Senate Approves Referendum For New Student Government

by Anthony Everett

The TCU Senate approved the wording of Ken Beck's referendum for constitutional reform and supported the Fincom recommendations for financial allocations to various student organizations at their meeting Sunday night.

A week ago Ken Beck presented the Senate with a referendum calling for the dissolution of the Senate in favor of a new form of student government under a new constitution. Before this referendum could be submitted to the students for signatures, however, the Senate had to approve its wording.

At this week's meeting Seth Godin, Parliamentarian for the Senate, motioned that the Senate approve the wording of the document but that a copy of the proposed new constitution be attached to the referendum and readily available to the students. The motion was passed, and the issue will soon be presented to the Tufts community.

Treasurer Pedro Williams reviewed FinCom's recommendations for the allocation of student funds: the Running Club—$260, the Tufts Council on International Affairs (TCIA)—$200, Tufts Underground Music Society—$75, The Senate—$1300 (to be used for reinstatement of the shuttle bus), and a loan of $540 to Tufts Sound Systems.

There was some debate over whether or not the TCIA should be funded since it is a half credit university course as opposed to a student organization. However, since the TCIA requested $750 but was only allocated $200, the majority of the Senate felt the money was fairly dispersed and approved the recommendation.

Chairman Phil Swain announced the formation of a campus center committee composed of student, faculty and administration, to keep students informed about the progress of the facility and to develop

LATIN WAY HAS RECEPTION

President Jean Mayer greeted students and area residents alike at a reception for the new Latin Way dormitory on Sunday afternoon. According to dorm secretary Mike D'Agastino, the reception was held in a large part to placate the irate Somerville residents who live across the street from the dorm. D'Agastino explained that "people were upset at the prospect of facing a dorm, when they previously had lived near an open field."

Greek System at Tufts: Alive and Well

by Stephen Monick

The image of fraternities as places of huge parties, violence, bad grades and rush week is alive and well in the eyes of many Tufts students. But the advent of civil-minded, organized groups of people can be seen in the milieu of traditional craziness.

In the '60's and early '70's, the days of anti-establishment, the fraternity system was in many ways on the edge of existence. The organized system was shunned to the point where a frat of fifty brothers shrunk to eight or twelve. Alpha Tau Omega lost its membership because of a lack of funds. Fraternities would pledge anyone with even the slightest interest, therefore losing much of the unity and commitment needed to maintain the system.

The status and membership of many frats is on the upswing. Larger parties such as the latest DTD band party, appeal to many, and help maintain an active social life on campus. Sigma Nu has a policy of civil responsibility, taking a large part in Kids Day and sponsoring a Dance Marathon for the cancer drive every year.

Rushing and rush week is unique to each fraternity. A frat may hold a small closed party for rushees, thus get to know the freshmen and potential brothers. Closed parties, such as the Sigma Nu toga party Saturday night, can have better organization and more of a theme than the large all-campus variety. DTD has tie and jacket dated dinners for potential pledges and rushees, along with Thursday night cocktails.

November 1 is the earliest a rushee may be pledged. "The IFC (Inter Fraternity Council) outlaws hazing whatsoever; we try to maintain an atmosphere of friendly competition so our pledges can get to know one another," says Gregg Bertonazzi, steward and president of DU. Each frat has a pledge manual and instruction for pledges on fraternity background.

Competition between frats is dwindling in that the tension that has been known to exist has eased. Disagreements, such as egged houses and general destruction, are taken to the Committee on Student

Bureaucracies Trouble Student

To the Editor:

Many students who graduate from Tufts feel relieved that they will never again have to deal with the bureaucratic inefficiencies that exist here. One of the foremost criticized offices is the Bursar's Office.

In order to receive a reimbursement one must fill out a form and wait two weeks for the computer to issue a check. I did just that two weeks ago last Friday, but when I arrived at the familiar window in the basement of Eaton Hall there was no check awaiting me. In fact, I was told that the computer had no record of my registration charges for the semester. I was sent over to Dean Milburn's office to straighten out the matter. There I was told that the Bursar's office was sending students to the wrong dean. Next stop: Dean Solomon's office. There I learned that I had been confused with a student who graduated last May whose name only slightly differs from mine. The registration error occurred because only names, not I.D. numbers, are used by the Dean's office.

with explanations made, the computer told me that I was indeed here and registered; that is, the other student graduated not me. Did I get my check now? I can go back on Wednesday for it (the computer only issues checks on Wednesdays and Fridays).

Several questions are to be raised here: Why did Tufts accept my tuition payment if the Dean's office had not registered me? Why was I allowed to register for courses if I wasn't financially registered on the computer? Why didn't the Bursar's office call me (my number was on the refund form) when they discovered a discrepancy? Why, after three weeks of school, was the Bursar's office sending students to the wrong dean? And, when will any of these bureaucratic problems be solved?

Women's Volleyball Takes Two

by Kelly Peake

The Women's Volleyball Club ended its first week of fall competition undefeated; with a 2-0 record. Their opponents included a highly skilled team from Harvard University and W.P.I. at home on September 25.

"Harvard is not a team I prefer to open any season against," said coach Shelly Cole. "They're always good." Indeed, Harvard took an early 13-5 lead in the match's first game, forcing Tufts to rally for the win. Aggressive net play from returning players Stephanie Shepherd and Maria Cahill with help from freshman Deni Hopson provided the spark for the first game's come-back victory. Harvard never challenged Tufts again, losing the second game 15-6. "I think it's unfair just to recognize a few players as contributing the most to this victory. The only outstanding player was the entire team," noted Cole.

The women played their only home game of the fall against W.P.I. The seventy-five spectators watched Tufts sweep the match 3-0 in only an hour and twenty minutes. "I think it was really good for us to have this home game," said captain Wendy Weiss. "It was good for the team to have to concentrate with fans around, and playing at home gave us good exposure. Now people know that we're a competitive club." Cole noted that she was pleased with the team's playing, but that the real test will come if the team ever loses its first game.

Life where local inter-fraternity problems are solved. Although the more violent competitions have been resolved, an innate rivalry remains which inhibits inter-fraternity cooperation in areas such as planning parties.

To the newly admitted brother, the fraternity poses benefits and problems. One has access to a kitchen 24 hours a day, better living conditions and more privacy. One is living in a house of people who have chosen to live together and, therefore, the atmosphere is open, friendly and secure. "Everyone belongs to a committee in this house, everyone helps to run the place. They may be on any of a number of committees," said McNary. Frats, however, are a commitment and one must be prepared to eat and spend a considerable amount of time at the house. The fact that some people are chosen over others to join a frat is a negative aspect to those who merely dislike such social competition.

Houses such as ATO and Newman House, are alternatives which blend both frat and dorm life. These maintain the hierarchical systems and organizations of a fraternity, but are coed and do not belong to a national fraternity. ATO was a frat which went under due to a lack of membership. It became an open house yet was still ATO assisted and owned. ATO and others have boomed incredibly since the early '70's, becoming a very popular alternative to dorm or fraternity life.
