meal such as spaghetti and the money that would otherwise be spent on meat is given to TUPA who donates it to Respond. The cause dinners have been very successful. TUPA's first cause dinner, held in October 1987, raised $1076.14 for the shelter. A second cause dinner in the winter of 1988, organized by Amli Barnard, the 1988 TUPA Vice-President, was the most profitable dinner in recent years. TUPA was able to donate $1088.60 to Respond. The director of Respond was extremely grateful and informed Ms. Barnard that the TUPA donation would be roughly half of the shelter's Christmas meal. TUPA was also responsible for selling "luck-ins" to the University students. Through this event $250 was raised for Respond. The Tufts' chapter of the Panhellenic Association has been working hard to support a worthy cause. The philanthropic activities of TUPA have been of sincere benefit to the community shelter for battered women and children, Respond.

The Sigma Nu - Alpha Phi Superdance '89 was a success. Close to $3,000 was raised for the American Cancer Society and Lawrence Memorial Hospital. Dancing continued for seven hours as the DJ, Bill Leuci, The Blue Lights, and Club LVS cranked out great music.

Contributions by local vendors made this event possible. Excitement peaked during the raffle drawing for the grand prize weekend to Smuggler's Notch Ski Resort. Proceeds from the Superdance go towards research and local health programs.

Thanks to over the 550 students whose participation help make this event possible. Special thanks to the Senate, Sol Gittleman, and the Provost's office for their contributions.

As the IGC continues to strive toward the unification of the Greek system, one of its projects has been to unify rush period. This was accomplished for the first time this semester as both the IFC and TUPA held a single rush period starting February fifth and lasting until the fourteenth.

Although the two organizations held rush simultaneously, they each used their own strategies. TUPA held a very organized schedule in which there were two days of rotating house parties, three days of theme parties, and three days of preference events. The fraternities, on the other hand, held a typical open rush where rushers were free to select the fraternities and events of their choice.

Aside from the unification of rush, there was another bright spot this semester. For the first time, all of rush was completely dry. Each and every event was completely non-alcoholic. For fraternities, this was a big change, but one that was handled very successfully.

The results of rush were excellent. We now have many new men and women enthusiastically our system. We hope that with the efforts like this the Greek system will continue to grow in strength, while striving toward unity.

Spring rush was a huge success thanks to the many people involved in its organization and its execution. At this time, I think Stacey Druks, Edie Eisner, and Hillary Pierce, the rush chairs for AOPi, Chi-O, and Alpha Phi, deserve a public "Thank You" as does Rachel Goldstein, the Rush Chairperson of Panhellenic.

The sororities conduct rush differently than the fraternities. Each rushee must attend two nights of rotating parties, which allows them to meet sisters at each house. They then sign up for theme parties at the house (s) they are interested in. We encourage the rushees to attend all three. This rush, the themes were Mardi Gras, Disney and Greek Mythology. These parties let both the rushees and the sisters meet on a less formal basis, after all, how formal are Mickey Mouse ears or masks?

The last phase of rush is the preference parties, which the houses ask the girls they are most interested in to attend. Preference cards are filled out by the rushees and bid lists are made by the sisters and through a process called bid matching, the invitations to pledge are given. This spring, we extended bids to fifty-three women.

It is evident that cooperation is a vital aspect in having a well-run rush. The Tufts University Panhellenic Conference is proud of how the three sororities worked together towards achieving a common goal and we look forward to many more successful rushes and inter-sorority events. This is just one example of what can be accomplished when we all work together.

Brothers of Delta Tau Delta, Please accept our apology for the incident that occurred on Thursday night, February 25. Our original intention on that night was to ambush a group of pledges and brothers from another fraternity, who allegedly were to be painting the cannon at 12:30. They didn't show up, and upon walking home in a drunken state past your house we threw our eggs. It was not a premeditated attack against you, and had no connection with Theta Chi fraternity aside from the fact that one of us is a brother there. We were obviously intoxicated and mistaken. In the spirit of Delta Tau Delta we ask you to forgive us and not press charges, as you have asked others to forgive you and not press charges against you in the past. We bore no malicious intent against the fraternity, please accept our gesture. We were tentative in washing Dennis' car, for fear of scratching it, and so we only washed the rear window. Enclosed is money for him to have it washed at the Main St. car wash. If he'd like we'll take it over ourselves and have it done for him.

An Open Letter to the Faculty...

by Cathy Harder-Bernier, Greek Advisor

"...Be a faculty advisor for the fraternities? You've got to be kidding! Why would anyone want to associate themselves with those selective, sexist party animals? As an advisor, I'd probably be held liable for every rotten thing they do! And heaven knows that they certainly do not promote scholarship...I'd be wasting my time..."

The preceding conversation has taken place on more than one college campus, and Tufts University is no exception. Fraternities and sororities on this campus have written newsletters, held reception, and extended personal invitations to hundreds of members of the faculty and administration, and they have received little to no positive response. But why should a faculty member care about fraternities and sororities, particularly given the above scenario? As the very first Greek Advisor at Tufts, I have occasionally wondered the very same, but let me assure you, there are many more reasons why faculty members should care, rather than not care at all.

Greeks are not all bad, I promise! Their founders began their organizations with high ideals, strict moral guidelines, and firm principles such as honesty, fairness, scholarship, leadership, and service. Their chapters promote brotherhood or sisterhood, which furthers the goal of developing a community spirit at Tufts. Greeks therefore are among the most loyal alumni/ae; their members give over half of all monetary donations made to the Development Office here at Tufts, and they make up less than 20% of all alums. They promote leadership by providing opportunities for even the youngest members to take on responsibility; leadership development programs, retreats, and conferences are regularly attended by chapter members. This encourages the development of the "whole person", and contributes to the educational process inside and outside of the classroom setting. Finally, they cultivate a norm of philanthropic giving and community service, which helps to further the wave of "new volunteerism" in our society. I will grant you that there are anomalies to these rules, but those exceptions are exactly why guidance from faculty role models is needed.

The criticisms are many, but they are mostly misunderstood assumptions. Let me address those portrayed in the opening scenario. Yes, fraternities and sororities are selective in determining their membership. However, so am I when hiring a member of my staff group. I will venture that a non-selective hiring process does not exist in any department on this campus, so what right do we have to criticize the Greeks? My staff is a group, with goals and purposes and tasks to be accomplished just as are the fraternities and sororities. If I have a right to be selective, then so do they, as long as their selection criteria can be supported by the goals and purposes of the group. A faculty advisor could help insure that those criteria are enforced purposefully and that they are not just elitist for elitism's sake. Ah...you say, but are they sexist (the second criticism)? First of all, developmental literature asserts that male-male bonding and female-female bonding are important and necessary stages in college student development as they prepare themselves for the "real world". Fraternities and sororities promote interpersonal development throughout their many and varied social programs. Hence, the argument for single-sex organizations. But are they also inherently sexist? Perhaps...but they're working on changing that norm. A committee has been formed to address issues of sexual harassment and date rape. I have encouraged them to substitute the word "woman" where they used to say "girl", and they've actually begun to listen to me. Small victories, but they're getting better. If our society as a whole was non-sexist, changes would be more easily justifiable and understandable...in the meantime, I'll settle for some non-sexist faculty role models! The third criticism, the stereotype of Greeks as party animals, can also be confounded. GAMMA (Greeks Advocating the Mature Management of Alcohol) has instituted a long-term program of alcohol education that will reach every new member of the Greek system, and therefore eventually the entire system. They're also considering extending that program to every entering freshman at Tufts. Every house has begun a system of mandatory identification checks and spotters to limit underage drinking and alcohol abuse at their parties. Several additional measures have been taken to reduce any given house's liability (the fourth criticism); complete details are explained in the Social Policy. Besides that, I am covered under the University's liability insurance in case of a lapse; I suspect that faculty members could pursue the same coverage if they were to act as advisors. Finally, a word about scholarship. Tamar El-Emary has recently been selected Inter-Greek Council (IGC) Academic Coordinator. He has great ideas, but he needs faculty support. I hope that you'll give it to him and the rest of the fraternities and sororities.

As I kiddingly said to a group of IGC officers while away at a leadership conference last weekend, "I'm occasionally proud of you folks". I am actually very proud of the progress that this Greek system has made over the past several months. They may have a way to go, and they may need your help to get there, but I believe in the potential, and I believe that fraternity and sorority experiences can be very positive additions to a student's education. I invite your suggestions, and welcome your input. (I can be reached in the Student Activities Office at 381-3212). Most importantly, I am soliciting your support of the fraternities and sororities at Tufts University. They can be reached most afternoons at 381-3874. Thanks!

Jumbos Rise To Occasion, Keep Playoff Hopes Alive

by MIKE FRIEDMAN
Daily Editorial Board

Pressure? What pressure? For the entire season, the Tufts Softball team has been a club on the edge. Through eight games, they were a dismal 1-7, and if they lost as many as two contests in their next nine, they would have no chance at the postseason.

Pressure? What pressure? The Jumbos stood at 6-8 with three games remaining before tournament seeds were handed out. To defend their NIAC title, they would have to win all three.

Pressure? What pressure? The bases were loaded in the eighth inning of a 2-2 tie, and the count was 3-2 on the batter. If the pitch wasn't a strike, then Tufts would lose, and be eliminated from post-season consideration.

So, what happens? Tracy Cleverdon throws a strike which was converted into an easy groundout. The Jumbos sweep their last three and go 8-1 in their last nine games.

"We knew, before we left Medford, that we would win all three games," said coach Kris Herman. But, by the same token, they knew that had they lost any, they wouldn't go to the NIAC tournament.

The first of the weekend's three games was a match-up with a tough Colby team. The Jumbos showed that they were ready to play as they scored the game's first run in the first inning. Center fielder Mary Carew hit a one-out single, moved to second on an error, went to third on a passed ball, and scored on senior Tami Gaines' groundout.

Colby got the run back the next inning when they loaded the bases with one out, but clutch pitching by Cleverdon got the Jumbos out of the inning without further damage. In the third, the Jumbos moved ahead 2-1 on a costly White Mule mistake. With two outs and Jen Bucknam on third, Carew hit a ball to the second baseman. But instead of going to first base for the final out, the second baseman attempted to get Bucknam at the plate and failed.

The score was evened in the bottom of the inning as the White Mules took advantage of a hit-batsman and three Cleverdon walks. But like the inning before, they were only able to score once even though they had the bases loaded with one out.

After a Gaines home run in the top of the fourth (her first of three on the weekend), Cleverdon and the Jumbo defense took over. Cleverdon allowed only three more baserunners as she threw a three-hitter. The defense turned a key double play in the fifth to keep the one-run cushion. An insurance run was added in the seventh to make the final score Tufts 4, Colby 2.

But the weekend's most exciting game was a 3-2 extra-innings affair the next day against Bowdoin. Cleverdon picked up where she left off against Colby, as she only gave up two hits. But Bowdoin's Naomi Shanks kept up with Cleverdon pitch for pitch.

After the regulation seven innings, the game was tied at one apiece. But Gaines hit a towering homer to give the Jumbos a 2-1 lead into the bottom of the eighth. The team knew that all they had to do was get three outs to win the game and even their record at .500 for the first time all year.

But like everything about the Jumbos this year, they didn't make it easy. "We were doing our best to give it away," commented Herman. Cleverdon couldn't find the plate as she walked three batters, and Danielle LaCroix let a ball go through her legs as the Polar Bears knotted the score at two.

At that point, Shanks came to the plate with the game on the line, the bases loaded, and with two outs. After getting out front 1-2, Cleverdon threw the next two pitches for balls. At this point, coach Herman was very nervous. But "Tracy was cool, very cool," explained Herman, "and she just threw it over." Shanks hit the ball to LaCroix, who fielded it cleanly and recorded the final out.

The Jumbos took the lead for good in the ninth, as Tara Milardo hit a pinch-hit double and scored on Carew's single up the middle. But, of course, Tufts made it interesting in the bottom of the inning. The leadoff batter walked, and was on third with two outs. The Polar Bears' number three batter then came up with the winning run on second. However, she was ejected from the game on a technicality (she had been pinch-run for the inning before and had not checked back into the game). Cleverdon got the new batter to pop out to leftfielder Ellen Rideout, and kept the Jumbos' chances alive.

The next game was mere formality, as the Polar Bears were obviously drained. Kate van Keuren hurled a two-hit shutout as the Jumbos won 7-0.

Middlebury Outscores Tufts 7-0 In Final Half, Win 14-4

by JUSTIN PROCHNOW
Daily Staff Writer

Oh well. Maybe next year. The Tufts Men's Lacrosse team lost their last chance to end the season with a winning record in falling to Middlebury in Ellis Oval on Saturday, 14-4. The Jumbos will close out the season today, at home against Bates.

The day, like the game, started out bright and sunny, and it looked like a great day for lacrosse. The Jumbos started off the scoring with a shot from Mike Redden, on an assist from Dave Garfinkel with five minutes elapsed in the game. Two minutes later, the two reversed the pattern and Garfinkel came back with a score on a penalty situation. The Jumbos passed it around during the penalty for a while, than Garfinkel took it in off a Redden pass and bounced it through for the 2-0 lead.

At this point, Middlebury called a timeout to see if they could stop the onslaught that

Tufts Captures NESCAC Crown

by LEVERETT WING
Senior Staff Writer

After an up-and-down 8-4 regular season, the Tufts Men's Tennis team ended its season on the highest of highs yesterday, winning the New England Small College Athletic Conference (NESCAC) Championships yesterday. The team outdistanced eleven other schools, including eventual second-place finishers Amherst and third-place Williams, in the grueling three-day tournament.

The tournament pitted similar seeds from each college and university against each other, with every match worth one point. Conditioning was a major factor, with some competitors playing ten or twelve sets per day.

According to coach Jim Watson, the key day was Saturday, when the most rounds are played. Tufts had a "Super Saturday,"

Jumbos had a winning record. But their success can be traced to the emergence of the pitching staff. Cleverdon has won her last five outings and van Keuren has pitched two no-hitters, and two shutouts. In the team's nine wins over the year, the Jumbos have only given up a total of eleven runs.

seemed to be forthcoming. Something that Middlebury coach Jim Grube said must have sunk in, because Middlebury came back with three straight goals to take the lead 3-2.

All three goals came from Middlebury attackman Ron Willet, who would score six goals

Tufts co-captain Mike Redden opened the scoring on Saturday.

Now all that is left for the Jumbos to do is wait. Today, the NIAC bids will be released, and with a record of 9-8 the team has a good chance to make the tournament, especially if the selection committee looks at the last before the contest was over. Dave Pepper came back for the Jumbos to score a nice goal, giving Tufts a share of the lead going into the second quarter.

Unfortunately for Tufts, this would be the start of a very long last three quarters. Willet scored his fourth goal for the Panthers minutes into the second quarter. Garfinkel came back to score his eighth goal in the last three games, and to give Tufts a tie for the last time in the game.

At this point, the sun started to go behind the clouds, and likewise, so did the Jumbos' chances for a winning season. The Jumbos would not be able to put the ball in the net the rest of the game, as Middlebury reeled off ten unanswered goals.

Tufts' luck took such a turn for the worse that Middlebury's next goal wasn't even a surprise upon reflection at game's end. Jumbo goalie Bob Willen blocked a Panther shot, and as he was

Jumbos Down Connecticut College

by DAVID ROTHENSTEIN
Daily Editorial Board

On Spring Fling Weekend, the Women's Lacrosse team traveled down to Connecticut College to defend their undefeated record against the Camels. Battling weak officiating and a psyched-up Camel squad, the Jumbos quickly overcame a slow start and pulled away to the tune of a 12-5 victory.

Conn. College came out of the box ready to take on the vaunted Jumbos, and they indeed got on the scoreboard first. However, Tufts then recovered its composure and rattled off five consecutive scores to take a 5-2 lead into halftime.

After that, as has been the case all season, the second half was all Tufts. Getting incredibly balanced scoring from Melissa Lowe, Kim Zinman, Karin Schott, Stephanie Bower, Anna Lisa Gee, and Jennifer Lee, the Jumbos had too much offensive firepower for the Camels' defense to handle.

In addition, the defense turned in another outstanding performance en route to victory, creating several key turnovers throughout the game. While the offense may get the scoring numbers, there is little doubt that the Jumbo defensive corps is the key to Tufts' tremendous strength. Besides All-American goalkeeper Sheryl Bergstein, the group of Lee, Becca Knapp, Cathy Healy, Catherine Beldotti, Aryn Landau, Kris Soucy and Moira Connor deserve a great deal of credit.

Thus, their perfect 10-0 record intact, the Jumbos have only one regular-season game left, against Bates on Monday afternoon. While Tufts has a lot of momentum going into the game, the Bobcats boast a very different style of play and the Jumbos are not about to overlook such a team in the final game. After that, the nationally-ranked Jumbos must await the ECAC seedings for the Championships, to be held on the weekend of May 6-7.

Brian Nurenberg, in the "B" semi-finals.

Much should be said about Hertzler's conditioning -- Hertzler played eight to ten sets of singles on Saturday, but still was able to reach the finals in the "B" doubles competition.

In the "C" division, Tufts' fifth seed, Ed Crowley, reached the quarter-finals before he was eliminated, while teammate Mark Nevils lost in the semi-finals to the division's eventual winner from Connecticut College. "Nevils played courageously," explained Watson. "He played six sets with a pulled groin and still only lost 6-4 in the third set."

In doubles competition, the number one team of Ober and captain Steve Marsella lost in the semi-finals to the eventual winners from Williams 6-2, 3-6, 6-3. On the way, the duo defeated

*Men's RugbyTufts Murders Harvard In Bloody Rematch, 16-0

by TIM MASON
Contributing Writer

This past Thursday, with an unprecedented display of fury, Tufts Rugby's Select B side annihilated Harvard University. Dominating from the opening whistle, Tufts hammered that small school in Cambridge and romped to a 16-0 shut-out in a sweet way to end their spring season.

The Tufts ruggers had been anticipating this match since the Tufts-Harvard war last fall. In that last confrontation, Tufts suffered a discouraging loss in a game that sent six of their starting players to the hospital.

While recovering from their wounds, the ruggers plotted revenge. The Select B side consisted of the top fifteen non-seniors on the team. Presumably, this will be the A side for the 1989 fall season. The budding team hoped to not only gain playing time together, but also to impart some vindication.

Relations between the two teams have never been worse than at present. At this point, Harvard is no longer an arch-rival, but an arch-enemy. Before the game, prop Bob "MacKenzie" Morrison explained that "they are the bane of our existence... We must wipe them from the face of the earth." Hostile feelings such as these are wide-spread throughout the team. Second row Rick Lofgren also stated: "they are arrogant, pompous pretty-boys and their mothers dress them funny... We're going to bury them." Clearly, Tufts intended to not simply win, but to butcher Harvard like cattle; and butcher them they did.

When the first whistle blew, the Tufts juggernaut began a slaughter of apocalyptic proportions. Tufts' initial blow shattered all but token resistance and the feeding frenzy began in earnest. Like a machine, the ruggers ate up yardage irresistibly and sent Harvard reeling backwards in panic. Tufts virtually rendered Harvard limb from limb and scattered them across the field.

Soon, the quaint rugby pitch was transformed into a no-man's land littered with the broken bodies of Harvard players and slick with crimson blood. The paramedics were overwhelmed and could do little more than heap the twisted bodies in a huge pile. The fans sat transfixed by the spectacle as the bloody battle showered the bleachers with a fine mist. For the entire time, Tufts' ruggers screamed like banshees and revelled in the gore.

Tufts' superiority was evident on their first counter-attack.

Catching a ball seventy-five yards out, fullback Otto Born skirted the pack and passed the ball out to winger T. Moyson. Rushing down the left side, Moyson waited until the last second before making a perfect flip to outside-center Ethan Pollock.

In fact, the pass was so good that Pollock never even had to alter his stride as he got on his wheels and sped up the sideline. Pollock was only ten yards out when a Harvard rugger somehow managed to catch him. In a last act of desperation, the Harvard player dove and tripped up the fleet-footed Pollock.

Pollock stumbled and barely managed to maintain his balance. When he had cleared the sprawled rugger, Pollock was nearly out of bounds and hopping towards the try-zone on one leg. Little puffs of lime billowed up as Pollock's foot came within centimeters of

*BaseballBaseball Team Is A Hit

by DAVE SALTZMAN
Daily Editorial Board

It's obvious that the Tufts Baseball team has no problem hitting the ball. With such past wins as 12-1, 14-1, and 9-0, it's clear that the Jumbos like to beat up on their opponents.

So they did it again this weekend.

After utterly destroying Bates on Friday afternoon by a score of 29-8, the Jumbos journeyed to Colby and took the second game of a doubleheader, 6-0, to earn a split on the day.

Tufts immediately took the offensive in Friday's slaughter at Bates, taking a 3-1 advantage after one inning. After giving up four to the Bobcats in the second to fall behind 5-3, the Jumbos turned on the power, took off, and never looked back.

They scored four times in the third, once in the fourth, eight times in the fifth, eleven times in the sixth, and twice in the seventh. Meanwhile, the Bobcats, unable to stem the tide of Tufts runs, managed only three themselves. Senior tri-captain Mike Theodore contributed his first home run and senior Christian Juhring (6-1) pitched the complete game for a 29-8 Tufts win.

At Colby, the Jumbos dropped the opener but exacted vengeance with a victory in the nightcap. Junior centerfielder Bill Canon smashed his fourth round-tripper of the year in the first game of the twinbill as the Jumbos, behind senior starting pitcher Kerry Callahan (4-3), took an early lead against the White Mules. But trailing 3-0 in the fifth, Colby scored five times to go ahead by two with only two innings left. Tufts could only scrape up one run before finally falling 5-4.

The nightcap, however, was a whole other story. Junior pitcher Chris Lamothe (5-2) scattered seven hits and six Jumbos crossed the plate in the first four innings as they won the second game easily 6-0.

The victory raises Tufts' record to 17-10. After losing four of their first seven games this season, the Jumbos have gone on a rampage, winning 14 of their last 20. They hope to raise their record to 18-10 today against Brandeis in their last game of the regular season.

SEMESTER IN REV

Low student turnout voided a referendum on the voting status of minority representatives in the Tufts Community Union Senate since only 23 percent of the student body voted, falling short of the required 25 percent needed to make a binding referendum valid. The referendum would have increased the voting Senate membership from 29 to 33, granting voting rights to cultural representatives from the African-American, Asian-American and Hispanic student populations. The referendum also would have mandated a fourth representative from the gay, lesbian and bisexual population. Trustee Representative Mike Yudell, pictured above, co-authored the referendum.

Four multi-alarm fires struck Davis Square this semester, causing millions of dollars of damage to homes and businesses. In January, a seven alarm fire destroyed several businesses along Elm Street, and in February a four-alarm fire gutted the building housing Store 24 and the six apartments above it. Two homes on Winter Street were struck with three alarm fires, one in February and one in April. Authorities concluded that the four fires were not related, but that the Elm Street and Store 24 fires involved arson.

Funding for the Massachusetts Public Interest Group became the focus of debate as the Tufts Community Union Senate's Allocations Board approved budgets for the coming school year. While the group Students Against Forced Funding began circulating a petition to show a unified objection to MASSPIRG's method of funding, MASSPIRG began its own impromptu reaffirmation drive. The Senate filed a harassment complaint against the group for their aggressive lobbying tactics. MASSPIRG's original $28,476 request was cut by ALBO to $7,494, and then to $1,277.64, net to zero, but was appealed on the Senate floor, where MASSPIRG was finally allocated $15,422.64. While the issue was resolved for the interim, the Senate and MASSPIRG agreed to investigate the funding conflict next year to come up with an acceptable answer.

Although the pool for faculty salaries was increased by nine percent, the Tufts chapter American Association of University Professors argued that the average salary level for professors was not rising sufficiently to keep in line with the Consumer Price Index or with universities they consider to be comparable to Tufts. Academic Vice President Robert Rotberg, however, said that he considered the increase to be an accomplishment, and also said that tuition and fee increases were a direct result of the increase in faculty salaries.

Saturday, January 28 marked the beginning of the end for an era in Jumbo women's basketball. Co-captain Teresa Allen, the only senior on this year's team, sunk a 10-foot jumper from the left side with nine minutes in the opening period against Southeastern Massachusetts University. That jumper broke Paula Moss' record of 1,018 career points. Allen ended her career with 1,261 points, and helped the Jumbos to an inconsistent 13-11 record and a Massachusetts Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (MAIAW) tournament championship.

Director of the Chinese Program Li-li Ch'en clarified and reiterated her reasoning for not reinstating Senior Lecturer Yih-Jian Tai to the program. Tai's resignation last semester stemmed from a debate over which version of Chinese script should be taught at Tufts. Ch'en advocates teaching just the simplified version of Chinese, while Tai proposed teaching both the traditional and simplified versions. An ad hoc student committee circulated a petition calling for the reinstatement of Tai, and reportedly gathered about 1,500 student signatures.

EW: SPRING 1989

The Board of Trustees voted to divest its financial holdings in companies conducting business in South Africa on February 25, citing the fact that the previous policy of "selective divestment" had not brought about the "desired social change" in South Africa's apartheid system. The vote brought a successful end to a pro-divestment campaign at Tufts dating from 1977. The above picture shows the student takeover of Ballou Hall in 1985 to protest the University's investment position. At the Trustee meeting, President Jean Mayer announced a plan to hold a conference of presidents of open South African universities and educational leaders in September at the Tufts European Center in Talloires.

The faculty of Arts and Sciences debated the 19 recommendations of the Ad Hoc Committee on Institutional Policy, which was charged with investigating the ways which Tufts can combat its institutionalized forms of racism, sexism, and homophobia. Thirteen of the recommendations have come up for votes, with eleven being approved and two defeated. The recommendations broached a broad range of topics, including urging the administration to fund a coordinator for the Tufts Lesbian, Gay, and Bisexual Community, calling for departmental meetings to deal with training for sensitivity to "at-risk groups," and urging the Administration to set up a university-wide fund to fund speakers from at-risk groups. Committee chair Marilyn Glater, chair of the Political Science Department, is pictured speaking at a faculty meeting.

The Committee on Student Life voted April 24 to remove the probation level II punishment of the student who sold a T-shirt deemed offensive by the Administration. The student originally received probation level II and 50 hours of community service for selling a T-shirt which listed 15 reasons "Why Beer is Better Than Women at Tufts." The CSL decided March 13 to reconsider the punishment after Associate Dean of Students Bruce Reitman explained that the decision was erroneously based on the argument that the student was selling the shirts for profit and was therefore not exercising his right to free speech.

After 17 years at Tufts, Dean of Undergraduate Studies David Maxwell announced that he had accepted the presidency of Whitman College in Walla Walla, Washington. Other Tufts administrators were also candidates for positions at other universities. Provost Sol Gittleman withdrew his application for the presidency of Bates College after being one of the two final candidates. Also, Executive Vice President Steven Manos declined the position of vice president of finance at the University of Minnesota.

Tufts has resumed court action against Medford and Somerville, and Tufts administrators have been meeting with a group of Somerville residents, including Jim Monagle and Paul Sodano, pictured above, in an effort to be exempted from local zoning ordinances. The University seeks approval to begin three building projects: a dormitory, the Aidekman Arts Center and the Olin Center for Language and Culture Studies.

Geotechnical Engineers

Environmental Engineers

Make An Investment In The Future.

Yours And The Environment.

A lot of engineering firms have an environmental engineering department. But at GZA, environmental engineering is our specialty — and everybody knows it. When government or private industry needs a firm to handle a large and difficult project, they turn to us. We have over two decades of experience in all phases of environmental and geotechnical engineering—from the design and construction of buildings, dams, tunnels and airports to wastewater disposal, environmental permitting, and hazardous waste investigation and management. We pride ourselves on our progressive, informal office atmosphere, our participatory management style, and our steadfast commitment to public health and environmental integrity. And if you always thought you had to pay a price for idealism, you were wrong. Because our considerable resources enable us to offer our people a compensation package that is one of the best in the industry.

If you're looking for a career with an engineering firm that is both financially successful and environmentally conscious, GZA is the place to be.

We have entry-level openings (B.S./M.S.) in geotechnical and environmental engineering.

FLING

Lawn. Neville was friendly but quiet, and seemed more interested in finding a date than watching Robert Cray.

McCallum called Tufts "a nice place to play."

Robert Cray found a huge following at Tufts and his performance left no fan unsatisfied. The Robert Cray Band with the Memphis Horns is a no-frills act with pure taste. Their proficiency for playing the blues is clear as Cray's guitar, especially, seems to take on a life of its own.

Cray doesn't play a lot of notes, but his feel for the music is a gift. Each band member also played masterfully; bassist Richard Cousins was breathtaking to watch, as he grooved with seemingly no effort.

The band was captivating as bodies migrated toward the stage during the show. Cray charmed the crowd with his spoken remarks ("We are Night Train Clemens and the Turnovers") and his guitar prowess -- his "Smoking Gun." By the end of the show there was a sea of waving arms in front of the stage, and Cray started mild riots by tossing guitar picks into the crowd.

When the band left the stage, wild applause demanded an encore, and Cray delivered with "Phone Booth" and "Nothing But A Woman." The Cray Band put on a commanding performance, even driving Tufts students into the treetops for a better view. Spring Fling '89 was quite a success; and the three bands admirably rose to the challenge of giving everyone a much-needed escape.

the sideline. This gave Harvard's pursuing pack the opportunity to finally catch Pollock, but the Crimson were just two hops too late. Pollock came down in the try-zone and Born kicked the conversion. The rout had begun.

The next score came late in the first half. Chasing down one of his own kicks, Pollock was once again in the right place at the right time. The ball landed in the Harvard try-zone and bounced straight upward. The crowd held its breath as Pollock and two Harvard players jumped for the ball.

Everything suddenly turned to slow-motion as the ball skittered out of Harvard's hands and was snagged by Pollock. Pollock stuck out his tongue like Michael Jordan and came down with the rebound. The Tufts roadies who made the drive over to Harvard erupted into cheers as the lead increased to ten.

At the beginning of the first half, Tufts was worried that it might slack off. This fear was overcome only minutes later. On the kick-off, Tufts drove within feet of the Harvard try-zone. Both sides threw all fifteen of their men into the maul in the hope of making a deciding drive. Both teams groaned and grunted as the pile shifted back and forth. Minutes passed. The maul came to a complete stop. Questions were soon raised. Did someone have the ball? Was it on the ground? Was someone hiding it under his shirt? The Harvard players began standing up in a confused stupor. Imperceptibly, flanker Jared Goldberg poked his head out from the middle of the pile. He peeked around and an impish grin grew on his face. Easing himself from the pile, Goldberg stood up and the ball magically appeared on his hip. Harvard stood in disbelief as if lobotomized.

Goldberg calmly sauntered into the try-zone casually placed the ball down for the score. He yawned, stretched and then hit a few high-fives as he strode back to midfield. Born added the two extra points and Harvard's fate was sealed. When the final whistle blew, the Jumbo ruggers let loose a triumphant roar which reverberated off the Prudential Center and shook the very foundations of the law school. The Harvard squad was only a hollow shell of what they pretended to be. They were demoralized, defeated and virtually dead. Exhausted scowls replaced their cocky smiles. They had suffered a severe whipping and their bodies confirmed it.

However, many of the Tufts ruggers still expressed rage and hatred after the game. Many felt Tufts had not gone far enough. Second row John Gordie fumed, "For Harvard, no slaughter is too great, no humiliation too demeaning... This is only a taste of what they deserve."

Match Secretary Dave Reich explained that he was still upset about Harvard's attitude. He stated, "When scheduling this match, Harvard acted as if it was doing us a favor by playing. Breaking that guy's ribs was a sheer delight."

While the fall season is still months away, the Jumbo ruggers are already anticipating the rematch. President Dan "Opus" Wentworth has outlined a rigorous training program to keep everyone in top shape. Furthermore, he has arranged for the first four sides to return early for preseason training. Next year promises to be the best ever.

I assume he was a he, said that they weren't for us to collect. How would we like it if some one scooped us up and put us in their pocket? Not much, I responded. So we emptied our pockets and ran across the beach to the ferry for home. It was already dark."

"The captain of the ferry gave us a salute as we walked on board, very professional, and smiled. I gave him a dollar and he gave me a piece of ribbon, pink like Lucy's. She fixed it in my hair.

"When we got home it seemed like no time had passed. My mother was standing in the kitchen with a tray of krispies and she gave me a big hug, a kiss, and smiled at me like she never had done before.

"That's it. The end."

We stayed on the fire escape a little while longer and then went inside.

Environmental Careers Night

Tuesday, May 2, 1989 6:30-9:00 p.m.

Mayer Campus Center

Large Conference Room (bottom floor)

The Department of Civil Engineering and the Center for Environmental Management present the first annual Environmental Careers Night. This event will be an informal gathering of students and representatives from both the public and private sectors, where students will have an opportunity to gather information about various environmental 'fields'. Students interested in careers in these areas are encouraged to attend and to bring their questions along with their resumes to this forum. A list of representative companies is available from the Department of Civil Engineering.

looking for the rebound, the ball bounced in front of the goal line and then slowly rolled back into the goal. This score was the start of the end. Two more Middlebury goals left the Jumbos down 7-4 at halftime.

There was still hope for the Jumbos as they started the second half. Three goals is not an insurmountable margin, as both Tufts and their opponents have proved this year. Unfortunately, a ten-point margin is a little too much to overcome, and that's what the final score proved to be.

Tufts started out the third quarter with a penalty that had already been assessed against them, making it an even tougher hole to dig out of. Two more goals by Middlebury's Willet plus two other goals in the third period gave Middlebury a 11-4 lead after three quarters.

Three more goals in the fourth gave the Panthers another blow-out win against Tufts, and ruined Ritter's debut against Middlebury.

This was a game that Tufts would definitely like to play over again if they had the chance. After the ball started rolling in the third quarter, it looked like everyone on the Jumbo squad just decided to quit playing hard. The team, as a whole, simply did not play well, and it wasn't a problem that can be attributed to any one item. Poor defense led to bad offense, and missed opportunities led to frustrated defense. Bright spots in an otherwise cloudy day were Garfinkel, who continued his scoring spree with two goals and one assist, Redden, who scored one goal and one assist, and Pepper, who added a goal.

The Jumbos' last game of the year is this afternoon against Bates at Ellis Oval. With a win, the Jumbos will end the season at 5-6, and a loss would drop them to 4-7. A bright spot for next year is the fact that the Jumbos will have 24 returning players (out of 31 on this year's squad), many of whom are starters, which will give the Jumbos much experience for the start of next season.

Unfortunately, stars like Pepper, Ken Dash, Steve Valenti, Jim Desisto, Scott Moynihan, and captains Jon Koffler and Redden, will be graduating and Tufts will be without them next year. Hopefully, the Jumbos can send these seniors out on a winning note, and carry it over to next season.

Hamilton College 6-1, 6-2 and Bates 6-4, 6-2. They might have advanced further had Marsella not reinjured his right shoulder, rendering his serve ineffective.

The second-seeded doubles team of Crowley and Hertzner reached the finals against Amherst. However, the tired team lost in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3. Said Watson, "They were so tired [from their singles matches], that by the time they reached the doubles, they were flat."

Tufts' third doubles team of Nevils and Mike Wiadro played superb tennis en route to reaching the finals. In the finals, however, Wiadro and the injured Nevils could not outlast their Conn. College opponents, losing 6-4 in the third set.

Although Tufts was unable to win any of the brackets outright, they had racked up a slew of points in the earlier rounds, a tribute to the team's depth. Watson explained, "it sounds cliched, but this was a team effort. We did so well on Saturday that we created a wonderful cushion [as a lead for Sunday]. The team played superb tennis."

Stated Ober, "we peaked really well and stayed within ourselves for the three days. It's a tribute to the team to come back so strong after such a weak start this season."

as Reagan, Bush, and their economic policies. Many in the audience were intrigued by the unabashed and successful socialist who has become prominent in Vermont politics and who, as a result, has been given considerable media attention.

Sanders began his speech by noting that he "had spoken in many places before, but never in a place that was home of Jumbo the elephant -- a proud moment." He first lamented over the lack of community involvement in politics at every level -- local, state, and national.

"The most important issue that we have to deal with," he explained, "is people's disbelief in the political system. They're giving up believing that they can have an impact on the political process." Then, Sanders asked, "Is the two-party system representing the needs of ordinary Americans? We need to break away from the two-party system," Sanders declared. "I think it's extraordinarily important for the future of our country to do that." Currently, "[the Democrats and the Republicans] don't even have the guts to discuss the real problems. For instance, we are one of only two modern industrialized countries which does not have a national health care system. South Africa is the other. Should we be making money from people's illnesses? I think not."

Sanders then levelled an attack against the national media, especially television. He contended that average Americans do not see their own lives reflected in the television they watch. Consequently, people may feel hopeless and therefore, alienated from what they perceive to be an apathetic government. "What does the media not tell the U.S. people about what is happening in their lives?" he asked rhetorically. "Television is an extraordinary technology, which has the power to educate, inform and entertain, but which is being used to pollute the minds of many, many people. Face it: if you're concerned about politics, you've got to deal with television."

Sanders also condemned this system which allows advertisers to package and market political candidates as products using public funds. "This year they do Coca-Cola, next year they do George Bush," he remarked.

Despite the lack of hope that Sanders sees in the American electorate, as evidenced by the fact that "the U.S. has the lowest voter turnout of any industrialized nation in the world," he nevertheless expressed hope that through people such as himself, who continue to challenge the status quo, change can come about, and the American people will have more opportunities to "create, invent, or choose their own futures."

fies its program to attract the sympathy of these nations. This diplomatic ploy makes it difficult to establish the ANC's political doctrine when many different beliefs conflict. The vagueness in its doctrine reflects the complex nature of South African politics.

The United Democratic Front was established in 1983 in reaction to the constitutional reforms that occurred that year. State President P.W. Botha was forming a Tri-Cameral Parliament which gave separate representation to Indians, Asians and Coloreds (people of mixed racial descent). The black majority was alleged to have political representations in the bantustans or homelands. The Tri-Cameral Parliament was intended to counter international accusations that non-whites in South Africa were being excluded from the governmental processes. In reality, this system of racial separation was a continuance of white dominance.

In response to these constitutional reforms, many organizations banded together to oppose the referendum that was being held. These organizations formed the UDF, and were later joined by hundreds of organizations, and thousands of individuals. Unfortunately, the organization was largely incapacitated last year, when security forces arrested most of the leadership.

Both organizations are very popular with the youth of South Africa. Indeed, the ANC has much difficulty convincing its recruits to join sections of the organization other than the military wing. The UDF, strongest in the universities, has a strong intellectual base.

The ANC, partially because of its seniority, is the parent to many organizations. This does not mean that it has control of these movements, nor do the movements fully support each other in their views. In the case of the UDF, the two organizations work together to some extent in the struggle. A better relationship between the police and the organization is prevented because of the diversity of positions of the outlawed organization.

The South African government claims that the UDF is an extension of the ANC, and that it is led by the ANC. This is not the case, according to Lodge, who maintained that both have a distinguished base of support and different methods of striving for similar goals.

an opportunity to buck the system and stand up for our rights. We pay the bills, let's speak up to where the money goes and what the University lists as priorities. Our money gives the Administration the right to exist, so why can't they recognize and respect our concerns and priorities? They have in the past, they can again in the future.

Students should get out of the Gott Room. Grades are only a passing priority and they don't play a major role in obtaining a job. Student should attend some campus activities, voice their opinions on campus, and get involved in the decision-making processes on campus. The Administration is being permitted to operate on a dangerous precedent of omnipotent decision-making without consulting the students. Has apathy struck so deep that this will become modus-operandi? Every day the Administration takes bolder and bolder steps to curb student's freedoms.

The Administration continually has assessed stricter social policy standards on us, alcohol, and freedom of expression-related, with no retribution from the students. Lately, the Greeks have been lambasted by the Administration with no response but acquiescence by the students. Rarely has the Administration taken the time to cooperate and offer assistance to the Greeks; we should do this. Their only response is the threat of Greek-expulsion, and the Administration will continue to restrict us if no opposition is offered. Apathy is destroying student life on campus, we need to wake up before it is too late.

I can't say it enough: Student apathy is destroying our freedoms on campus. Will our rights survive? We need to take a step back and re-evaluate ourselves. When only 30 percent of the students vote in elections we need to ask the question. Are we going to be part of the apathetic American public where only 50 percent of the population votes, or are we the new generation of active intellectuals who demand accountability?

charged with the responsibility of clarifying the guidelines between freedom of expression and freedom from harassment. This is a responsibility that has been delegated to the Supreme Court over anti-draft statements in the 60s, and to governmental commissions over the pornography controversy. It is an issue that has never been truly solved.

The Administration has its own, personal conflicts of interest here as well. It wants to encourage diversity by protecting minorities, but it also must ensure that the free discourse essential to learning is allowed on campus. These policy matters must be careful of how they go about "protecting minorities." The dynamics of people at the top of a hierarchy protecting people at the bottom can be very complicated. Protecting without restricting or controlling is difficult.

The last group of people who are at risk here are the students who comprise the top of that hierarchy. They are primarily the white, heterosexual, upper-middle class males, but I will include some women here too. All of the women who can sit out there and say "I am not oppressed, I have never been oppressed, and I never will be oppressed" have the same things at stake. These people are having their societal power contested and privileges is not an easy thing to give up. It means re-evaluating beliefs, attitudes, and behaviors and altering norms of what is and is not acceptable. It means thinking independently rather than letting someone else think for you and individualizing rather than generalizing. It also means learning to notice when someone is being discriminated against, maybe even by you, and speak up about it. Mostly, it means learning to accept differences rather than hate them. Of course, these people are screaming "Free Speech!" It's much easier to continue thinking and behaving as you always have than trying to change.

I'm afraid that I don't have a simple policy answer that will solve the complexities inherent in this issue. We need to change the atmosphere on this campus so that openly hating a person or group of people because of their race, class, gender, sexual preference or ethnicity is not acceptable. Doing this by developing a set policy is not going to be easy. I can only implore students and administrators to ask a lot of questions and think through every angle of the problem before taking a stand.

was at least a half hour wait. At this time a young woman entered the van at Hill Hall and asked to go to Winchester Place. She had not called for a ride, so it was left to the driver's discretion whether to give the woman a ride at that time or to ask her to call and wait for a ride. The driver, David Ben-Ur, agreed to give her a ride but advised her that it would be some time before he would be in her area.

Obviously, a person who did not call for a ride should not expect to be placed ahead of those people who did call and had to wait for the half hour or so before they could be picked up. When David Ben-Ur made this pick up, he could not have known that he would be unable to drop her off for 40 minutes, for if he knew that he would have told her at first.

The driver's duty is to handle the calls as quickly and efficiently as possible, and, of course, as safely as possible.

Random people walking up to the driver and asking for rides takes away from the efficiency and therefore causes delays. We will not deny such a ride if a person's safety is in jeopardy, that is basically our only set policy on the matter. In this case, Ben-Ur was following Shuttle guidelines.

Over the past year, we have tried to make the Safety Shuttle into a better service. We have added a third van for this semester, which has helped immensely.

However, there are still delays, and there always will be. The drivers and dispatchers always try to do their best. Cooperation on both sides is necessary or the Shuttle will not work efficiently. Everyone who works for the Shuttle is a student. This is a University job just like any other and we just try to work together to serve the student body.

To the young woman who had to wait, we send our apologies. The long wait was unfortunate, but unavoidable. Had she called for a ride, waited a half hour to be picked up, and then ridden around for 40 minutes, then there would be reason for complaint. But since she hadn't call, the fact remains that she did not follow Shuttle guidelines.

The dumb computer disk which all your personals were on got drunk Saturday, and everything got really screwed up. We got as many of them back as we could, but some people may still be missing some. Sorry. We did the best we could. Love, Steve and Norton

ATTENTION ALL DAILY FOLKS (again)

The Ex College is offering a new course in the fall: "Keeping Your Classifieds Editor Happy: How To Type In Personals" Please think about enrolling in this enlightening seminar taught by yours truly, Laura Walker. Just kidding, you Dailyites, you; it's my job and I wouldn't be here if I didn't love it. Well, maybe I don't love it, but I like it... I guess. In any case I hope you all enjoyed putting in your ten free personals because it was A CHORE to edit and place them. Actually you have Steve Clay to thank that they're here at all (See above). Well, it's all over now so HAVE A FANTASTIC SUMMER! and I'll see you here next year. You're generally great people. And just in case you were wondering, yes this is my 11th personal and much longer than 35 words, but I'm a Classifieds Editor, so there!

Michelle (Melissa) take your pick

You have been a very special friend, it will great being down the hill from you next year. Soon you will be a full fledged Alpha Phi sister - congrats! Remember - good things come to those who wait, and I know good things are in your future. Have a great summer and good luck on finals. Love Stephen

Held!

First Welch, then Bellaire and now Tufts. Last year at this time I was watching you fall down a case of stairs. Do me a favor - be careful this time around. Muchas gracias para ayuda este ano en espanol. Partying with you has been an experience - where you Weiners get your energy nobody knows. And just because you going to be high above the quad next year way, way up in the sky, doesn't mean I won't come visit. Did I ever tell you that you are my favorite Rugby player - good luck with that - any new bruises? Good luck with finals and we will have an awesome time this summer partying in Houston. Love Stephen

Kate and Laura

My favorite neighbors! You both have been so great, with your sophomore advice, the late night snacks, the addictive solitaire and risk, Basia, the Boston Marathon, the Jills, Kiriwive, late night snacks, peeping toms, housing issues, late night snacks (including Matzah), appreciation of late night music during quiet hours, and by the way, did I mention the late night snacks? Laura-I promise I'll visit you next year in the E House, and Kate-I know I will have a place to go to come visit you next year so don't worry. Good luck with finals and have a great summer. Love, Stephen

Matt

It has been an interesting year Doctor (I mean Mr.) Ostrower. I know you will be in Lewis plenty next year up in the penthouse - stop by and party. Keep in touch next year. Have a great summer and good luck on finals. Stephen

Robyn and Shelly

You both will be up there in Carmichael too. Don't worry, it's good for your legs. Now you know what I had to put up with this year. Both of you fit in with the rest of the floor perfectly - wild and crazy - no wonder they stuck you up there in Carmichael, your room is going to be wild and crazy, to say the least. Have a great summer and good luck on finals! Love Stephen

Melissa S.

So how long has it been - 18 years. Gosh, I remember those awesome days we when we would have those stroller races in New York. What about Seabrook N.C. and Vodka, Vodka, Tequila, Gin? I could go on forever, the days at stone mountain, the belly dancer at your dad's party, the broken light above the ping pong table, the lemonade stand in front of your house, the fishbone, no not the group, the actual fishbone in my mom's foot, the ski trip, the Disney World days, the van kids, and last but not least, the great volunteer reception at the Somerville Community building! I hope you come visit me in New York this summer. Your house looks fantastic, expect to see me next year. Thanks for all the advice, and it great that Jennifer, you and I are all here in Boston, keep your fingers crossed for Doug, then all we have to do is go to graduate school here so that Amy can come up to complete the group. Good Luck on finals. Love Stephen

Elishava

Hi!!!!!!!!!!!!!! Stephen - with a 'ph'

Nadine

See you in Washington, that is, of course, I don't bump into you in Costa Rica. Thanks for the advice and for being such a great RA. Come visit me in New York. Happy Birthday and congrats for graduation. Love Stephen

Daily Staff (especially Features)

Looking forward to a great semester in the fall and those exciting trips to the IHOP (sometimes just getting there is the hardest part - just a joke!) Have a great summer everyone! Stephen Newman

Miller third floor west

Although almost all of you will be in co-ops next year, I'll still love you-even all the way from Miller (again!). By the way, Sharen and Rachel, you're in this too, considering how you live in Miller. Take care, everyone!! Love you, Sandra

Daily staff

Dave, I'll miss you. Thanks, everyone, for letting me be so privileged as to work with all of you. Sandra

To the Business (busy) Dept.

You guys are the best (Lar, Jav, Dave, Paul, Pete, Melissa, Jane, Lisa, Mike)!!! I have had a ball working with you guys and look forward to next year!!!! Luv, Dave G- take a shower!

Luv, Heath

Javier Macaya- Change your name!

Luv, Heath

Lar- Get a date! ("I love ya, darrrriang")

Luv, Heath

DEBORAH KAHN

You are the best roomie a person could ever have. We may have had some rough spots, but we made it through and we still are the best of friends. Only 2 more weeks!!! Hang in there, and stay that special friend you always have been. Luv, Heath

KAREN E. AND STACY P.

Get psyched for summer!!! God must have been smiling down on me when she decided to give me two wonderful roomies as yourselves for next year. I couldn't imagine anyone that I'd rather spend next year sharing my personal space with!!! Have a great summer and get psyched for next year!! Luv, Heath

To all my friends who have seen me through this year: Amy C., Lisa W., Pam A., Jamie H., Cindy Z., Jim P., Neil M., Sheila, Sean, and Diana. I LOVE YOU GUYS!!! Luv, Heath

To the Daily Editors:

Thanks for putting up with me this year and thanks for your "votes" of support for next year. See ya in Sept! Luv, Heath

Clay-

You're still here?? Leave...just go away. Seriously, you're one helluva guy and you'll do great next semester - you deserve it. I promise to be a good boy next year, but not too good. Give me a call sometime. Oh, sorry, I forgot. Why don't you just stop by then. - Larry P.S. He really did miss second base.

Lepper -

Wanna thumb wrestle? Just kidding... ha ha. Anyway, I know we both got sucked in from the same Exploration, but it's not that bad... is it? Oh well, good luck next year and let me write something for you...please?? -Larry P.S. The original is always better than the copy. Always.

Javier -

Even though you're hard to understand sometimes and your writing is as bad as Dave's, you're OK. We'll do some awesome work next year...let's kick some ass! -Larry

Heather

Hi, hon! Thanks for putting up with all my shit this year. You're really great though - we'll be great together next year. Love, Larry P.S. I'm NOT working Friday morning next year. OK, maybe I will.

Peter, Mike, Lisa, Paul, Jane, Melissa, and Meg -

You guys have been great this year and I hope you're even better next year (except for Lisa and Jane, who better have a blast Germany). Anyway, thanx for your help and here's to next year...HEY! -Larry

Production folks

Thanks for showing me the ropes this semester (or at least trying to). I promise I'll eventually figure out the whole production/layout deal...really...I do. Chris-you will be missed...a lot. -Larry

Exec board-type peoples

You guys are great and you've done one hell of a job this year. Good luck next year - we'll be bigger and better. And to Kelley - I'm gonna miss you...a lot. You've done so much for this paper, personals alone cannot express how I feel. Anyway, enough sappiness and have a great summer. -Larry

Writing types

I don't really see a lot of you guys, but I hear you're pretty good. Anyway, you've done a highly commendable job this year and good luck next year. -Larry

To my mentor Dave

What can I say? Thanks for everything. Thanks for introducing me to the wild, wacky, and wonderful world of The Daily. I'm gonna miss you next year. Really. A lot. You have done so many awesome things with this paper that I can only hope to do half as well as you have. Anyway, have a great time doing whatever you end up doing and don't forget everything you've already done. Love, Larry

To the Softball Team -

Let's kick the Observer's ass! Twice even!

Beth,

You've been a great roommate, even when the room looked like a sty and a half. Enjoy yourself in Oregon and tell Nathan hi for me. Love, Laura

David (Mark),

They cleaned us out! But more importantly: IT'S OVER. Thank God! Have a great summer. Love, Jena (Laura)

Adam,

Visit me this summer or it's the Big McNugget for you. This has certainly been one hell of a year. I have my fingers crossed for you for Wesleyan, but I can't say I'll be sad if you don't go. Love and Chicken Nugget, the other weird one

Chris,

Roomie-to-be! It's been most triumphant getting to know you this year; I hope sharing a room won't wreck it (that would be bogus). Have an excellent summer! Love, Laura

Michelle,

What to say? Thanks for the rides and the friendship. Have a great time in Texas this summer. Love, Laura P.S. I really made you place those classifieds on Wed. so you couldn't see what I wrote here!

To the guy who NEVER reads personals:

I think I've said it all already, but I just couldn't leave you out. Enjoy summer! Love, Laura the Production Staff, esp. you, MARGO:

It's been fun working with you, etc., etc. Thanks for being patient while I learned the ropes. My goal for next year: to beat Beth at Tetris. -Laura

Geoff:

Hard to believe a full year has gone by. The Redskins, not the 49ers' are the team of the decade. Canseco will win a second MVP in a row, but this year's will be in the San Quintin League. Take it easy, have a great summer, and don't tell anyone jokes on the way to IHOP -- Mike

Geoff, Randy, Dave:

Next year will have the greatest sports section in Daily history. But until then, have a great summer. See you in September, maybe I can get some Red Sox tickets. -- Mike

Ron:

The concert was great, the English classes were so-so. Watch out for low lamps. Relax, take it easy, and see you next year. -- Mike

Kelley:

You did a great job this year. Thanks for all the help. Have a nice summer, and good luck next year. -- Mike

To anyone I missed:

I meant to...No, I don't mean that, I'm just too lazy to write any more personals. Have terrific summers, see y'all in September -- Mike

Diane Bartlett,

What can I say? This semester was awesome and you were a major part of it! It's so hard for me to believe that you won't be here next year. What am I going to do? Who is going to keep me company in the library and at late night study? Who am I going to run with? What about all those dinners? I won't go on because this is depressing the hell out of me, but I hope this gives you a hint as to how much I'm going to miss you. You are truly a very special person. I hope that we will always remain the closest of friends!! I also hope you have a great summer, and I wish you the best of luck and happiness next year. Love, Waldek P.S. I hope you invite me to some of those parties next year. P.P.S. Remember: Don't stress, things always work out!

Christie Black

I can't believe this is the last personal I will ever write you. Talk about a depressing thought. I'm really sorry that I didn't send you a personal for your birthday or for Valentines Day (you know me, a little absent minded, a little lazy, and always busy). I just wanted you to know that you are still as important to me as a friend as you have ever been! Unfortunately because of great distances (whether across Europe or across campus) and other reasons, I didn't get a chance to hang out with you as much as I would have liked to this year. Hopefully this American makes up for the 1 billion Chinese that couldn't care less about you. Have a great summer. Best of luck at law school next year. Love, Waldek P.S. You better call as soon as you find out WHAT KIND your graduation present is!

To Christie, Meg, Linc, Val, Kim, Bill S., Matt S., Julie B., Kristina R., and all my other senior friends:

I'm not sure it's such a good idea that you guys are graduating. Think about this: When you graduate who's going to take your place? WE ARE! That's a pretty scary thought, isn't it. Oh Well. I hope you enjoy your last couple of weeks here and good luck with whatever you do after you leave the hill. Wal-

To all the Dailyites:

I hope you guys don't mind too much that I am including all of you in one personal. Those of you who have seen my personals in the past know I could easily fill a whole page just with my personal to you guys. Anyway, I just wanted you guys to know that I had a great time this semester working with you. Unfortunately I haven't been down at the office or participated in as many Daily activities as I would have liked to. Although I won't be an editor next year, you haven't got rid of me completely, after all, who would take the field hockey and Women's Lax photos? I'll be down to visit you at the office often (probably more often than you want -- He, he, he!), because you guys are part of the "family" (to use a term from my freshman year). Just remember: IHOP and Daily Dinners forever! Have a great summer and I'll see most of you next fall. Waldek P.S. Let's CRUSH the Observer in softball!

NEWS!!

From eight or nine Davis Sq. fires to gorillas flying over Carmichael, you guys were there, steno pad in hand, and photo occasionally showed up with camera in hand, no film though. Nice job this semester-with all my complaints about last minute fluff, I think everything looked pretty good after all. Congrats on a good semester! -Denise, (just call me Jimmy Olsen)

ARTS & FEATURES!!!!

Wow, killing 2 departments with 1 personal, how economical! I enjoyed working with all of you this past exciting year. What ever happened to ARTSPEAK or whatever that was? Elaine-never loose your accent, Ben-I'm not Foto-mat, but you'll have them some day. Colin-thanks for the really original photo assignment slips. Greta-good luck! -Hasta later, Denise

Kelley and Lauren-

Do you love me, will you love me forever, do you need me? Beth and Elaine, have you learned the words yet? I'm sure that IHOP, China Inn and other fun Daily stuff wouldn't have been as much fun without our perfect harmonies! Have a good summer and brush up on those music lessons! -Meatloaf Drower

Chris, Waldek and Mo:

Fewer water, rubber band and fixer fights (and I had you convinced it was only water) this year, but still another good one. And, we've managed to avoid throwing in and washing the towel for yet another year. Chris and Waldek-you made good harem members, but we're not satisfied. Mo-what ever happened to the bulk-rolled protection idea? We have much to do! Photo Phollies Phor Phun-Phantastic! (that has nothing to do with anything) -Phondly, Denise

Waldek, Jon, Karl (Kurt), Steve and Richard, and that Ron guy upstairs- Thanks for an incredibly phun-philled semester of photo and all that stuff. I appreciate all the hours you all put in, the assignments you shot at the last minute, no wait, second, and all your support in everything. May your flash always phunction, and may Karl one day make $1,000,000 in car returns. -Phorever yours, Denise

Personals

To seniors I should mention: Dave-thanks for limiting it to ten, I have more important things to do, like reading that um, artistic photography magazine you gave me for Christmas. Matt S.-thanks for all the humor you bring to this world. Sorry for associating your name with Dave's. Good luck always, Denise

Steve- Can I call you a senior? Can I call you? Do you have a phone? Do I care? Do you?

SPORTS AND WEEKENDER- On behalf of photo, I'd like to formally challenge you to any contest of your choice. The prize is photo gets to jump past you in the box. Thanks for a super semester, super 'cause I don't shoot sports, and never shot for the weekender. What a great relationship. Enjoy life, the summer, everything! Winkie-get a real nick-name, how about... nah, forget it. Live long and prosper-Denise

To an amazing Photo staff this semester- Ron, Steve, Brian, Billy, Becca, Marjory, John, Nan, Christie, Adam, Kristina, Fran, Howie, and anyone else who shot for us that I was brainless enough to forget: Thanks for being a part of our happy photo phamily. Come back next year, ya hear? Brian, are you sure we couldn't give you just one roll? -Denise

To the Tufts Daily- Please stop calling me Danielle. Danielle

Whoa! Does this office smell funny, or what? Do we live and work in a barn or what? Oink, Moo, Baa, or what?

Markus You should have been an engineer. You're King of gutter systems & other plumbing-ness. Have fun production managing (unless your leisure arts classes go so late into the afternoon that you can't get to the Daily on time). It's been a fun semester. --JPC

Attention All Dailyites Rumor has it that Steve Clay was seen inside a room filled with books in a big building on Boylston Street during spring break, contemplating studying. But that's only a rumor, and you didn't hear it from me because I wasn't doing work during break either. --JPC

Beth I hope you've had a stress-free semester. You're really not insane, or else we would have taken the knives away many moons ago. Actually, you were great this semester! May the future be just as successful, production-wise. --JPC

Dave I'll miss your annoying little 8:30a.m. Anderson Hall comments. But just remember that without engineers there wouldn't be spray paint. So use some on your car! Good luck in reality. --JPC

Richard Mode Next time we IHOP, I want shotgun. Then I'll have a better view to watch for dead albinos on the road! --JPC

Kelley, Lauren, Et. al. You cannot sing! Whether at China Inn or on the streets of Cambridge, you could break windows. ...A friend

Reversi Tetris and I love you. Your friend for life, Rupert

F-14 "He's a pinball wizard, There has to be a twist. A pinball wizard, S'got such a supple wrist." ...You really should major in pinball... better than that other stuff you're always reading! Good luck on finals. --Your roommate P.S. You owe me $25

Hill Here's the personal you've been wanting for so long: "Hey, Tufts! Do you know about Bertucci's... the quiet table near the bocce... down the street from MIT... and a certain park? --You know who

Chris&Kelley Thank for everything. Without you, I probably wouldn't be here anymore. I promise I'll never drink again (or at least I'll never get drunk!), Markus.

Bonecrusher aka Beth You're stuck with me for an entire semester! I get dizzy that far up in the box! I'll clean your waxer always. Your slave, Markus.

Slash-n-Flash Thank for all your help this semester. A few IHOPs under your respective belts, and you'll see why we do all this for free. I apologize for being a little weird and promise not to x-dress too much. Have a great summer, Turk.

Jeff and Rupert Thank you (both) for respecting me for the leisure arts person I am. Hope I didn't shake your faith in engineering too much. But I do build a mean gutter! Later, Mary-ah, Markus.

Dave Chicken grease? With such a drastic step up from peanut butter, I would have wrecked your room too! Thank for a certain ride home... Markus.

Mo We should go to elections more often... Markus.

Steve's Cheesy Highness I wish you all the pure wholesome goodness and not-pudding you can shake a whiffle-ball bat at. Have a great summer, and don't forget -- credits are a-otay! Thank also for you advice on system-by-squeaking. What an authority! Markus Turk Umlaut Mueller.

Chris "Lame Duck" Ball Have a b... ah, good time in D.C. I can't wait to design your columnheader. It's a heavy-handed personal, but I'm an oppressed illegal alien anyway. Power corrupts! Markus.

LepLoc Let's hear it for the Margalit-possé! We still have a not-pudding date- I'll wear pants, I promise. Relax a little, because I sense some anxiety there... Rage on, dude, Markus.

Lauren For all the shit I take? DIE. A lot. Please? Don't let the power go to your head, Markus.

Yo! Editorial Chris and Bob. Editorial guys. Why I'm starting here, I don't know. Anyway, to Chris, I wish... well, I'm not sure what I wish to someone who's giving up all the beauty and great times of the Medford/Somerville locale (this is a joke, Chris, I know it's not funny -- like all my jokes -- but laugh anyway because... it would be doing me a favor). For Bob, I wish (this is beginning to sound like a Christmas list, isn't it?)... I wish you don't yell too much next year when we come in at... say 11 p.m. No, it won't happen, really... "Winkie" (the sports dude) Speaking of Bob, that reminds me of...

The Metcalf Folks Dave and Colin (121E)... I'm telling you, for once and for all -- I'M NOT STEVE CLAY! So there. By the way, can I borrow your phone -- I haven't paid my bill yet, so they cut off my phone... Karl (316E)... Just give me a photo -- any photo -- just make it of a sport -- any sport... Rakesh (004E)... You'll have to send me your NHL preview from "exile" next year. Good luck to the Penguins... Nicole (106W)... If I really am Clay, let's do lunch some time... Ron (306W)... Baby, you're filler-famous... Matt (036W)... You've been a great inspiration to an impressionable freshman -- whether that's good or bad, I can't tell. Good luck in the scarily real world, and drop us (or me) a line sometime. "Winkster"

Production (Aaaaaa!) Markus... Dude, we've got rhythm -- well, sort of. Let's us take a ride on the Night Train, drive out in our Thunderbird, and find us some Fish-bone... Beth... Well, it's been an interesting semester, to say the very least. I'm sorry about your "beloved" -- I'll try and help out any way I can. Anyway, the Mets suck, I should have picked them in fifth, and I HATE RON DARLING! (And I blame you 'cause he's sucking)... Slash... I want your knife! "Winksterville"

News folk Go Home! Deadlines don't matter... Scott... Find a house... Dave... Aren't you glad they finally divested?... Anna... Look out -- It's stupid joke time! "Winks"

Mo n' Denise Are you still taking points? If so, I'd like to stop by sometime before I leave... Mo -- one day, (like tomorrow), I finally will show up do partake of green leafy substances... Evie (or are you Mo?) -- you're welcome to stay at West, though the floor might ve a bit cold... "W"

Arts -- my second home It's too bad all (or almost all) you idiots are leaving... I already talked about Colin and Rakesh, but Ben... Whatever you do and wherever you go, just remember to recite "American Pie" at least once a month, preferably at editor's meetings... Arts/Elaine -- let's do some dinner theater... Jill... This is your last warning: The Daily is sucking you in! Oh well, welcome to the club. G.W."W".L.

Kelley and Chris I just want to thank you for all your help... You two will be missed (well, actually, I won't miss walking out in the hall and seeing... yeah, well, ya' know what I mean...) "W". Lepper

"Men Are More Fun" Lauren, Lauren, Lauren... Now, what kind of talk is that? I wonder, who will do the box planning next year? Good luck surviving in the big-time... Come on down and visit us peons sometime. "Wink" (Not like Martindale)

Sports Guys Dave... "Dude"... It's been fun, it's been hellish, it's been both at once... Thanks for the vote of support in Time Out... Mike... It's going to be a great time before commencement... Really!... Give up on those Baltimore/Washington D.C. teams... That Lepper Dude

Daniel (c/o AEPI) Despite our sometimes differences, I wouldn't trade this semester in for anything. I'd like to think we each learned from each other, although I suspect I learned a lot more than I gave. Give me a call if you need help with whatever you're doing next year... And send me a postcard from your "job" in Yankee Stadium. The "Winkie" God

To Everyone who's Anyone I.e., to those folks I didn't mention -- I catch you next semester... Bill -- we simply must spend some more "quality" time together next semester... If I survive the Suicide Commandos concert, that is... Larry -- To think, Clay and Maz sucked both of us in from their Exploration... P.S. The Sox finish in fourth... Waldek... Get a normal flash, you moron! (Just kidding)... Greta... Isn't it great to delegate things to Assistants? "Winkie"

The End Which brings us to Stephen (look, a "ph") B. Clay (I always forget what the "B" is for). Um, hey, what can I say... Sports Journalism Exploration to women's soccer to women's hoop to Sports Editor. It's been one hell of a semester. So here's a toast to the first singles in West, to Wiffle Ball on the Quad, and a note -- for everything from peer advising to a place to sleep (when I need it) to some great times down in Miller -- Thanks... Who loves ya, baby? Geoff

Ron, You seem a little edgy. -Colin

Dave, You seem a little edgy. -Colin P.S. You're a nightmare to live with.

Bob, You seem a little edgy. -Colin

Fried: What about that Heather girl? What-d you think about that? Well. Chnhuhh. Wh-Wh-Wh-at?

Aashah, Alamp, Phata, ALPHA, PHI!

AP EDITOR VIOLATES LAW MEDFORD (AP): Ron Graber, AP editor of the Tufts Daily was arrested today for violating the Associated Press running date edicts of 1964 and 1987. Graber, who claims it wasn't his fault, also admits to "not being aware of too many things." Close friends describe Mr. Graber as having been good at Risk, an expert at sports trivia, but otherwise a bit daft. Graber goes on trial next week.

Kelley: There are zebras hanging from your ears. Why? Just Curious- Colin

Marcus. Yeah.

Gretchen: I think that there are too many people watching me while I am typing this personal to say anything honest or smutty, much as I'd like to. Let me confine my message to what is permitted in the constrained and claustrophobic atmosphere of the Daily office. I like you. -Love, Colin P.S: I feel a little edgy.

C-C-C-Colin- Why don't you write some real personals. Yes I am edgy. -K-K-K-Karl

Prof. Grinberg- I am interested in taking your cooking 101 class on the use of mayonaise as the super-ingredient. -K

Dave, I love you. Even though your hair will never be longer than mine. -K

Bob, I love you too. Maybe even more than I love Dave. No, I guess I love Dave more. I just don't see you enough. Let's do lunch. -K

Ron, No, I could never love you. Sorry. -K

To the Girlfriend I Haven't found yet: Where are you??? I'm getting impatient. -HNG

ARAM... I am getting psyched for a week or two of domestic life. Hope that it extends into the summer at the CC. Even if it doesn't, thought I'd take the time to tell you that this has been the most awesome semester. A personal cannot explain how I feel, but I guess you have a good idea of that, already. You're everything I ever wanted and more. How about a little more experimentation in the next few weeks. Here's to spontaneity, frisbees, beaches, dairy products, one terrible dinner, Chinatown, the North End, and Sutter Home. I hope that some day all of our desires come true. I love you, Benjamin Steve, Bob, and Laur- Good luck next year with autonomy and keeping the Daily fun. Hope that you can keep the paper the awesome news source that it has become.

Colin- We didn't do so bad, now did we? Have a good time abroad next year, Kafka

Elaine and Jill- Good luck with Arts. I am sure that the two of you can make it better than it has ever been before. Just remember that, like the army, the Daily is a way of life--Yours in the Arts Junta, Ben

Colin Woodard, Elaine Rose, Rakesh Surampudi, Clint Murphy, Jill Grinberg, Bob Goodman, Greta Doumanian, Caroline Chiu, Deb Bluth, Jamie Bluth, Jill Grinberg, Leah Glaser, Quinn Elliot, Kate Thunnissen, Dave Saltzman, Cindy Nacson, Leyla Medina, Eshier Ferzoco, Meredith Easton, Mark McLaughlin, Andrew Christensen, Aaron Zarrow, Billy Jacobson, Laurie Jakobsen, Daniel Kwiat, Dave Gold, Cherie Showalter, Pete Ratzan, Neil Malik, Dave Spielman, Kenya Diide, Julie Beglin, Digger, Adam Sol, Sarah Houle, Scott Darnell, Steve Clay, Nicole Pierce, Joelle Biele, Karen Vitale, Adam Conn, Geoff Lepper, and of course, Ric Schellhorn-- Thanks for writing arts. You have been the best group of writers ever. Thanks for saving me so many times when I am in a jam, Ben

Geoff You are the most active sports editor, we've ever had--First it was computer baseball and now boxing. Good luck next year-- Ben

Steve-- Thanks for the convo. Best o' luck with the team, or should I say "Fraternity" (NOT). Down with the Sox, Up with Twinkies. Have a good summer, Ben 460's-- You guys have been the best roommates anyone could hope for. Thanks for being so cool. I love you all--Ben

Mara, Julia, and Jose-- Get psyched for senior week. I'm cooking breakfast one morning. Ben

Mei- We didn't do so bad, did we? Good luck at the house next year. See you when I get back from England, Ben

Ro-- You're Awesome, Ben

MARK CARTER-- I am glad to see that everything is finally working out for you. Too bad that it wasn't someone from Tufts. I guess we knew it wouldn't be. You are a good friend. Let's not lose touch. Bleh, Ben

Kelley!! Hi, Mom! You are one of the main reasons I'm so glad I joined the Daily (yes, we all know the other one). Thanks for IHOP, advice, and being there to share pointed looks with (did that make sense? Well, you didn't expect it to anyway!) When do I get to drive your car? (I love you a lot--Jane's Addiction forever. Cindy

Ben & Colin, Wow, the Arts men. I always knew arts babes would take over our illustrious department. Have an amazing time abroad and Colin, I know you'll be starting the first Soviet fraternity very soon. You guys are fantastic--take care, OK? Love, Arts Elaine (say it in a high-pitched voice)

Scott & Lauren & Anna & Dave: Don't you love being addressed by department instead of as individuals? Oh well. Scott: I adore you but it's just not the same without Fred. Lauren: Congrats on exec, are you too mature now to sing Meatloaf? Anna: He is really cute, isn't he? Keep singing! Dave: Chinatown and Edie was fun. Don't forget how to slamdance this summer. Love yall, Elaine

Steve & Bob & Chris B.: Steve, congrats on editor. We never got ice cream, though! Bob: My first Daily friend! You are fantastic and I'm so incredibly glad you'll be around next year! Chris B: Yes, it's hot cocoa with whipped topping. Your argyle socks are extremely sexy!! Love yall, Elaine

Chris S. (Rich): Like, hi, hon, what's going on, y'know? Why do I like you so much when you make fun of me constantly? Oh well. For some reason I'll miss you a lot next year but hopefully will see you frequently when Kelley and I get together to play our Jane's Addiction tapes. Love, Cindy

Jill my amazing assistant editor: We're going to have so much fun even though there aren't any guys in our department. Have a fantastic summer and write lots of reviews (just kidding!) Love, Elaine

Sahar: Wow, three personals in a single year! Life is wonderful. I know it wasn't always easy but I really am glad we roomed together. Come visit next year if you're uphii, and want to order some Super Fudge Chunk. The Fixx and Duran Duran was awesome (sounding like a sixth-grade groupie)! If you ever have insomnia I'll tell you how Brent's ghost story ended. Have an amazing summer, meet lots of men

Elaine and Jill- Good luck with Arts. I am sure that the two of you can make it better than it has ever been before. Just remember that, like the army, the Daily is a way of life--Yours in the Arts Junta, Ben

Steve: Congrats on being elected editor-in-chief. I'm looking forward to a great, exciting and fun semester at the Daily. By the way, RETURN FRED!!!! - Scott

Renee: I told you I'd send you one! Next year is going to be so much fun, and no, my Sisters of Mercy record really is on the right speed! Have fun at Dairy Queen and we'll probably run into each other sometime next year. Can I have some clams? Don't fall down. Love, Elaine

Heather, Caryn, Elisheva, Michelle, Pam, Vicki, Sharon, Jen, Jami, Alison, Mindy, Deb K., Deb L., Wendy, Ameer, and Lisa: You guys are so fantastic, and I'm so glad we all pledged together! Have a great summer and maybe sometime we'll get around to initiation. Love yall, Elaine

Lis: My best friend!!!! Yes you're in New York but I'm sending you this anyway 'cause you're so amazing and I love you so much. I will see you in like two weeks and I hope Marble Slab is open. Or maybe I'll just get vanilla in a cup. Thank you so much for helping me keep my head on reasonably straight. This summer is going to be so good (actually it'll probably get pretty boring but so it goes!) Punky Brewster forever (right-a-roo) I love you!! Elaine

Scott and Dave, NEWS FLASH!!!! I can't think of any two people I'd rather experience hell with than you two. I expect that next semester will be a joy. Let's not kill each other. Have a great summer. Love, Anna.

Kelley, I love you Kelley. Love, Anna.

Beth, I'll really miss you this summer. Have fun in New York but stay away from Joel Sunshine. When we get the NEWS VAN!!! we can run him over and fry his guts in the built-in microwave. Love, Anna.

joy joelle, Love, Anna.

Bob, Okaaaaiiiii. You're one of my favorite editors in the whole world. I'm glad you will be here next semester to champion the noble causes of truth and free speech and to shine the light leading all of us away from everlasting hell. Love, Anna.

Geoffie, I look forward to being creative with you next year. Maybe you'll be funny. Please be nice to me. Love, Anna.

Lauren, I'm eagerly anticipating many more Mugs and Chickens, or whatever. Only $3.50 all this month. Thanks for introducing me into the best department at the paper... where everything we do is boring and bogus. You're loads o' fun. Love, Anna.

Christopher L., I admire you intensely and I'll miss you most of all. Love, Anna.

RF, Roommate, WHHHHHHEN, I think about LEAVING. I think about LOOSING... please keep in touch. I'll miss our late-night vulgarity. You were an awesome RF. Love, Rick Astley

MARK, MAYER and MIKE: I hope by time you all read this personal, we will have signed (yeah right) a lease for the luxurious apartment that continues to evade our grasp. Well, there's always tents on Mayer's lawn. What I would give to have a grenade launcher in my hands... -Scott

HOWIE and STEVE and THE FLORIDA CREW: I had a great time in Boca with all of you. I have a lot of great memories of our trip. Let's do it again in the future. By the way Howie, look out for the F-18 Hornet flying in from east with a full load of napalm. "This is my call. Drop everything you've got on Howie's position. For the record, this is my call." -- Scott

ADAM: I've got a lot of good times to remember from our two years as roommates. But I hate writing these personals because they end up sounding so stupid and you can never say all you really want to. I hope we can keep our friendship alive over the years. I would hate to see it fade away like so many other friendships eventually do. Have a great time in Israel and England next year and keep in touch. Adios senior --Scott

ANNA and DAVE: I'm looking forward to a great semester with both of you. I think we can pull everything together and make it an awesome page. By the way, there's another symposium on the... - Scott

CHRIS B. and BOB G.: Thanks for all the help you given me down at the Daily this year. Both of you have taught me so much about writing and I'm very grateful. Bob, good luck next semester and Chris, have fun in Washington. -- Scott

SUITE 320's OF WREN HALL - OLIVER, DIMITRIOS, JOHN, JOHN, NILS, DAVID, MIKE and JUDD:

All you guys helped to make this an awesome year. We had a lot of good times together and let's make an effort not to lose touch next year. Remember those late night lists, movies and wing night, video games and just being lazy, talking and blowing off work. Later days -- Scott

Lauren Thank for x teaching me how to write the se stupid personals. Javier

Chris and Steve I still think it is in gaudy colors. Javier

Dave Just make sure you around next semester, somehow I think I might just need your help. Thank for everything. Javier Heather lets just keep my mother out of it shall we.

Elizabeth By the time you read this it will be out of date, already your bad cooking is out of date, and I always thought that would never get better. Prepare the cooker for " a la andaluza. Javier

Reda Kifak, were you expecting this? You may get more surprises so pick up the daily more often, and by the way let me know when we are going to party harty again. Javier

Beth and Markus Are we going to get on? Javier

Steve Keep the amount of articles down, lets face it what is the point of a newspaper. On a more serious note, lets make sure we maintain the current "writers" versus "business" relationships. javier

Meg, Peter, Paul, Mike, Lisa, Jane, Melissa thank you very much for everything, and I hope that those of you who can will come back next year. We will all be needing you, me in particular. Javier

Larry, Heather I can't wait, can you? Javier

Fred I miss you. Come back.

Kelley, As we look forward, and not back, I know that next year I'll have the best roommate(s) ever. Here's to the triplets from hell, to IHOP, to the TCU Senate and all its glories, to inbreeding, to Meatloaf, to Fairmont St., to some new house rules, to corrupting Beth, to Chinese food in Houston hall, to the E-I-C's office aka the Miller Hall bathroom, to indepe... auton... incorp... wait what do we say now? and most importantly here's to you. This paper would not be where it is today if it weren't for you. You made this year bearable, liveable, and even fun for me. All the times I wanted to bitch, you listened and understood. Thank /ou. Whatever you go for, you deserve it. Lauren

Beth, Him, her, it, them, things, that, they, stuff, ness, people, folks, other folks, and the deal. Some sheep, some pawns, and lots of evil plotting. You know what I mean, and thank god no one else does. Next year, roomie. Lauren

CLB, I'm trying not to get mushy in this personal, but its hard. In this past year, you have garnered more of my respect than anyone else on this campus. I'm grateful for all that you have taught me, which is probably more than you know. I'm still mad at you for abandoning us, though. It just won't be the same without you, so hurry back, and remember that you are missed somewhere, by some folks. With Love, Lauren

Curious Banana George, I keep dreaming of the day we'll all be in the news van, eating the news fruit. Maybe the Daily house will have to suffice. Don't stress, and if you do, call me and we'll go to the "yellow" egg again and eat some more Mug'n nuggets. We'll have to start compiling our list soon, but after we blow up those evil computers that hate you so much. On a sappy and serious note, I'll always be there if you ever get into a bind. Remember that every once in a while you have to step back and look at the big picture. You and I made a great team this semester. We'll have to have more lunches. Bam, Bam Bam. Lauren Bad Bobman, the filler editor: Its been one hell of a baby week, in more ways than one. More than anything else, I'm looking forward to the privilege of working under you next semester. If I act bitchy (which will be often) or confused (which will be more often), please be patient with me. Lauren, the domestic editor

Scott and David,
Thanks for making this semester such a success. If baby week's any indication, next semester will only get better. I'll do my best to find you guys some writers. Thanks for putting up with me, and for putting in so much time. The effort shows. Lauren

Geoffie,
Oops, I almost called you Steve. In the plan of plans, you're still slated in for Spring '90. Until then, keep smiling. Thanks for being a buddy. You should be damn proud of the page you've put together this semester. Keep up the good work. Lauren

Josh Fisher,
This past month hasn't been the same without you. The departure was understandable, but you were missed. You have to hang out with me this summer. I just realized that I'll never again just be walking along and all of a sudden have the safety shuttle pull up next to me and then be greeted by your smiling face. Therefore, we'll have to actually plan to bump into one another. Good luck at Columbia. I know you'll go far. I also just realized that I never got to hear you sing, and that this personal is getting extremely long. Keep in touch. Lauren

Matt,
When you're out in the real world, remember those of us who are back here suffering in Curtis Hall basement or wherever we are. You made this office lots o' fun. We'll miss you. Lauren

Denise,
Thanks for putting up with all the hell I put you through. I appreciate it. Don't be a stranger next year. Look, Davis Square is burning! Lauren

To David M. Gerstmann, the man, the myth, the business legend in his own time,
I have always felt that you are the most underappreciated, overdedicated person at the Daily, but don't think that your hard work has gone unnoticed. Thank you for making the Daily what it is today. You will not go unremembered, and we won't just remember the peanut butter personals, the lovely sweatpants, or your beautiful car and your great driving capabilities. By the way, I wrote a few more than ten personals. In fact I wrote 19. Sorry. Lauren

Mike Friedman,
Even though you never did my roommate justice, you're alright. Keep up the good work. Lauren

Greta and Elaine,
I can't wait to see what you guys do next semester. Congratulations on some great baby week papers. You're both amazing. If you ever need to talk, bitch, complain, consult or brainstorm, you can always come to me. Lauren

Jeff Cohen
Science page, what a concept

Karl
I love your box photos, keep it up

Jon
Thanks for coming up with some last minute photos for me

Ron
Watch your head

Heather
You have to come to IHOP next year

Ben, Colin, Rakesh, Laura, Margo, Bill, Steve
Good luck in whatever it is that goes on outside the Daily (is there such a thing?) and keep in touch.

Big guy,
Thanks for the late night talks in Metcalf. I'm looking forward to next year; we can do great things together. You'll always have my support. You're Welcome, and Thank You right back. Galunga

Kelley,
You made me so happy this semester. Although the summer will seem unbearable, I am looking forward to the fall when it will be just you and I. Oh, and Richard, of course. Chris

Mo & Denise,
You two were fantastic this semester. You have started the tradition and have turned the reins over to a quality crew. Too bad those bulk loaded condoms never arrived. Chris

Karl & Jon & Ron,
Thank God the Darkroom is finally back in the hands of men like it should be. You guys will do great next semester. Just make sure you know what to focus on at Senate meetings. Chris

Beth,
I can't tell you how amazing you were this semester. The Daily will need you even more with all your ambition. I am such a proud parent. Chris

Production,
You guys saved my life this semester. Every time I needed your help you were there and we put out some fantastic papers. Chris

News,
I will refrain from making any clueless news editor comments. You guys did a lot and you did it well. You will be even better next semester because then you'll have a staff (yeah, right!) Chris

To the men of 15 Lovell,
Here's to all the great times we'll have next semester. Chris

Exec Board,
Good Luck next semester. You have a tough act to follow but this is kind of old hat for you guys. Chris

Dave,
You are the strangest individual...organism I've ever run across. Thank you for taking so much shit from me (you did deserve it) this semester. Good luck in Women's Lingerie. Chris

Markus,
A fruit? No, No, you are most definitely not a fruit. A banana maybe, but not a fruit. Good Luck

Greta & Steve,
I'm glad you guys have finally met and are going to crank out Features next semester. Where's the pineapple? Chris

Elaine,
What's next, an interview with George Bush? Chris

Waldek,
You will always be the best Partner in Crime I could hope to have. It won't be the same without you. Actually, I'm not doing it either so I guess it won't be the same without us. Chris

To new Daily editors,
It's great to finally see the faces behind all the articles at long last. Get excited for a great fall and congrats on joining the best independent organization at Tufts. Chris

To old Daily editors,
Since I am trying to keep in the ballpark of our limits I will group you together and thank you for the time and energy you have put into the paper. It makes a difference. We have a lot to be proud of and can be even prouder of the people we have chosen to take our place. Chris

Javier,
They're towing your car. I swear. Chris

To the Tufts Community, Chris Ball has secretly been dating Anna George.

To the Observer, See you at Commence...see you next year. P.S. Bill Shapiro is a Production Manager. Control-F2 will SPELLCHECK your articles. Ever hear of Norton Utilities? How about selling ads?

Amy, Amy, Laura, and Michelle,
Hey, I'm psyched to work with all of you next semester! Amy, and Amy, you have had a great baby week and you'll be pagemaker goddesses by the time I'm done. You two are awesome. Michelle, welcome to the family. And Laura, I'm so glad you're coming back. Have a great summer everyone, I'll miss you. Love, Beth

Chris, Markus, and Jeff,
Thanks for putting up with me, guys. Markus, my baby, you are a god. Frisbee? Pineapple or orange, dear? We'll rock next year. Jeff, good luck with whatever you end up doing, and don't be a stranger. You have my complete respect for surviving production and 8:30's. Chris, well, I'm glad I'll be seeing you outside this place. Thanks for always being there when I was down. I couldn't ask for a better surrogate dad. Love, Beth

CLB,
No, I don't hate you. In fact, I'm going to miss you terribly next semester. Thanks for being such a help, for your patience, conversation, and for being a friend. Hurry back, and stay in touch. Love, Beth

Erica, Jen, Margo, Toni, and Danielle,
The end, huh? I'm already looking forward to senior year. And Hawaii, of course. Erica and Jen - you're the best neighbors I could ask for. Margo, you were a wonderful classifieds editor, have a blast in Ireland. Danielle, take care of yourself in London. I worry. I can't even begin in a personal. But you guys (yes, guys) know how much I love you. Take care. Love, Beth

Steve and Bob,
Inside Box? Filler? Menu? EDITORIAL??? Don't take my bitching the wrong way, Bob. It's all in good fun. Which I expect we'll have a lot of next semester. Relax this summer, and never pull an editorial again. Never (just joking). Steve, well, congratulations. Stuff. Take care, guys. Love, Beth

Kelley,
Next year, wench. Inbreeding. Yea. Meatloaf (not too much Les Miz or Carly Simon. I swear). The good times have only just begun. And they will be amazing. Hey, I'm kinda speechless. Oh well. Lame as usual. Love ya, hon. Love, Beth

Lauren,
Roommates at last. A house and everything. The future is bright. (Except for our MME final. If only she'd ask an essay on the daily. We'll make it, we always find some scheme). You are going to do great things next semester. Thanks for listening and well, everything. You are a goddess. Of everything. Enjoy the summer (and stuff). He, she, him, her, them, stuff. Love (a lot of that), Beth

Anna, Denise, Mo, Nicole, Joelle, Matt,
Anna- NEWS VAN!!!!!! A colossal creation. Photo gals, I don't see you nearly enough, but you are some of my favorite people. Blood, Denise, I fainted. Nice, huh. Nicole, I miss you. You sure have done an awesome job with Weekender. As I expected, you wonderful chica. Joelle, thanks for listening and always being there. Matt, good luck, and the Mets are #1. Love, Beth

Geoff,
Remember that my bitching is all in fun. I just wanted to say hi, take care, and get well. Love, Beth

People I forgot or didn't have enough personals to address personally,
This doesn't mean I love you any less. You're all wonderful. Take care, and enjoy your summers. Love, Beth the Production Bitch, who really means to be nice to all of you.

Dave,
I yelled a lot. You deserved it. You also deserve a nice life. Have one. Love, Beth

To Incoming Editors in General
I won't be here to harass, ridicule, and humor you. This is your loss. I know you will suffer terrible disappointment at not being able to meet me after my colleagues describe my numerous annoying habits and vexing idiosyncrasies to you in gory detail, with humorous asides and embarrassing photos for flavor. -- CLB

Markus:
Since I will not be here anymore it is important that you take up my most important function at this paper. The entire integrity and purpose of this institution depends on your successful execution of this task. You are the hair-apparent, and without your commitment, skill, and dedication this art will be lost and The Daily will suffer the consequences. Yes, Markus the honor, the privilege and the duty that every journalist, correspondent, editor, and production staffer aspires to. In my absence, you, Markus, must dance on tables for me. --CLB

New News Crew:
The front page is yours. I will of course be down where they make news. You might catch my name on the AP wire every once and a while. The whole campus is out there, and there are enough students, faculty, and administrators to libel, misrepresent, and misquote to your heart's content. Facts and integrity are nice, but it takes some good imagination to make a good news story. Don't give up on the imagination. You need vision if you want to get a job done. --CLB

Kelley:
Thanks for the leadership this semester. You turned the paper around. We have editorials and lots of other neat things now. Frequent IHOP runs and MAB meetings were lots of fun. Maybe I'll write you letters from Washington and you can read them to people, just like old times. -- CLB

Tetris
You are scum; you stupid, stupid, stupid game. All you do is waste time. Production doesn't produce; writers don't write; editor don't edit. They play you all the time. You will destroy this paper. Go away. Die. I hate you. -- Reversi

Bob
Hi, Bob. Let's write stupid personals. Let's write editorials. Let's have the ed board send them back to us. Let's not have an ed board. No policy about editorials. Let's have the CSL ed board. We write'm, we like'm, we run'em. Reflecting the majority of staff, bah humbug. Let's grab some carrots and be too literal-minded somewhere. Lose any appeals lately? -- CLB

Steve
Galunga some stuff with some 'ness. -- CLB

Beth
Could you tell Margo to lay put a space for ten personals from the ed board. We'll be having a meeting at 9 to vote on them. So go ahead and lay out the others. Unless you hear from Bob... -- CLB

Greta

To all my Primary Sourceerors from 8 to 16 in 7 months, not bad, but let's do better next year! We do things the right way. Martin

To The New Crew of Full Editors, Part I:
Markus, with those suspenders and constant mellow temperament, (hear that, Beth, mellow temperament) you'll help keep us all going. Food expert Dave Spielman, someone who is his own harshest critic, keep up that excitement level, it's great to see that glint in your eyes. Anna, OOOOOKAAAY, I'm glad we have this rapport about things and little things and weird hairdos at IHOP and pretentious musicians and those sort of things. I know all your hard work will come to fruition. Love, Bob

New Full Editors Crew, Part II:
Greta, you've been such a hard worker and so conscientious, I know features is cruising upwards. Elaine, I can already tell you're going to take Arts into the 90s and beyond. I hope I can help out and just yell at me if I start getting in the way. Ron, you're the best AP editor in the business. I mean that, Ron, and don't forget it. Love, Bob

New Crew Full Editors Crew, Part III:
Karl, you photo god, I know you've got tons of ideas for where you want photo to go and I know you'll accomplish them and still manage a decent GPA, unlike most of us. To Rothenstein and Moscow, hopefully we'll have some actually windows next year and I won't have to draw them. I just hope I can keep coming with E words to satisfy you, Dave. Javier, you've got some weird, twisted and worn shoes to fill. Love, Bob

To My Roommates:
Dave, Colin, Karl: Sorry I sucked you all in down here, it's just so I would get to see you more. We may be living in different places next year, Dave on College Ave, Me wherever the Daily is, Karl in the West darkroom, and Colin in Budapest, but we'll still be roommates in spirit. So don't eat my food. Love, Bob

To The New Folks:
Jill, Craig, Steve, Dave Saltzman, Amy, Amy, this place is pretty weird, but you probably know that already. I don't know what to say to all of you that won't make me sound pretentious and old, and I'm only a sophomore so I have no right to be pretentious or old. Anyway, welcome aboard. Love, Bob

To The Returning Heroes, Part I:
Beth Geller, I hope good, good things will happen and not bad things and no bad stuff. And hopefully, I can keep wandering into the production room and saying, "Oh, this has to come up, and so does this and so does this," and generally making your life hell. Scott, we all dig your bookswap and symposium beats and I hope we can share many a grape soda. Good luck with the whole housing deal. Doug Howell, keep telling me dumb jokes. It keeps me sane. Love, Bob

To The Returning Heroes, Part II:
Nicole, you're still a pretty funky gal, Nicole, and you're pretty weird too. Mo, it's nice you can kick back some next year and nice that you won't have to walk a mile to the campus. Too bad about the bum deal on housing. That's Tufts for you, huh? Geoff, stop attacking those arts writers. ("Whatever...") Also, keep an eye on that alter ego of yours. I think he thinks he's E-IN-C or something. ("Whatever...") Love, Bob

To The Departing Heroes, Part I:
Kelley, I still have the Joke sign. We accomplished a lot and even managed to survive Sussman. Dave Gerstmann, something must be going horribly wrong because I'm actually starting to laugh at your jokes and think you're funny. I respect you, but like everyone else, I refuse to admit it to you, especially in a personal. Finally, I have a feeling you may haunt us for years to come, so this is a temporary farewell.

To The Departing Heroes, Part II:
Ben, you persevered through more than a year as an Arts Editor and kept going strong. Now you can escape the wonderful, wonderful, wonderful art community. Chris Stevens, we're going to miss you, as you probably know, but we may not miss Richard, which you probably know. Love, Bob

To Matt:
Thanks for a fun dream, Matt. You've been extremely lucid all year, and as you've often noted, it's good to be lucid. There were also times when you were lucid. Yes, you would say, I AM LIVID. And many times, you were just plain DRUNK. When you weren't always so lucid. Love, Bob

To Joelle:
How's that cactus collection coming along? Maybe you need some new ones. Also, I think maybe there will be some good kite flying days soon. Love, Bob

To The Current Exec. Board:
Lauren and Steve: And then there were three. But that's okay. We'll just keep an eye on the single quotes. You know, Lauren, I wouldn't lie about something like single quotes. So Steve, ness and stuff and the deals and you know and some ness and that kind of thing. And chocolate pens. Love, Bob

To Chris Ball:
So, you're deserting me after all. Leaving me to fend for myself. Hmmp. We all know you'll be back, Chris. Returning after your semester in exile for more punishment. You must be insane, but that's okay. At least you're not subversive. Love, Bob

Lynn and Kim,
Thanks for putting up with me this semester (I know it hasn't been easy). Your friendships mean a lot to me, and I just wanted to make sure you knew that. Love, Stinky Pants

To All Editors and Business Staff of Spring '89,
This semester, The Tufts Daily looked the best it's ever looked. By capturing the "Triple Crown," you have helped the paper to live up to its motto of "Where you read it first." For those of you who are leaving, you can bask in the glory of a job well done. Those editors who are staying will carry on The Daily's tradition of excellence. I am very proud of all of you. Thanks for making this such a great semester. Kelley

Steve,
If there's anything I can do to help over the summer just let me know. Good luck next year. Kelley

Beth,
Well, I may no longer be E-i-C, but I'll always be your P-i-C. Next year is going to be awesome (as long as you don't play that Le Mis tape -- Meatloaf Rules). Thanks for everything hon. Love, The Wench

Lauren,
Congratulations Ms. Associate Editor. You are going to do an amazing job next semester (after all, you take after your roommate-to-be). Seriously, you've done a great job. I'm really looking forward to this summer. Love, Kelley

Chris B.,
Now The Daily really will have a Washington correspondent. Thanks for all your support this semester. We both know who was the brains behind the Exec. Board this semester, but we'll just keep that our little secret. Good luck next semester (not that you are going to need it). Kelley

Cindy,
We'll have to get together real soon for some hot cocoa with whipped topping. We also have to get ready for Sigma Epsilon Chi's Fall Rush. Seriously, you have done an amazing job this semester. Love, Kelley

Mo and Denise,
You truly are photo goddesses. Not only have you done an amazing job this year for The Daily, but you were both there for me in the clutch, and I can't begin to thank you enough. You are two very special people, and I wish you the best of luck next year. Love, Kelley

Bob,
You have done a great job this semester, and I'm sure the fall will be no different. I'll leave the joke sign with you (you never know when it might come in handy). Kelley

Dave G.,
Your dedication and enthusiasm have been unsurpassed over the course of these past two years. The Daily would not be where it is today if it weren't for you. You should take a lot of pride in a job very well done. Good luck in the future. Kelley

Scott, Anna and Dave,
You all really had your act together this semester. Not only did you have a department cheer "NEWS!" but you also had a department fruit, right Anna. Seriously, from trustee meetings to Senate elections, you guys were on top of everything. Keep up the good work. -Kelley

Matt,
Despite the fact that I can never forgive you for announcing to everyone in the office that I had dribbled Diet Coke that time freshman year, I'm really going to miss you next year. The Daily just won't be the same without Shapo-speak. Keep in touch! Love, Kelley

Waldek,
Although we've retired, we will always be the official Daily lusers. See you in the fall. Love, Kelley

Ben,
Well, we've made it through yet another thought-provoking class together. I don't know what I'll do next year without your help with the Jumble and crossword puzzle. I hope you have a great time next year. I'll miss you. Love, Kelley

Dave R.
I can't tell you what a great idea I think it was for you to move over to Op Ed, whoever came up with that one deserves a lot of credit. Seriously, it was great having you back this semester. Kelley

Dan,
I just wanted to let you know that since I am now a free agent, I will give serious considerations to all offers. You should be very proud of the job sports did this semester. Have a great summer. Kelley

Greta,
You have done an amazing job this semester. Now all we have to do is get you to go to IHOP one of these times. Good luck in the fall. Kelley

Geoff,
Although we didn't always see eye to eye this semester, I just wanted to let you know that you did a great job in sports, and you truly are an asset to the paper. Best of luck in the fall. Kelley

Julie,
This year has felt like a rollercoaster ride. No matter what, you were always there to listen to me spew. It was nice to have someone on the Exec Board to gossip with (Sorry, guys!) Best of luck in the future. Stay in touch. Love, Kelley

Chris,
Despite the fact that you are extremely dense and a computer geek, I never would have gotten through this year without you. Let's never forget: dead battery, vacuuming the office, measles, passing out, "you," roses, Fluh -- the drive, balloons, studying, Jeopardy, and cuddling to Days and Knots. I love you! Kelley

Dear Hotung Cafe-
You'll always be Ziggy's to me. -A Devotee

To My Bike:

Hey Azer:
You better do a good job next year. You wouldn't want to have your, you know, career interrupted, now, would you? -"Dean" Steve

Jeff Cohen:
SCIENCE PAGE??? SCIENCE PAGE????? Okay, sounds good to me. Gotta get up pretty early to beat Jeff Cohen, huh? I don't. -Steve

Kelley:
Wow, did you ever hit it right on the head. 5/6/88: "Of course, an over-time period is still a distinct possibility." Nice call. Please do football in the fall. And thanks -- honestly -- for a truly successful semester. I think you know that it was. Ha ha, you can't read this before it goes in. Or did you anyway? Good luck this summer, and thanks again for everything. -Steve

News:
Scooter, I promise you'll get Fred back before the summer. David, I promise that everything will be perfect next year. Anna, I promise that Ball will stay in Washington until December. I also promise that I'll read all your copy and make all your story suggestions and help you get all your staff. No, really. I'm serious. -Steve

Greta:
We'll move the Zenith, okay? It's gone. Don't even think about it. Staff? You want staff? There you go. All set. What else? You name it. Just say the word. I'm not looking to eager to please, am I? -Steve

Nicole:
Sorry I blew off your show. Sorry I ruined your last Weekender. Sorry I never visited you this year. Sorry I didn't have fifty cents once a long time ago. -Steve

Elaine:
Don't hate me because I'm beautiful. Hate me because I screw your page up, instead. Can I still keep my column? -Steve

Rothenstein:
Dudd (Make sign with fingers). -Ozzy

Chris Stevens:
You're a Daily lifer, man. Don't you ever forget that. -Steve

Christopher L. Ball:
Have a blast in DC, babe. We eagerly await your return. I'm just sub-letting this chair from you, anyway. -Steve

Wow, that's almost 35 words. Keep that "filler look" off your face and remember that without you, it doesn't work. Keep pushing me, even when it's no fun for either of us, and we'll make it. Okay? -Steve

Lauren:
So, like, you're sitting over there trying to finish your paper and you know I'm typing your personal and it sucks that this one has to be my lame personal but you know how I feel about you and you know that I know that you're going to do a fantastic job next year and you know plenty of other things too so let's leave it at that. -Steve

Ron Graber: You singlehandedly saved the Daily from almost-certain extinction this year. It is truly incomprehensible to comprehend how we might ever begin to repay you for your never-ending devotion and assistance to the paper. If I can be of any service to you at any time in the future, please let me know at your earliest convenience. Sincerely yours, Steve P.S. Watch out for that lamp, there, boy. P.P.S. AP looked like shit on Friday.

David M. Gerstmann: Well, you finally got rid of that 300-pound behemoth. The Senate deficit, I mean. Jon and I are real sorry about playing near those freshly-cleaned typewriters, too. No, in fact, we're not. I hate to say thanks to you for anything, but... thanks. Go away, but not too far. -Steve P.S. What's wrong with tarps, anyway? P.P.S. You're still sick.

Javier: I'll tell you everything next year. When's HE'S gone. -Steve

Turk: Okay, okay -- I'll buy you another pretty blue knife. No, you can't have that one. Geez. CRAZY MAN! Give me that Laramoon and come to jail! Lyin'-ass bitch. Don't ever not be you, you illegal alien with an unlaot. -His Cheesiness (a whole six-pack, even)

Beth: No, seriously. I was Genghis Khan. I was Aristophanes. Really. I was a guy named Urg in 50,000 B.C. You, however, were Rasputin. And all the chicks he had. Eleven o'clock? Yeah... right. It's going to rock in the fall. I promise. You know, I should write a book about my past lives... Soon as I finish the inside box. -Steve

To all the new folks (Jill, Craig, Stephen, Jena, Dave, Rob, Amy, Slash, Michelle, Ron, Stacey, Heather, Sandra): Welcome. The craziness has just begun. -Steve

To all the people I didn't get a chance to send personals to because we voted to keep the number of personals we could send to people at a ridiculously low figure:

Sorry. Thanks for all your dedication, time, and help. We couldn't have done it without any of you. Well, maybe Shapo. Maybe we could have done it without Shapo. Naaah. Take care. -Steve

Geoff "Winkie" "Donut" "Canseco's Hurt Ha Ha" Lepper:

For a Californian, man, you are the least laid-back person I have ever met. Or are you me? Are we, indeed, the same person? Whatever. Tune in next year and find out. Bo is Pez for 12 games. Dude. Imitation is the sincerest form of academic probation. Dude. Get psyched for next year. Dude. -Steve

Jon and Jonathan: Better late than never, huh? And now, the news. Galunga. Thanks for at least pretending to care this year. Let's do frisbee again soon. Real soon. Can I borrow money for gum? Hoogeta hoogeta hoogeta splash. Dick Van Dyke's footrest says hi. You guys sane keeps. -Steve

To all my friends and associates:

I really wanted to use my power and send you all FREE personals, but I didn't feel creative today, so please settle for this group one. Have a great summer! Love, Michelle

A FULL RETRACTION: Adam, we didn't really mean those digs on your sex life. Kisses, Michelle, Laura, Chris, and Beth

NO WINNER YET! There's still time to sign up for the "When Will He Lose It?" betting pool. Only $1!

Chris, Beth, Markus, Jeff, and everyone else who has the privilege to jab me with knives if I stayed too long and bothered you. Well all I can say is Wow (which is good for me) I hope that you continue to care as much about the ads as you do about things that really are important, like Steve's inside box. You were awesome and went beyond the call of duty many times. Markus, kisses for you, Chris (and Mode)--Sweet farewells, and Beth you weren't a B-- actually you never were, you were always really cute, nice, and a pleasure to be hit by. Good luck next year. Mr. G

PHOTO PEOPLE

Denise I'll ABSTAIN from saying bad things to you. You see I brought this down at 3:01 and Heather said she wouldn't accept it. In fact she said I did this every day this year and she refused to let me get away with it this last time. You were awesome and I'll miss your sense of humor at general drunken Daily get-togethers. Maureen, you're just too crazy. Waldek, did something happen to you in Poland. Did you drink some really outrid vodka or something? Anyway, at least the jumper cables work still. Mr. G

Nicola Being Aloof is better than being insane--ask my roommate. Severed What? G formerly Mr. G

Sports Guys

I'm so glad you decided to run the CD page next semester. In fact, why not run another raffle next year. Give all our computers to the student that can figure out the error in your entry form. Lepper, I found out that I got Tuberculosis from your many attempts at blowing spit in my face. Well actually the cleaners got it when they pressed my Lepper-soaked shirt. Actually I'm immune and you're going to die. Mr. G

Arts

Ben I forgot to tell you that you reformatted the registrar's computer when you installed your game on the Tufts Mainframe. The good news is she has a backup. The bad news is that you erased your own transcript and now are a freshman again. Don't worry everyone thinks your a freshman anyway. Colin is possessed by Lor the multi-colored fire-breathing slug and he is trying to suck the sludge off the bottom of my car. Gee, Elaine could you spill your Hot Cocoa on that voracious oat? You see, whipped topping is lethal to multi-colored, fire-breathing slugs and besides they were floating in your last cup. Mr. G

Steve Pressman I heard that you are relocating your office to the basement of Curtis Hall. You can't do this! That's my space. I miss Curtis and want to go back right NOW! You can take back my computers. I'll trade anything for that romantic stench that comes from the old Monsanto type-setting room. By the way, Safety removed all the Asbestos, but I saved you some. Hey we'll name it Hotung.

Your boss. News Folk. Testing, testing, testing, are you picking this up yet? Good. Here's the lead, Julian Barnes of the TCU Senate illegally invested funds in a Nicaraguan condom factory and has blatantly compromised our national security, and thousands of Communist babies will soon grow into the military machine which will take over the country. Apparently the name of the condom brand was Dudley's Dud. Their motto? Just because anyone else can do it right doesn't mean the Senate can't screw it up. G

Chris Ball Go on, ask him if his wife cleans Tilton. I know she does. He drops her off from the Lincoln every day and she walks back to her house. Something is strange though, whenever she sees a stuffed dog she takes out a Bowie knife and rips it apart saying "bad doggie, no no doo doo in Ziggies, um, ah Hotung Cafe." G

Bob Oh eat vegetables everyday. Everyone can't be totally open-minded anyway. I don't blame you for being a Carno-phobe. (Ed note: There was more here. Lots more. See Dave for details.) G

Clay

The number you have reached--629-9012 is not in service, please check the number and dial again. Heh, is that your American Express Card. No just the xerox you tried to pass off at the Bursars, AGAIN. Bad news, Linda Gabrielle says you have to go back to high school. You forgot to tag astronomy and a rules a rule. Wear your boots to Commencement, B & G says you can help manage the porto johns in back of Ballou. You're sick, really sick, deja vu. Me too. Harsh cookies tossed up tastes a lot better going down. So do hashbrowns and chili. Your Worst nightmare and associate, the ad count

Kelley Alesi What's red, fast and really dented in the rear. You guessed it--your car. I can have an estimate done. There's a real nice law office right near campus. There's no fee, no principles, and no precedent. Public defamation and violations of free speech are a specialty. Someone says if they're not good enough to fix your car, they are at least talented enough to wash it. I doubt it. --G Awesome job, incredible changes, and great accounting exams.

Danielle!! Alas, your plans of world conquest and a weekly LCS pull out centerfold are over. However, the Daily business department never would have grown without you. Your hard hours really made a difference and I couldn't have done it without your dedication and commitment. Good luck in Europe and don't step on any bombs. Mr. Gerstmann

David Gerstmann!! In anticipation that there will be many personal attacks by many loved ones at the Tufts Daily. I just want to tell you that you were awesome and everyone will miss you when you're gone. P.S Burn in Hell!!! My alter Ego

To DOUG And DOUG Awesome job this year. I mean there were a lot less typos. You no wait eye meen? Doug, (you know which one) Thanks for all the hard work doing payroll and Lotus. Things would have been very difficult without your hard work and really strange sense of humor. Oh yeah, the mail too. So long and good luck at Buckingham Browne & Nichols. If you ever see Mr. Jones, tell him I died eating fish sticks at the CLAM SHACK. Mr. Gerstmann

AARON!! Ya man, where's the wordperfect. That shit is really good stuff. Dip it in spellcheck and have it search out reality and replace it with lots of spaces, big spaces, so big you can't here yourself scream. Good luck next year and don't wander too far away from the Model 70. Its 120 Megabyte drive gets REALLY HARD when you give it the Norton treatment. I think it loves you. Mr. Gerstmann

Margo and Laura Classifieds got really high tech and you never complained. Gee I thought it was a fact of nature that classifieds editors and me were not meant to carry on communication that didn't have something to do with subscriptions. Well, the good news is that Steve vetoed my motion to run the classifieds in point size 2. The bad news is that Javier will never know what an asset you guys were for the department; well at least until I tell him profusely. Bye! Mr. Gerstmann

TO THE TUFTS COMMUNITY I hereby declare that I am violating the Tufts Daily personal preamble by exceeding my unalienable right to 10 personals. I apologize for taking up so much space. However, not only are my ads paying for this space, but I have over $25,000 in cold cash and I won't deposit it if a single personal is cut. Steve, I MEAN it. Mr. G (Gerstmann)

Dave: Try me. -Steve

Heather!!! Yo Yo WHERE did you leave yesterday's classifieds receipts? I checked all the desks in the business office. All I could find is a bunch of cash filled brown paper bags. By the way the TCU treasury office wants your phone number. Good luck next year. Do everything I taught you, but don't fight with Larry all the time. Just punch him once a week. Mr. Gerstmann

Sandra Giordano!! Where is my check? You know which one! I went to Disney world and reviewed it for the Weekender. Ask Nicole. It's only $1500. TCU treasury procedures only require a signature if the amount is over $2000. Just use the xerox of my Minnie Mouse ears as a receipt. Those guys in the Treasury office will accept it, count on it. Have a great time next year and get MORE SLEEP! Mr. Gerstmann

TO THE DAILY OFFICE STAFF MEG, LISA, JANE, MIKE, PETER, MELLISSA, PAUL, and even Mr. Graham Edwards!!

You are the reason why the Tufts Daily Business Department brought in over $175,000 this year. It was great working with you, and you really made my final year at the paper a great one. I would have been dead long ago if it wasn't for your long hard hours (often at my asking). I'll stop by next year and see all of you at the paper I'm sure. Lisa and Jane will be far, far away for a while but will be returning too. I better not come in and find any of you reading the comics or homework. Javier assures me that he is going to work you till you drop. Good Luck! I'll miss all of you. Mr. Gerstmann

Features Don't worry I just traded some old Observers for another Zenith!! But this is the super duper Turbo sport. It does nothing Free! It comes with a clannet instead of a keyboard so as long as you know all the keys you'll be fine. G

Oped Three days in a row? You want to go three days in a row next year? Try being regular three days in a row. The plight of the retired in this country has been ignored and your page has blatantly ignored this travesty. Your cartoon entitled, "Old man shitting on an astronomy book" highlights the sad situation that many of our older citizens undergo, but you propose no solutions. Prunes, bran, and Palmolive enemas might do the trick, but caution your loyal readers to avoid Metamucil. This capitalistic money monger markets their product in South Africa and any company that relieves the plugged agony of the white ruling class isn't good enough for the toilet drains in Curtis.

Larry!! I have really high hopes for you. Too bad this involves a lot of drugs on my part. Ha Ha. You really worked harder than I would have expected anyone besides myself (yes you already know how concated I am) Don't let me down next year. You know, like becoming honest or something sick like that. Remember to do special favors for someone with a lot of money. Make sure to screw over anyone asking for charity. They won't expect you to. That's where the fun comes in! Mr. Gerstmann

Javier!! HO HO HO HO HO HO HO (i.e. lots of laughter on my part) What a fool are you! Just think what will happen to you next year as EXECUTIVE BUSINESS DIRECTOR OF THE TUFTS DAILY. You will become a slob. Suddenly all the paint will peel off your car and the muffler will drop. Of course your girlfriend will dump you and your GPA will dive faster than the Hindenburg. But heh, at least Deans and people in the administration who make more than most professors do in an entire lifetime will call you by your first name and ask for really stupid favors. Who knows maybe they might even know how to spell your name too. Good luck next year and don't misspell Hotung again. H-O-T-U-N-G, not Z-I-G-G-Y-S. Mr. Gerstmann

Laura and Michelle You are total goddesses. Bless you both. Us.

Steve It's been a tremendous year, in our palace in the gutter (so that's where our minds have been the past year!) Who gets the archives? I'm sure I'll see you next year. I'll probably bunk in your room until I find an apartment. -Howard P.S. tequilla!

Scott Phttoowah! This is actually a bomb, you're blown up, but you keep coming back! Remember, the rest of us just sit in the middle and.... "On my position, it's my call." Remember Florida. You're still dead. Love and Explosives, Howie P.S. you suck

To:Kim, Alex, Mel, Maria, Lara, Jill, and everyone else:

Two hearts? Maria, show me your hand. Mel, I got my hat. Alex, we really are twins, except I actually liked Alien Nation. Kim, I really don't cheat. Everyone else, it's been a slice. Love, Jill's roommate's roommate

Marcia You're a wonderful person and I'm not afraid to say it.

Mala I really came over to see you. You're neat. Love to both of you, Howard

Michelle See? I Didn't forget to give to a personal. It's because I really (and I mean really) love you from the bottom of my cash drawer (which is, by the way, where a lot of money is). Just in case the auditors want to know. -Piggy

This Will Be The Longest personal in Daily history. Simply because it's 1:40 last night, and we haven't filled the personals page yet. But it's okay, because many people really haven't heard of the entire history of the Daily, which goes something like this: About ten years ago (eleven, to be exact), some folks around campus decided that one weekly paper wasn't enough for this bustling metropolis of a campus. So they decided to publish a small Xeroxed list of things that were going on that day -- parties (that, of course, was back when they were legal), events, speakers, classes, and stuff like that. It was called Today Tufts, and it was started in 1977 (Honest!) Well, after a few years of that, those same folks (I think) decided that they'd go for the big time. It might have been other people. I'm not exactly sure. So, anyway, the Tufts Daily was born in 1980. Then I lose track of a few years. Until about 1985 or so, when Jon and Jonathan were freshmen. This is where we enter the Modern Era of the Tufts Daily. We had editors-in-chief such as Barri Hope Gordon, Andy Feinberg, David J. Kramer, and then (this is where I come into the picture) there was the incomparable Michael Epstein. Michael (God bless his Yale Law School soul!) was editor-in-chief for TWO whole semesters. TWO whole semesters. That's a really whole lot of time. Anyway, under Mike the paper got big and did a lot of good things.

Are you still with me? Good. Well, then came the advent of the Moron Era at the Tufts Daily. It all started with the Executive Board of Jon, Steve, and Jonathan. Some say the paper has yet to recover from this time. Others say galunga. Either way. We got some hot new sexy computers called the Intrepids that were supposed to help us with our production of the paper, but they were an abysmal failure. Yup, they really blew. Must have been a test model or something like that. But anyway, Jonathan took over next (and Steve went on academic probation). And Jonathan was the Lord. Sorry if that offends any of you Lord fans out there, but it's true. The paper had this renewed sense of some moral 'ness, and it was out early, too. The Moron Era ended abruptly, however, when Julie became editor-in-chief this fall. Julie was, decidedly, not a moron. She was, in fact, a stabilizing factor in our Daily lives. And then Kelley took over and-- but you can read all the personals from there on in. Well, that's it. Daily history. That's my job. Have an amazing summer. I love you all. -Steve

We have a unique opportunity for someone very special. A chance to spend two years in another country. To live and work in another culture. To learn a new language and acquire new skills. The person we're looking for might be a farmer, a for-ester, or a retired nurse. Or maybe a teacher, a mechanic, or a recent college graduate. We need someone to join over 5,000 people already working in 60 developing countries around the world. To help people live better lives. We need someone special. And we ask a lot. But only because so much is needed. If this sounds interesting to you, maybe you're the person we're looking for. A Peace Corps volunteer. Find out at (Collect) 617-565-5555 x598. PeaceCorps. Ode to

"Shari Friedman", "Phyllis Deery", "Marybeth Martin"

The tricaptains of the 88-89 WTrack team can't be beat. With 2 winning seasons in the best sport on two feet. Runners, throwers and jumpers the same. All thank you for leading them to national fame.

Third in Div. III Nationals, with 6 qualifiers to boot. Can anyone stop us? The question is moot. Indoors and outdoors, our hard work has shown through. With 3 captains dependable...like a training shoe. Lord knows we have been through it all.

Snowstorms, team-bonding, and Shari's Fall. Phyllis, our star Klutz, has been a bright spot. Survived the year with just 1 trip to a hospital cot. She, our Key multieventer and pentathlete, averages just 10 events each Saturday's meet. Shari, we missed you in the hurdles and sprints.

But thanks for your managerial duties and operatic stunts. For these 2 captains we must have a great sigh. For we almost lost them coming from WPI.

In a Free-wheelin' van on Route 128's heart. With Bran at the wheel- it was not good from the start. Marybeth, affectionately known on the team as MB. Is our dedicated distance queen and lawyer-to-be. MB is a role model to whom we look high.

With a warm, friendly smile she will always run by. Into this tale must be made an incision. To mention the great skill known as "tunnelvision". To aid our sprinters we've hired a scout.

To find those that run in and never come out. Our versatile team has singers, actresses, and knitters. Not to mention all doubling as Akila's babysitters.

There are many a crash with which we've been coping. As a result from our Men's-team scoring. "Juggernaut" was the nickname bestowed upon the team. We are the unstoppable Force, or so it would seem.

With an unstained record, both indoors and out. The Jumbo women have earned their well-deserved clout. Although this anecdote may seem rather silly. Tufts should be briefed about MB, Shari, and Pocahilly.

Our gift to the captains was this tale to tell. With that Best Wishes and a Hearty Farewell! We love y'all! -your W-trackies

Personals

TIGER AND PANDA Thanks for a great semester. We were right -- we didn't get a s... thing done! I love you --K.

Eta You're great. I guess I'll just have to come to London for tea. I can't do without them. Who else can I talk/argue/gossip/listen to music/watch Guiding Light with? No one else. You're wonderful. Love, Your tea buddy.

To the Almighty One Well, one year gone, any wise words? You socialist pinko commie. Let's go get some Licks-chocolate on chocolate if I remember. Vanilla for me-surprise, surprise. You're great, but you know that. It's been a bestest year. - the ever wrong one

To All Daily Folk: I'm sorry I didn't get my personals in on time. That means I only get one. So I'll be quick and come: You're all awesome and whatever you're doing next semester - GOOD LUCK Lovey Dovey, Nicole

To My Downhill Friends: Liz, Adrienne, Sean, Jesse, Mitch and Greg (I know you live uphill) and everyone else that made second semester so memorable. The talent show was a lot of fun. See ya this summer (we live to close not to stay in touch) I love you all! Erika

Christina and Mark- it's been real: the crack, the risk, the annoying...s of west and the makeovers! Keep in touch over the summer. Love, Erika the Crack Fiend

Dear Pinky, Lee, Karen, Laren, Day-Day, Milobskylox, Eden, Josh, You guys are the best. I love you. Have a great summer. Amy

Eric Brown- the bones will always be Bones no matter where we are, no matter who we marry. 5 years of Bone mischief- Dave, Brian, and Ted's sister may carry on. Love, you favorite Bonette!

HEAT MISER Congratulations on your Graduation! I know you're going to succeed in the real world because you're amazing! Don't worry- just have fun. I love you tons and tons...Your favorite sophomore

Mr. and Mrs. Zwill-Breiter Thank for a great year. I'll miss you guys, but I won't miss duck jokes. Washington and graduating are for lovers w/o a cause. -Love (and I don't use that word loosely) Ken Doggie

Delt Seniors '89 Bubby, Fotis, Ed, Dave, Steve, Rich, JB, Bri, Bartlett, PBA, Pinto, Micky, Bill, Brad, George, TK, Smokey, Bam, Cubby, Waldo, Brooks, Bryan, Goldberg- Good luck brothers (I'm lame if I forgot anyone) Sulu

To my other six halves- KN, ER, MP, JO, DK, and CL- Let's just say thank PASTA we made it! Love always, Jane

On Wednesday, the 26th, I lost a special gift the first tie pin given to me by my father seven years ago. I thought it was lost forever. Fortunately, it was found on Thursday, the 27th. I would like to thank the Tufts police and security guards for being so compassionate and understanding in helping me search for this irreplaceable memento. -Gary Holness

Dara and Sharon- living with you has been an interesting experience. I'll miss you. Love, Surekha

To my tolerant roommate, JM- Roses are red; Violets are blue; If you're not here next year; I'll sure miss you; Good luck next year! Love- JG

Beth- too bad you became a classics major, not that classics majors in any way are bad or anything, but now you're not an english one. I don't think we have any classes together next semester, so maybe we should have lunch sometime. Love you, j.b.

Elaïne- the biggest sweetheart around. Thank goodness that the "junta" is gone. Now you can choose the band of the semester, or month, or week or, big kiss. J.B.

Bob- you're a peach. J.B.

Anna- May you always find breakfast in unknown cities, use phones in posh hotels and find the letter to the word "xana-". Las suces estan en el cielo. J.B.

Amy B- Congratulations, you survived a year of Tuftsdom- three to go. I'm glad you've been here- see ya in good old Bala Cynwyd- Kim

Janet, Ginnie, & KT, soon the ocean breezes will blow away any memories of Tufts still locked in our bettered psyches. Get ready to dance on teh sand and watch the sun play on the waves! Cape Cod will never be the same. Lisa

Mary E. Silvernale 1: "blonde" roommates with many boyfriends; 2: oblivion, Florida, SEATTLE; 3: Powderhouse-gumbe and flamingos, England, Jess, and Alex- oh boy; 4: Where's Amy? Now: Graduation, yeah!! Mamy Silvark? 4 years survived- AMES

To my two Moms, Thanks for adopting and taking care of me. Shelly- I'm sorry about your suitcase. Marny- Sorry about your sheets and pillow. -Please come visit me after the divorce. -Baluga

Clara Lajuncheve, Thank you for the talks, advice, time and fun you've given to so many people this year. You have never let anyone down. Clara, you are a very special person- Never forget it. Good luck on your finals. - a friend

Marny, You've been a wonderful roommate. I'll miss you a lot next year (along with your clothes). No more Iowa Central- We'll have to improvise I guess! Shelly Greta- Best o'luck next semester. You're one heck of an editor. Joy to you. J.B.

Jen, Jon, and MOOCOO- Whatsa matter, this continent isn't good enough for you? DON'T LEAVE! Who is gonna dance for me, counsel me, tease me and play with my food? I'll miss you cooky people- I love you, Kim

Manna, Michelle, Simone and best roomie logarty- let's hear it for the coolest floor in Carmichael- We've had fun, haven't we? Have a great summer, you hot chicks. See ya downhill- Kim

The Editing Wizards Rendi where are you from? Massachusetts Michigan? You guys are great! Congratulations on your respective honors in community service and fencing. Good luck on your finals! The scrambler is awesome! Love, Me

Tania, Here's to a great year! Can you believe we're going to be seniors? I can't wait 'til next year! Have a great summer! I'll miss you! Love, Mel KIMBER- I'm going to miss vegetable medleys and randomness this summer, but you know we'll definitely slumber! Good call, huh? Party across the bridge! Get psyched! Love ya-Lori

Mindy, Watch out New York, here comes Ms. Bangor! I'm going to miss you so much this summer- we're gonna have some SCARY phone bills! Love ya- Lori

Diane, I'm too excited for living together next year, finishing your book of songs, and most of all, going to tavern with Max! Summer in NY will be too awesome! Love, Lori

Erika Royal: Thanks for a year full of cookies, cutdowns, cool words, and credit cards. Keep in touch over the summer! I'll miss you, you crazy woman. Peace! -Christina

Rasputin: I can't tell you how much you mean to me and how much I'm going to miss you this summer. Connecticut will be...exciting! Shoulder pad-220's, humm?- what can I say? I love you! -Your goddess

532 Wren! From orientation on, this year has been the best! Have amazing summers and keep in touch. (can't talk doesn't mean can't write!!) Come look for my tent on the quad in September. "The Bongo Board Queen"

SNUFFY- Freshman year was a rough start for all involved, this year was great, and this summer will be AMAZING! Just remember- the best is yet to come! I love you, Fozzie

DITZI! I can't believe you're going to Mexico! What am I going to do when I have nervous breakdowns at 2:30am? Oh well, I guess that's always Spring Break or letters(?) HA! I love you, Cheeks

202 and 203 E Metcalf Dudes, Thanks for a great year! How am I going to survive the summer without my four crazy friends? Love You Marz

Mike From Odysseus to Willy Loman, from M+E to AEPi, it's been a great year! Keep it together, will ya! Take care, Martin

To all of y'all: "Achtung!" "Hellooo" and "Kin-deel!" Mike, Dave Debbie, Denise, 210's Wren, Greta, Maria, Pattie, Kori, Johnny, Marilyn, Calines, Loren, Mike, Campus Centerers, assorted "Sourceers", and everybody else: Great Summer! Martin

To my Uphill friends: Marlona (the fake Puerta Rican, could you dis a few more men this year?) Seth-(You've got great glades, a great summer job, you're great.) Rene (you can't use toothpaste as birth control, and you can't brush your teeth with a condom). I love you all! Erika!

A LEOMINSTER GIRL WANTS TO SAY GOODBYE She wouldn't leave without saying goodbye to all of my "random" senior friends, good luck on your post Tufts endeavors! To Kirsten, my favorite "ex", and Jess, Sean C., Diana, all of the Jeff's in my collection, Dena, and of course Stacy, California Daren and HP; I'll miss you all but the "Zoo's" only a short 2 hours away! Thanks for everything these past 2 year! Just do me a favor future Conwellites- make sure your couch is long enough! Love, Deb

Ted Willson: 2 L's in Galipoli and Willson. Good luck on you last semester- no throwing of books allowed- stop cleaning and fixing your bicycle, it won't improve your chances- just kidding!- Ames

Michael Switow- I don't know, did I ever get laid on my birthday? Do I look better dressed, or not?! No comment! Ames

To 185 College Ave and Melinda, Thanks for making my junior year incredible, I will miss 185 next year. Hsula

To 10 Powder House: It has been a great year hanging out with you. You are a great group of guys. Have a terrific summer. Julia Childs

Sal- I wonder, Do you? The summer's a long time. -Not Tom

Steph, It was great rooming with you, most of the time. Sorry, but you'll have to find someone else to tease for the next three months. I'll miss the L stories. Spud

Leslie, Julie, Jen- Well, one more year is coming to an end- we're gettin' damn old, girls! It's been an incredible year (truly unbelievable) and this summer's gonna be a blast. I love you guys! llyssa

MacSpeak.

Q: "How has your Macintosh computer helped you here at Tufts?"

Kevin Kelly. Engineering '90

"I love using the Mac but so do all my house mates!"

Kristi Rossomando. Pre-Med '91

"For papers you can't beat the Mac with its extensive collection of typefaces and versatile word processors. I think that teachers can't help but give you a good grade for stuff that looks this good!"

Vincenzo Dinatale. Engineering '91

"I use the Mac all the time for engineering labs, problem sets, and projects. I feel that the SE/30 is the fastest computer around!"

Laura Riechers. Economics '89

"I started using the Mac my junior year. I don't know how I got through my first two years without it!"

From the beginning, Macintosh-with its graphics-based user interface and intuitive operation-was designed to work the way students work. Because we wanted to make it easier for people to use a personal computer than not to use a personal computer.

That way of thinking prevails to this day. Today Apple® Macintosh computers are more powerful than ever before. But for all that newfound power, the original character of Macintosh has not been lost.

® The power to be your best.™
